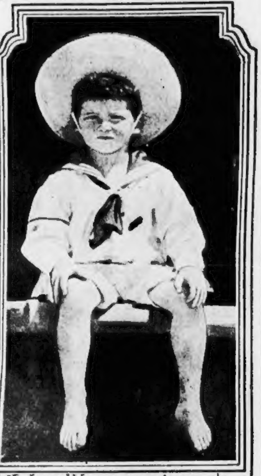
POOR LITTLE WILLIE VANDERBILT!

"Where's your Papa?" Asked Little Cousin Kathleen of Alfred Vanderbilt's Deserted Son. "Don't Uncle Alfred ever bring you things and Play with you like my Papa does every single day?"



"WILLIE" VANDERBILT, ALFRED'S UNHAPPY LITTLE BOY.

WHEN Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt hurriedly left America after being served with papers in his wife's suit for divorce, he did not say good-by to his little son—his only child, and namesake of his famous grandfather, William H.

The little boy wept bitterly when he found that his father had gone away without bidding him good-by. He is six years old, and very delicate and sensitive, and he had already noticed that he did not receive as much attention from his father as it is customary for little boys to receive, even in the fashionable set.

"Poor little Willie!" is a common remark among all good-hearted persons who are familiar with the circumstances of this divorce case.

During the past two years little Willie has only seen his father twice. A friend of the family relates that the boy kept asking when he was going to see his father again, and at last when the separation between his parents became final, he was told that he would not see him for a very long time.

"Why?" he asked.

"Because papa is going abroad."

"Can't I go abroad with papa?"

"No; little boys can't go abroad with their papas."

"I know boys that go abroad with their papas. Can't I go and see him on the steamship? Lots of boys do that."

The answers he received, as so often happens in the case of children's personal questions, were unsatisfactory. He went away hurt and aggrieved, and the first sympathetic person he found to whom he could pour out his confidences and his sorrows was his baby cousin, Kathleen Vanderbilt, who is five years old. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt.

"Where's your papa?" asked this little Kathleen Vanderbilt of Alfred Vanderbilt's deserted son. "Don't Uncle Alfred ever bring you things and play with you like my papa does every single day?"

He put his head on her shoulder and sobbed out his grief to her about his father going away without saying good-by to him. She tried to comfort him, and said with her pretty lisp:

"Don't cry, Willie! My papa's a good one. He will look after oo, too."

The little girl was very successful in consoling her

How Pastor Thomson Confessed by Suicide a Life-Secret Like That Which Pastor Dimmesdale, of Hawthorne's Great Novel, Confessed Upon the Scaffold.

"Was ever a clergyman, beloved and trusted by his flock, so beset? Never—yes, in fiction, there was the Rev. Arthur Dimmesdale, a good man, but for one fatal step, a most godly man. A hero, who, at the end, mounted the scaffold, and, in the presence of all his flock, stood beside the woman, who, for him, had worn in silence the Scarlet Letter of shame; who now confessed that the shame was his as much as hers—and showed upon the flesh over his heart the same symbol which he had placed there and worn secretly all these years."

"Was it in him, the Rev. George W. Tomson, to do as the 'Scarlet Letter' hero, the Rev. Arthur Dimmesdale, had done—publicly place himself at the side of the woman in confession that her accusation was true? That was the act of a hero. It had brought the Rev. Arthur Dimmesdale to his last breath. It was death, that confession!

"There was a revolver in the pastor's hand. Now he realized that he had strength for but one kind of confession. He pointed the muzzle at his temple and fired. The explosion extinguished the lamp. The pastor's lifeless body fell to the floor beside his bed."

If "suicide is confession," it is hardly possible to think of the late Rev. George W. Tomson, of Woodbury, N. J., without recalling the Rev. Arthur Dimmesdale, hero of the greatest of classic romances in the English language—Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter."

The discrepancies in detail do not affect the moral parallel. They are due to the wide differences in period, manners and laws. If suicide is confession, the Rev. George Tomson is the Rev. Arthur Dimmesdale of more than two centuries later.

Two centuries later there is no such legal penalty as the Scarlet Letter—except in metaphor. But metaphorically, that symbol threatened the breast, not merely of the woman who had sinned, but of the clergyman who was her partner in sin.

This woman was no Helen Prynne—no willing martyr to save to the community its pastor and godly example. She accused him to his flock. And, he, instead of mounting the scaffold with her and making a public confession, after the manner of Hawthorne's hero, went home to his pastor's study and killed himself.

There are certain truths that women tell only when they are desperate. Until that moment of desperation comes it is characteristic of their sex to be silent. What rendered desperate a woman in this case was the announcement in a local newspaper that the Rev. George W. Tomson was shortly to marry Mrs. Fanny Kenworthy, a very wealthy widow, who was a prominent member of his congregation.

The announcement was not a surprise to most of the members of Pastor Tomson's flock. They had anticipated it for some time. Yet it was the provocation of a tremendous sensation at the congregational meeting in the church before twenty-four hours had elapsed.

The Rev. George W. Tomson was present. Early in the progress of the meeting Miss Helen Moore, a handsome young woman and a Sunday school teacher in the church, arose and confronted him. The pastor's eyes did not meet her eyes. He turned his head away.

The congregation gazed in wonderment not unmixed with alarm, for the young woman's manner was disquieting. What followed rendered them motionless and speechless for a breathless half minute. Miss Moore spoke:

"I wish to tender my resignation as a member of this church," she said. Then, in tense tones while her hand pressed her waist, she continued:

"The pastor has broken his promise to marry me. But he will never marry Mrs. Kenworthy; he is a hypocrite."

As though this were not enough to stupefy her hearers, the young woman added this paralyzing charge against her pastor, who listened with face averted:

"He owes me all the love and duty belonging to a wife, and I shall not permit him to desert me now."

"All the love"—yes, and "duty," too—"belonging to a wife!"

Had ever a betrayed and desperate girl stated her grievance in plainer, more direct language?

With a gasp the congregation returned to its senses. There was indescribable confusion. Then the matrons of the congregation began to gather around Miss Moore, who had dropped back into her seat and was weeping bitterly. Strangely enough, the sympathy of these women seemed to be with their pastor. They rebuked Miss Moore for her scandalous conduct. Between sobs she assured them:

"All that I have said is no more than the truth. It is I who should have the sympathy of every woman member of this church."

But no sympathy was extended to her. The women who surrounded her made a formal demand upon her to leave Woodbury at once. She was not permitted to leave the church until she had agreed to go away.

No explanation was at that time demanded of Pastor Tomson. But this evidence of sympathy for himself appeared not to give him strength. As he emerged from the church with others he was deadly pale and staggered. At the top of the stone steps leading to the pavements he stumbled and pitched headlong to the sidewalk. A friend rushing to his assistance asked him if he was badly hurt.

"No," said the pastor, and added: "Unfortunately not."

What an odd remark from a pastor who has just received extraordinary proof of the loyalty of his flock! Those who heard it do not realize how hard pressed is this Arthur Dimmesdale of two centuries later. They cannot yet understand his feeling that it would be a happy "accident" that would place him beyond the necessity of confession.

But he has had that feeling for weeks, as he watched the scandal cloud growing larger, blacker, more threatening. It has so benumbed his faculties that he has been forced to read his sermons from manuscript, even kneeling for short prayers in the presence of his trusting congregation he has been compelled to read the familiar phrases of supplication from a scribbled page concealed in his hand.

Just now the pastor alone knows how hard pressed he is, how much worse is his situation than has been publicly declared by Miss Moore. He staggers and seems to grope his way as he walks to the little Woodbury hotel, where he has lived since the death of his wife four years before—where Miss Moore has long occupied a room across the hall from his own, and where Miss Sue Kerr—nemesis as yet unknown save to himself and to herself—also lived until she transferred her school teaching activities to Englewood, N. J.

What other phantoms feminine troubled the pastor's mental vision as he groped his way to his room, he alone knew—then. But his gait was so unsteady, his manner so abstracted that at least one of the hotel employes followed at a distance till he entered his own door, with the design of going to his aid if he should actually fall.

Among the familiar objects of his study the pastor tries to shake off the terrors that oppress him. He seats himself resolutely at his desk and takes up a pen with the idea of working on his Easter sermon. The first written paragraph confronts him, at its head the text:

"I am the Resurrection and the Life."

Does that word, "Resurrection" recall his desire, his need, for death? The pen falls from his hand. He rises and walks about the room. He walks till it grows dusk. He lights his reading lamp. That reminds him again that it is evening. What of this evening? Ah, he is expected by his fiancee, Mrs. Kenworthy, at her house.

Merciful heavens! How can he go on with that, after the public accusation of Miss Moore? And Miss Kerr—and the widow who dragged herself far away, out of his life, broken-hearted—and the others?

Was ever a clergyman, beloved and trusted by his flock, so beset? Never—yes, in fiction, there was the Rev. Arthur Dimmesdale, a good man, but for one fatal step, a most godly man. A hero, who, at the end, mounted the scaffold and in the presence of all his flock stood beside the woman who, for him, had worn in silence the Scarlet Letter of shame; who now confessed that the shame was his as much as hers—and showed upon the flesh over his heart the same symbol which he had placed there and worn secretly all the years.

Was it in him, the Rev. George W. Tomson, to do as the "Scarlet Letter" hero, the Rev. Arthur Dimmesdale, had done—publicly place himself at the side of the woman in confession that her accusation was true? That was the act of a hero. It had brought the Rev. Arthur Dimmesdale to his last breath. It was death, that confession.

There was a revolver in the pastor's hand. Now he realized that he had strength for but one kind of confession. He pointed the muzzle at his temple and fired. The explosion extinguished the lamp. The pastor's lifeless body fell to the floor beside his bed.

Street cars rattling and grinding along in front of the hotel every few minutes easily drowned the sound of that one dull report. Across the hall the room of Miss Helen Moore was empty. After the scene at the church she had not returned to it, nor did she return to it again that night or the next. Occupants of the rooms immediately under those of the pastor merely noticed, with relief, that he had ceased the restless walking to and fro that had disturbed [illegible] for more than a week past.

"The pastor has broken his promise to marry me. He owes me all the love and duty belonging to a wife."

As the evening advanced, Mrs. Kenworthy, the pastor's publicly affianced bride, sitting in her luxurious home a mile away, was much disturbed. Her promised husband had agreed to spend the evening with her. It was growing late. She was alarmed. She telephoned to a fellow member of the church, asking him to call and see if the clergyman was ill.

The hotel maid who went to his room to announce the visitor did not notice the lifeless body huddled on the carpet in the deep shadow of the bed. So she returned with the message that the pastor was out. It was not until the following morning that the pastor's room disclosed its tragedy, and the dread news went forth to prostrate two women, at least—the affianced bride and Miss Moore.

Hitherto the scandal that had been slowly crushing the spirits of Pastor Tomson had been stifled, smothered within the walls of his loyal church. Now, suddenly, it was a public calamity throughout southern New Jersey—from Englewood, where lived Miss Sue Kerr, through Woodbury, the home of Mrs. Kenworthy, to Philadelphia, where Miss Moore worked during the day at clerical duties.

Miss Moore left the office in Philadelphia, where she was employed, and went to relatives at Lansdowne, a suburb, where, the next day, she was said to be lying so ill that her life was despaired of.

Mrs. Kenworthy soon recovered sufficiently from the shock she had suffered to denounce all scandalous reports concerning the dead pastor as slanders pure and simple. The influence of other church members made it difficult for the authorities to investigate the stories told in every street of Woodbury—stories that the news of the tragedy had thrown several unnamed unmarried women into hysterics.

The report spread that Miss Kerr, to whom the pastor had paid much attention while she lived in Woodbury, and whom he had visited in Englewood, was engaged to marry him, and, upon the announcement of his forthcoming marriage to Mrs. Kenworthy, had instructed lawyers to sue the Rev. George W. Tomson for breach of promise.

Details of the case of Miss Moore flew about the town. She had nursed Mrs. Tomson during her last illness, four years ago. Since then she had lived across the hotel hall from the rooms of the pastor, and had constantly assisted him in his parish and literary labors. It was openly declared that this arrangement enabled the pastor to enjoy many evenings in the society of Miss Moore undisturbed—on the theory of pressing church work.

There was no criticism of this condition of things up to a year or so ago. Pastor Tomson had made a success of the church in every way. Under his ministrations its debt was paid off and improvements made on the building. He was just beyond fifty years of age, but appeared ten years younger. His hold upon the loyalty of the women of his congregation, especially, was remarkable.

Then came Mrs. Fanny Kenworthy, a widow of considerable wealth, to reside in Woodbury, with her sixteen-year-old daughter, herself an heiress to $200,000 under the will of her grandfather, the late John Kenworthy, of Roxborough. They lived in the handsomest, best appointed house in the town, and identified themselves actively with the Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. Tomson was pastor.

THE REV. GEORGE W. THOMSON.

MISS SUE H. C. KERR, WHOSE PHOTOGRAPH WAS FOUND IN THE DEAD PASTOR'S ROOM.

After that the pastor spent less time with Miss Moore—gradually less and less, and more at the house of Mrs. Kenworthy. Whatever Miss Moore felt, she appeared to make no sign.

This situation continued smoothly until about a month ago. It was known that the pastor kept many of his church papers at Mrs. Kenworthy's house, and spent many evenings there at his work. But suddenly John Sneyd, a brother of the widow, learned another detail that startled him.

Pastor Tomson carried a latch-key to the front door of the Kenworthy mansion, which enabled him to enter day or night quite at his own convenience. He went to the pastor and demanded to know if the latch-key story was true.

"Quite true," said the Rev. M[illegible]son. "Through this thoughtfulness [illegible] part of Mrs. Kenworthy my work a[illegible] during spare hours is much fac[illegible]"

John Sneyd did not mince [illegible] He said:

"You must at once announ[illegible] engagement to marry my sister."

In this demand the eldgrs [illegible] church are said to have joined.

Then began the period of Pastor Tomson's inability even to make the church prayers without notes; his worried manner noted by most of the congregation; the ceaseless pacing of his room at night which disturbed the hotel lodgers beneath him. What about Miss Moore? What would Miss Kerr do if he announced his engagement to Mrs. Kenworthy?

The announcement had to be made. Miss Moore's position the whole congregation soon knew—then the tragedy. After the tragedy the report that Miss Kerr had taken steps to take her claim upon the pastor into court was circulated.

Nothing was discovered among the pastor's papers to indicate that such a prospect had influenced his act. But in a drawer of his bureau one of the church authorities found a large cabinet photograph of Miss Kerr.

Found also were two railway tickets to Boston in the pastor's pocketbook, recently purchased—accepted as evidence that he had planned to leave Woodbury, and not alone. As his will showed him the possessor of at least $25,000 in money and property, he could have fled, if he wished, from Woodbury forever—as Pastor Dimmesdale and Hester Prynne, of "The Scarlet Letter," planned to flee from the early Boston settlement.

But, as Pastor Dimmesdale chose to confess dying, Pastor Tomson appears to have chosen to die confessing—if "suicide is confession."

Mrs. Kenworthy has remained loyal to the memory of her affianced husband. After the funeral she said:

"I shall not stop my investigation into the cause of Mr. Tomson's death. I believe that George was murdered, and if was the victim of a foul play I shall find his slayer. Mr. Tomson was a true and God-fearing man. We were to have been married and he had everything to look forward to. There was nothing to mak him wish for death. As for the silly stories that he had entanglements with women—well, you may stamp them as lies."

But Mrs. Kenworthy is practically alone in her belief. Opposed to her County Prosecutor Rogers, Coroner Hunter, S. B. Breese, Judge Jessup, E. H. Kromer and other elders of the First Presbyterian Church, and a big majority of the citizens of Woodbury.

These men are convinced that the Rev. Mr. Tomson committed suicide because he knew that an investigation into his several affairs of the heart would be made by the elders of the First Presbyterian Church.

cousin. She carried with her the atmosphere of happy home life. When she said that her papa was a good one she was revealing an interesting domestic situation. It is well known in society that Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's younger brother, Reginald, is devoted to his little daughter, that the happiest hours of his life are spent in playing with her and that through the influence of his wife and child he has become a wiser and a better man.

Just before his marriage "Reggie" alarmed his family and his sincerest friends by his wild ways of living. As many persons will remember, he squandered a fortune estimated at $300,000 on gambling, and was long hunted by the criminal authorities as a witness in proceedings against Canfield. His actions in other ways were equally alarming to his friends and calculated to make them fear that he had entered on a rake's progress, which would end in the traditional way.

Fortunately he married Miss Cathleen Neilson. No sooner did he become a husband than he appeared a changed man. He ceased to gamble, drink, frequent the races or to do any of the things that lead to perdition. When at length he became a father his transformation was complete. Now he is not only a model husband and citizen, but a radiantly happy father.

It is generally recognized that the worst evil of divorce is in its effect on the children. When their parents are divorced they begin life under a shadow, their ideas of domestic life are perverted and they are likely to become matrimonial wrecks themselves in later years. We find that divorce usually runs in families.

Conversely the greatest blessing of married life lies in a loving sympathy between parents and children. The man who has a child into whose thoughts, occupations, education and amusements he enters with all his heart has an interest in life and in the future of humanity which he can find in no other way. Husbands and wives forget to quarrel with one another if they both occupy themselves with the intelligent care of their children, and at the same time they avoid dangerous amusements.

These truths are well illustrated by the parents of the little ones whose touching conversation has been recorded here.

THE SECRET OF SEX DISCOVERED AT LAST?

In the Case of the Kaiser, the Factors Are Just the Reverse of the Czar's. His Consort is of Robust Vitality in Contrast to His Own Innately Feeble Constitution—Five Successive Sons Were Born Before a Sole Daughter.

Prof. Romme, the French Scientist, Says That Weak Fathers Have Sons; Weak Mothers Have Girls—and Explains How Sex May Be Controlled.

IT was nearly ten years ago that Dr. Schenk, of Vienna, roused the interest of the entire world by his announcement that he had discovered the secret of sex. Dr. Schenk died before his researches were fully perfected.

But Dr. Romme, a French scientist, took up the work where Dr. Schenk stopped and has carried his investigations and experiments to a final conclusion. Professor Romme is now able to confirm the main propositions set forth by Dr. Schenk and to announce several new and extremely interesting discoveries.

There is, perhaps, no more interesting question in human life than the mystery of why you were born a boy or a girl—no problem of more far-reaching consequences than the power to control the sex of future generations. It has been abundantly shown that the whole current of human history would have been changed had man possessed the key to the secret of sex in past ages.

Why is it that some parents have only boys and others only girls, and still others the normal half and half or near it?

Professor Romme's answer is very simple, and he asks any one who doubts to think of the families they know in which children of one sex predominate and see if his explanation is not borne out by observation. He says:

"Whether children are born boys or girls depends entirely on the comparative physical vigor of the parents. Suppose, for instance, that the father, from age, sickness, dissipation or any other cause, has not the vitality of his younger, healthier wife, then the offspring will be boys. If the wife is naturally delicate or becomes so for any reason so that her vitality is below that of her husband, the babies will be girls.

"In short, the sex favors the weaker parent. A weak father will have mostly boys—a weak mother a majority of girls. This discovery is of immediate practical value to parents who have a one-sided family and are wishing for brothers for their girls or sisters for their boys, because it points a way to achieve the desired result.

"If you want the next baby to be a girl instead of another boy, it is necessary to raise the general health of the husband to a degree a little superior to the wife's. If you want a boy, make the mother the physical superior, and a boy will be the result."

The children of the venerable Lorin Farr, of Salt Lake City, are an unusually striking example of this law, because, being a Mormon, he had five wives. Among his 326 children and grandchildren the workings of the "law of cross-heredity" reveal themselves unmistakably.

One wife was a remarkably vigorous specimen of womanhood, while the other four were inclined to be "delicate." What was the result? Four wives gave birth to almost exclusively girl babies, while the fifth, who was the vigorous one, presented her husband with nothing but boys.

Mr. Farr at the time the picture on this page was taken was eighty-one years of age, and strong and active.

His splendid vitality compared with that of four of his wives caused the preponderance of girls seen in the picture. His fifth wife, however, was a still more perfect specimen, and in her case the law of "cross-heredity" favored the father as the weaker parent.

"What happens when the parents are of equal strength?" has been asked. Dr. Romme asserts that there are no instances where the parents are of equal vitality for any length of time. Worry, overwork, or even a passing illness of the moment, is enough to turn the scale and make one parent the weaker.

Old age is one of the weaknesses which nature favors particularly in determining sex. When old men marry young women the offspring is in a large majority of cases male. The older the husband the greater the probability of a boy, until when we reach such a case as that of the Marquis of Donegal it amounts to a certainty.

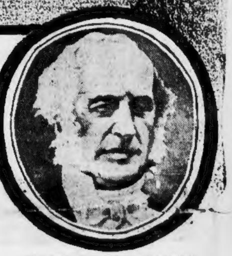
The husband in this case was over eighty years of age when his youthful wife gave birth to the little Earl of Belfast. He was extremely anxious that the baby would be a boy. Had he known the law of cross-heredity he need not have worried.

Professor Romme cites as prominent examples the cases of the Kaiser of Germany and the Czar of Russia. The German Emperor, born with a feeble constitution, one arm shrivelled and paralyzed, and an affection of the throat which must some day kill him, has fought disease with all the powers of a resolute will. Knowing the handicap of health under which he has suffered it is easily understood why he has had five sons in succession.

With the Czar the factors have been just the reverse. His constitution is naturally hardy, in spite of his rather pale face, and his physical superiority to his Czarina is revealed by the four daughters which resulted before at last the longed for boy arrived.

The Family of the Present Czar is a Prominent Case in Point Cited by Dr. Romme. His Physical Superiority Over His Wife Who is Neurotic, is Revealed by the Birth of Four Succeeding Girls Before One Boy.

The Case of Commodore Vanderbilt, a Man of Superb Vigor and Intense Vitality, Would Seem to Bear Out the Surprising Theory of Dr. Romme. He Had Twelve Children, Nine of Whom Were Girls, Who All Lived to Maturity.



The Late Commodore Vanderbilt.

The Late Marquis of Donegal Was Over 80 When His 20-Year-Old Bride Gave Birth to a Child. It Was a Boy—According to the Law of "Cross-Heredity."

In the diet which Dr. Romme prescribes for the mother when a boy is desired he follows largely the prescriptions of the famous Dr. Leopold Schenk, who advocated a strongly nitrogenous diet. His patients were ordered to eat as much meat and fats as possible and as little sugar and starchy foods as they could.

The old theory of cross-heredity was based upon nourishment. It was found that among savage tribes, where the men ate the best of everything and the women got what little remained, there was no abnormal proportion of boys.

As a result of the investigation the following suggestions are made for the predetermination of sex:—

"The connection of the development of sex with an imperfect physiological combustion of the food can only be considered as demonstrated, if it is possible, by means of certain exact experiments in this direction to reach results which incontestably make for the possibility of influencing sex.

"Most striking of all are the cases where a number of daughters have come into the world one after another as the results of a marriage.

"The condition of a woman in a well-regulated married state, when, as we will suppose, five or six girls are born, one after another must be considered to be of a kind that departs more or less from the normal. The human female, if we regard the general statistical data, ought to bring forth approximately the same number of male and female individuals. If we find so remarkable an excess in the direction of either males or females, that six or seven of the same sex follow one another, there must be a reason for this.

What can we do to relieve such an abnormal state of things?

"The treatment consists in giving the mother a highly nitrogenous diet with fat, and adding only so much carbo-hydrate as is absolutely necessary to prevent its want being felt.

"It also sometimes happens that, even with careful dieting, the conditions which are necessary for our purpose are not realized, viz., that the surplus of sugar in the system does not disappear, that the mother cannot accommodate herself to a diet of the kind required. She finds the situation intolerable, because she cannot do without an abundance of starchy substances and sugar, and in consequence all hope of a satisfactory result falls to the ground.

"There are persons who, from their youth upwards have lived principally on vegetable food, and are therefore not accustomed to take the nitrogenous substances of their diet in the concentrated form in which they are presented in the albuminous constituent of meat. They obtain the necessary nitrogen for the body from large amounts of food containing a great quantity of water, and it may happen that they cannot easily submit themselves to such a change of diet without pernicious consequences.

"To this class belong the women who live in the rural districts of many of the mountainous regions of central Europe, where little flesh is eaten. With them it might often be a difficult matter to make an abrupt change of diet of the desired kind. Such individuals can be reconciled to the kind of diet we recommend only by a gradual advance in the quantity of concentrated nitrogenous food. But in such cases it might very likely prove possible to attain our end by a corresponding vegetable diet.

"Let us now, in conclusion, endeavor to make some short reflections on the results which we are able to attain.

"First of all, one would say that in certain regions and among certain peoples, where meat forms the principal diet, a large preponderance of male offspring would be anticipated.

"The different experiments which breeders have made, and the observations which have repeatedly shown in the case of the invertebrata (v. Berlepsch, 'Die Biene und ihre Zucht,' second edition; Landois, 'Physiologie'), a connection between food and the development of sex leave no doubt that in the case of the human subject also, a certain diet of the mother would not be without influence on the sex of her child. Here, however, according to my opinion, the result does not depend on the diet alone, but rather on the process of metabolism in the mother.

"How the physiological combustion goes on in the organism, and what changes take place in it, in consequence of the altered diet, until sugar entirely disappears, is in the case of human beings of the highest importance, and furnishes an index of the consequences.

"In individual cases the diet is directed in accordance with the results that show how the food has been assimilated and does not depend upon these alone. In other words, whether the mother eats much meat is a secondary consideration. Whether and how the food is taken is completely made use of in the process of combustion—that is a matter of importance for the purpose we have in view.

"Any one who keeps before him the fundamental principles of this theory will see plainly that it is possible, under certain circumstances, to procure male progeny by means of the influence we have indicated. The wish to have female progeny is a desire for the gratification of which it is only necessary to build up the general health of the father.

"According to statistics more boys than girls are born in the years with a poor harvest. Bad harvest years are those which favor a flesh diet, as the food-stuffs from the vegetable kingdom do not suffice for the cattle, nor for the people either, in consequence of which the cattle are killed, and more flesh enters into the diet of the women.

"If the dieting of a woman in the way we recommend is practicable and of definite effect upon the development of the future sex, we arrive at a conclusion which may be summed up as follows: If a woman be dieted according to our method, she can reach a stage in which she becomes physically superior to the man, and her offspring will then be male, in accordance with the law of cross-heredity of sex.

The New Beauty Science of Cosmetics.

An Instructive Lesson by a Beauty Doctor Who Is Both a Scientist and a Pharmacist, on Just What Rouge Is Safe to Use and Just, in Detail, How to Use it, to Perfect Daylight "Make-Up."

1—In Preparing for the "Make-Up" the Muscles of the Face Are Well Held Up While the Astringent Is Being Applied.

8—"I advise most strongly against the ordinary eye-brow pencil, as it pulls out the eye-lashes and eye-brows and in general does more harm than good."

By St. Claire Rainsford-Gay, Ph. G.,

Pharmacist to the French Hospital of New York City.

HAS any one ever stopped to ask herself what are cosmetics? What is their legitimate use? Judging from the opinions extant, I should say—no.

Cosmetics are simply forms of external medicines, and their use is exactly the same as that of internal remedies—they simply tide over and assist nature during a certain period.

In giving this, the scientific definition, have I given food for reflection? I think so. Every woman—almost, I might say—uses cosmetics to-day. Some are adept in the art, others are not. But every one agrees that beauty is a necessity and no longer an accessory. The wear and tear of the age, the predominance of electricity, and, above all, the color combinations prescribed by the modistes of to-day, are all responsible for these artificial aids to beauty, and the question has now resolved itself into what to use and how to use it.

Cosmetics are used for two purposes: first, to conceal blemishes; and, second, to accentuate the charms one already has. However, as I find that the majority of women accomplish neither of these good and legitimate purposes, but instead make up rather as a caricature than a pretty picture, I shall give the rules that must be observed in order to get results that are perfect:

Always make up by a strong light, whether it be day or artificial.

Select your cosmetics carefully, experiment until you find the quantity which produces the most pleasing effect, and never vary the amount, using just as little as possible.

In giving the prescriptions mentioned herein, I have selected those which constitute a perfect line of cosmetics, considered from both a beauty as well as a scientific viewpoint.

These preparations are the results of a series of experiments in which the best and most useful ingredients have been incorporated. Each article has its definite action and purpose, and every remedy is absolutely harmless, so that it may be used for an unlimited time without fear of detection or injury. I strongly advise having these formulas compounded by a competent pharmacist, as the cost is but a few cents more, and it is practically impossible to find in the average house chemically clean utensils and exact weights and measures, which are indispensable if perfect preparations are sought for.

I find that the best results for a daylight make-up are obtained in the following manner, and my model has posed to illustrate the more important points. By carefully following these instructions every woman can, in the privacy of her own room, beautify herself. The face is carefully prepared the night before by washing with warm water and a bland soap, preferably castile, and thoroughly rinsing with four or five successive waters, each one being just a trifle cooler than the one before; but never dash from very warm to very cold water, as that cuts off the circulation, and the skin soon assumes that "dead look."

The skin is now in a receptive condition and each minute pore is waiting, open mouthed, to be fed. Consequently use the following unguent, each ingredient of which has a special duty—the nourishment of the tissues, by means of which the youthful contour is not only retained but also regained:

Cerae Albae	½ oz.
Ol. Olivae	1 oz.
Spir. Rosae	aa ¼ oz.
Spir. Heliotropin.
Aq. Dest.	½ oz.

M. ft. ungt.

Sig: For external use as directed.

As I do not believe in massage for any woman under forty years of age, the face is but lightly manipulated with a rotary motion, always in an upward direction, because the lines of joy go up and those of [illegible].

Perhaps you will wonder why I have ordered only four ounces of this unguent. Well, let me explain. Each ingredient is purely organic and liable to decomposition. It is not made like other creams, also organic, but, nevertheless, petroleum products, which are sure to grow hair on the face during continued usage. This unguent is to use and not to keep, and the quantity as above given is sufficient for one month.

The small amount of unabsorbed unguent is removed with a piece of soft gauze and the following astringent and bleaching lotion is applied with an absorbent cotton pad:

R—Zinci Sulph.	16 grains
Ol. Rosae.
Ol. Rosemarini	aa m. 25
Ol. Aurantii Flor.
Alcoholis	1 oz.
Ac. Acetic. dil.	2 drams
Aq. Dest. q. s. ad	16 ozs.

M. ft. lot.

Sig: External use only, as an astringent.

As shown in the illustration, the muscles of the face are held in position between the forefinger and middle finger and the fragant water gently "spatted" on the cheeks and forehead, again following the upward contour of the face.

You will particularly notice the small quantity of alcohol that I use in this lotion simply sufficient to hold the oils in solution, for there are very few skins that do not become cracked and dry from the constant application of strongly alcoholic solutions. In the morning one will have a perfectly smooth skin on which to apply the daylight make-up.

After washing the face with only warm water, the "Tutone" rouge, en rouleau, is dipped in some clean water and quickly passed over the entire face with the exception of the forehead and nose, and carried well down on the chin and neck, behind as well as in front of the ears; then the ear lobes, outer portion of the ear, and the inside of the nostrils are all lightly touched, so that their pallor will not suggest the make-up to the uninitiated. As here illustrated, the coloring is accentuated on the cheekbones, but the point of accentuation depends entirely upon the shape of the face, those having long, thin faces rouging low and heavily, to give width, and those having round faces, as shown by the model, rouging high, to give length. Before the application has time to dry go quickly over the face with a gauze pad, wet with warm water, and tone down all lines. This is imperative, because the rouge cannot be removed after once it has dried, as it forms a definite but harmless chemical compound when in contact with the skin for a moment or two, and is soluble only in a saponified medium.

The rouge is proof against perspiration as well as water, and may be applied, a dip in the ocean indulged in and the fair bather emerge as radiant and rosy as before.

The formula of the rouge is so intricate that I do not care to give it, but shall be glad to send the name of the maker, provided it cannot be found in any drug or dry goods shop.

Rouging lightly down on the neck covers all traces of age which so quickly show themselves at that spot. If the neck is saggy do not use the popular tannic acid ointment, as that will do just what its name implies, tan the neck to a leathery state, but rather use this preparation:

R—Hydrogenii dioxidi	1 oz.
Succi limonis	1 oz.

Mix.

Sig:—External use.

As this solution keeps but indifferently, it is best to have only a small quantity prepared at a time.

After having applied this bleach, then massage the neck as shown in this illustration, using the upward rotary motion, with the unguent before mentioned.

Next I turn my attenion to the lips, and you can readily see how the mouth can be distorted instead of arched into a cupid's bow by a simple stroke of the stub. The "Tritone" rouge, which is an entirely different shade to that used on the face, is applied by means of a pointed stub and, as illustrated, the lips are tinted full in the centre and a faint line drawn upward at the corners. The effect is extremely pretty, and is emphasized by pretty gums, which, if they are pale, may be tinted with the following powder, which is perfectly harmless.

R. Sol. Carmin. Ammon. ½ dram.
Cretae Preparat. 4 drams.
M. Make powder.

Sig.—Apply to gums with cotton stab—To be used but once in three days.

The advantages of this powder are twofold, because it not only reddens the gums, but also brings out the whiteness of the teeth, thereby enhancing the beauty of the mouth. In touching up the eyes so as to produce just a suspicion of a shadow and a dreamy expression, a pomade is used and applied by means of a camel's-hair brush. I advise most strongly against the ordinary eyebrow pencil, as it pulls out the eyelashes and eyebrows, and in general does more harm than good. Kohl is the favorite coloring for the eyes, but chemically it is a salt of antimony and disastrous results inevitably follow its use.

Anil. blue (oil sol.)	3 grains
Petrolat mollis	½ dram

Mix as pomade.

Sig:—Apply to brows and lashes.

This pomade is applied as shown in the picture with a tiny brush to the eyelashes of the upper and lower lid, the eyes being closed, and on the lower lid where the lashes are thin, a fine line is drawn from the middle of the eye outward to the corner, there meeting that of the upper lid, thus elongating and apparently enlarging the eye.

The same pomade was painted on the brows, which were beautifully arched but painfully thin. After allowing this to remain on for a few minutes the eyelashes and brows were brushed with a heavier camel's-hair brush, removing any superfluous pomade, yet leaving sufficient to cause one to wonder at a change which, though apparent, was undefinable. Merely pretty eyes are thus made beautiful, and if used for a long enough time, this preparation, because of the petrolatum contained in it, will cause a luxuriant growth of both lashes and brows. To brighten the eyes, a fragrant solution made after this formula is used:

Aq. Camphor	½ dram
Aq. Rosae sufficient to make 2 ounces.

The eyes are carefully washed with this lotion, and carefully patted dry with clean gauze, but never rub them dry, for that causes them to fall back in the head, and thus appear very small. The final touch to the makeup consists of a light application of powder. A mineral powder, daintily perfumed and faintly tinted is patted on the cheeks and gently rubbed down, as illustrated, until every minute particle is evenly spread over the face and neck, and not a trace is noticeable under the strongest light. I never use a rice powder because the material being organic, is decomposed by the perspiration, and should a grain remain in a pore, that grain will swell from the moist secretion and cause an unsightly blackhead. But neither must you be indiscriminate in the selection of a mineral powder, for some of these preparations are nothing more or less than combinations of poisonous metals, which are positively dangerous to use. However, if you will use the following powder,

R—Bismuthi Subnit.	2 drms.
Zinci Oxidi	2 drms.
Cretae Praecipitat.	1 oz.
Alk. Sol. Carmin	Sufficient quantity

Mix and pulverize.

Sig: For toilet use.

which is so blended as to suit almost every skin. I am sure you will look just as pretty as my model in this illustration, who is now ready for her daylight promenade, but who must return to me to be beautified for her evening appearance, as that requires a different combination of cosmetics to give at night the same effect. I will tell you about that again.

2—Next the Rouge is Applied Not Only Over the Cheeks, but Well Down Over Neck and Chin, Behind as Well as in Front of the Ears, Into the Lobe of the Ear and Up Into the Nostrils.

3—In Massaging the Neck After the Bleach to Remove Every Line, Especially Those Cruel Lines Below the Ears, Be Sure and Use the Upward Rotary Motion. "The lines of joy go up; of sorrow, down."

4—Just How the Lips Are Tinted Full in the Centre and Pale Gums, if They Show, Are Delicately Tinted Pink.

5—Drawing with a Tiny Soft Brush a Fine Line Where the Lashes Are Thin from the Middle of the Eye Outward to the Corner, There Meeting the Line on the Upper Lid.

6—The Final Touch of a Mineral Powder Faintly Tinted Which is Patted on the Cheeks, as Butter is Patted, and Gently Rubbed Down Until Every Minute Particle is Evenly Spread.

7—Scrutinize with Microscopic Care the Face and the Neck Till Not a Trace of Powder is Discernable Under the Strongest Light. It is the Final Survey for the Perfect Day "Make-Up."

The Way Her "Merry Widow" Prevented Miss Zelma Davis from Committing Suicide.

LAST year it was the "peek-a-boo" waist that raised a reel rumpus from one end of the country to the other. Now it is the gigantic hat. Sometimes a whole yard—3 feet—36 inches—across—"The Merry Widow"—and sometimes half as high—a marvellous Gargantuan, monstrous mass of architectural millinery that is the provoking cause of more comicality, more profanity—from men—more nuisance, and catastrophes of many more curious kinds than you could shake a stick at.

The huge hat is everywhere. It is part of the wardrobe of every woman, whether fashionable or not, for no woman is so far behind the fashions as not to have such a possession. From jest it has become earnest, from a joke a serious matter.

The storm of criticism it has provoked has reached all grades of life. The big hat has already, like that other folly, the peek-a-boo, figured stormily in the churches and in the theatres, and in all phases of society that lie between these extremes of amusement and of seriousness. It has delayed trains. It has saved lives. It has created one theatre stampede and averted another. It prevented a pretty, dejected girl from drowning herself, and it has caused several churches to solemnly propose that all women wearing the millinery monstrosities must remove them during the hours of worship. It has put out people's eyes, got in the divorce courts already, and may be said as yet to have merely begun its provoking career of inanimate cussedness.

Prominent modistes have declared that the craze for big hats is a milliner's mid-Spring madness.

"We cannot get them large enough to suit our customers," said Mlle. Comae, of New York. "They have asked me for the largest, and I have searched the market for them, and even had to cable to the other side. Then inevitably I am asked if I cannot make them a little larger, and I have had to add several rows of braid or arrange a lace frill or trim the hat so that a feather will extend over the side to make it look yet larger than it is."

"My customers have asked me how wide is the widest brimmed hat made, and I have answered, 'thirty-six inches.' They have asked me why they were not made forty inches," said Mr. Millard Koch.

Miss Marguerite Shonts, the sister of the newly widowed Duchess de Chaulnes, was one of the first to appear among New York's "400" with one of these cart-wheel sailors—thirty-four inches of black straw in circumference, with a single wreath of creamy magnolias. It was at Sherry's, at the fashionable tea hour in upper Fifth avenue. It suddenly occurred to the pretty Miss Marguerite that she must use the telephone and a sudden descent she made upon the telephone booth as directed by Central, when, lo and behold! there was a crush and crash of straw. Miss Shonts recoiled and clapped her hands to her head. The lady was in a dilemma. The hat wouldn't go in with Miss Shounts. There was nothing left for it but to unpin the monstrosity and slide in with it edgewise. This Miss Shonts proceeded to do amid the laughter of Sherry's.

At the very fashionable wedding last week of the last of the three beautiful Barclay girls, in St. Thomas's, a similar manoeuvre attracted the attention of all the wedding guests. Mrs. Oakley Vanderpoel, the bride's sister, had not reckoned on the cab-door, when she selected her wedding hat. Mrs. Vanderpoel ducked into the closed carriage without stopping to think. She rebounded. And then, folding herself into a bundle, she actually crept in sidewise like a fashionable crab, while the bystanders snickered.

So much for the comedy of it in Manhattan. Quickly follows in the Bronx a tragedy of "the bird on Nellie's hat." A man with a shotgun was out hunting in the Edenwald Woods, Easter week, when he espied what he thought was a nest of birds in the bushes, and banged away at it. It was the plumaged headgear of Mrs. Mary Sasren, and the poor woman underneath it was peppered full with the shot. In intense pain she was taken to the Mount Vernon Hospital and more than 100 lead pellets were extracted from her flesh. Her escape from death was the narrowest.

Passengers on the Pacific express of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Pittsburg looked at their watches, and closed and opened them again peevishly. The train was late. They had never known this to happen before on the Pacific express. They fretted and chafed and the men said pungent words under their breath, as is the habit of restless passengers.

She was a New York girl, who was on her way to pay a visit to a school chum in Pittsburg. She should have gotten off at the East Liberty station. Strictly speaking, it was not the girl's fault but the hat's. She had dressed carefully at an early hour. No detail of her toilette was omitted, not even the powder on the tip of her dainty nose. Her hat had been secured with the half dozen pins thrust from side to side and front to back, as a maid must pin her big hat. Then, carrying her handbag, she started to follow the porter from the car. All went well until she reached the narrow aisle that led around the stateroom to the door of the car. There she stopped wedgelike. As a general hemmed in, she could not go forward and she dared not retreat. Her hat was too wide by at least six inches to clear the passage. There she stood, the edges of her hat brim cruelly scraping the polished wood of the car walls.

By a curious little serpentine motion she tried to wriggle forward. She failed. The hat wouldn't stir. She tried a flank movement. The hat was as firm as a rock. It refused to yield by the slightest shade of an inch. It's huge bird was pinioned.

It was a resourceful and not too modest travelling man who yelled:

"Why don't you take the blamed thing off.'" Coloring deeply, the pretty victim raised her hands to her head and drew out a long turquoise-headed pin. The belayed travellers counted in chorus, "One." "Two." "Three," and after the removal of each pin heaved a deep sigh of relief. At last the sixth pin was withdrawn, and the girl gave the hat an impatient pull forward. It resisted.

"Tilt'er up," shouted the travelling man.

The girl knocked the underside of the hat brim as a cooper does a refractory barrel head. One side gave its last scratch upon the immaculate varnish of the car. Blushing furiously, the girl slipped from underneath the hat. It was the porter who, with rude hands, tilted it sidewise, lowered and carried it sidewise out of the car.

The girl, bareheaded and with crimson face, received it from his hands on the platform. The conductor jerked the starting bell. The whistle shrieked. The train started. Every passenger's head was out of the window and every male throat yielded a cheer.

"It was at least a yard wide," said the women who admired the hat.

At nearly the same time a pair of enormous hats were creating a panic of indignation at the Chatelet Theatre, in Paris. Two handsome young women, wearing a Parisian form of the "Merry Widow" fad, with high oblique osprey feathers, took their seats in the second row. In corresponding seats in the third row sat two men, who had been enjoying a most chic Parisian dance. Suddenly, instead of twinkling toes and shimmering silk hose and an eddy of lace ruffles, the unfortunate patrons of mimic art beheld what looked like two enormous cartwheels of yellow straw, surmounted by a harplike device of crimson osprey feathers. The more daring of the men begged the lately arrived wearers to remove their hats. This they haughtily refused to do.

The men angrily left the auditorium and protested to the management. The manager declined to interfere. He said he was married, and that it was a braver man than he who would face a woman's wrath. The men, with set jaws, went out into the night. Bystanders thought with sympathy that they'd failed and sought comfort in absinthes. Having missed most of the second act, they returned and quietly took their seats. The women looked triumphantly at each other, and the crimson osprey feathers waved defiance at the enemy in the rear. But at that moment in filed four huge market porters, each wearing the big, enormous brimmed hats that are always a part of the costume of the market porter and squatted in the first row.

The women leaned forward and begged that the hats be removed. The porters were obdurate. The audience, perceiving the drama being enacted in the auditorium, burst into a roar of laughter. The actors stopped playing. Frantically the manager summoned the gendarmes and ordered that all six—the women in the big hats and the porters who wore hats as big—be arrested. The porters said two angry men had paid them good money to wear their hats into the theatre. The two men who had taken this mean revenge chuckled softly through the rest of the play.

Burlington, Ia., demands that women shall wear smaller hats to church. It was [illegible] the "meeting" of the trustees of several of the churches that women wearing enormous hats would be requested by the ushers to leave them in the hall. If they refused they should not be permitted to enter.

In St. Louis the Easter service at St. John's Church had neared the end when the women sitting in the front pews turned pale. One or two of them involuntarily rose, but they sat down again because the brims and feathers of their respective hats had become so mingled that it would require grace, dexterity and time to disentangle them.

The bunches of Easter lilies made of paper grouped about the altar had been ignited by the burning candles, and in a trice the altar cloth was ablaze. The phalanx of big hat brims hid the sight of the flames from the rest of the worshippers until the fire had been extinguished.

"Vanity is a wicked thing," said the good Father Stephen, "but it was the vanity of the big hat that saved St. John's Church from a fire panic and an immense loss of life."

Miss Gillette, of Newark, N. J., could not swim. The puppy could swim but feebly, and the current of the Delaware was strong. The current swept the struggling pet dog down stream to a rock, upon which the puppy crawled, and where it sat howling dismally to its mistress on shore. Miss Gillette snatched off her big and becoming hat, tore off its heavy trimmings, and, tying the end of its many yards of ribbon to the brim, swung it into the current and watched it drift down to the rock. With many whistled coaxings she induced the puppy to climb aboard, and, drawing [illegible] the ribbon, she carefully towed [illegible]

In Cleveland, O., Miss [illegible] leaped into Wade Park [illegible] strangely her huge, flat [illegible] as a buoy and held her at [illegible] she was saved. In Kansas City, Miss Ada Sloan has been sued for $5,000 for poking out the eye of Mrs. Mary James with the edge of her "Merry Widow." Mrs. Grace Powers, of Wichita, Kansas, sued her husband for divorce for falling in love with a Merry Widow maiden and won it.

Mrs. Julia Kaul, a Philadelphia bride, while trying on her new hat, caught on fire and was so engrossed she didn't notice it till she was awfully burned. The beflowered pile of Miss Nancy Pool, of Sam Bernard's, took fire in New York's Broadway, caused a street block and went up in smoke. The National League of base ball managers in St. Louis have declared against the entrance of the "Merry Widow" into the grand stands, and at Joplin, Mo., the manager of the baseball park has been sued by two husbands each for $10,000 for the ejection of their wives and the injuries that followed in the bloody scrimmage. In Kansas City again Miss Anna Sloan has sued the Metropolitan Railroad Company for not admitting her and her hat in a car, and in St. Louis Miss Mary Hazleton stabbed the motorman fiercely with a 12-inch hat pin because the door wasn't wide enough to let her hat in. The "Merry Widow" will probably end in a murder yet.

THE secret of a remarkable series of daring jewelry robberies in the most fashionable resorts of Europe has been revealed at last with the arrest of a woman known as the Countess de Monteil.

Early in the Winter Baron de Rothschild, of Paris, while staying at one of the hotels at Nice, lost his pocketbook containing 100,000 francs in bills, his watch, rings, ruby studs and scarfpins. The jewelry alone was worth $20,000. All these things were stolen from the Baron's bedroom during the night while he was asleep in bed. The Baron is a most methodical man, and there could be no doubt as to when and where his property was taken from him.

Before going to bed he placed his pocketbook and valuables, according to his custom, on a table at the side of his bed. When he awoke in the morning they were all gone. He had a slight headache, which was, in reality, the effect of a mild dose of chloroform, but it was so slight that the cause of it was not understood at the time.

Strange to say, the door of the bedroom was locked on the inside, as the Baron had left it before going to bed. There was no other way by which the thief could have entered and escaped. The robbery was of a most mysterious character, and the police were unable to find any trace of the thief.

Similar robberies went on all through the Winter at the most fashionable hotels of the Riviera, including Nice, Cannes and Monte Carlo. The Winter resorts of Italy and Egypt were also plagued by the energetic robbers. Thefts had always been frequent at these places, which are filled with people possessing more money than sense, but this year all previous records were passed. In many cases large sums of money were stolen, and jewels of great value. There was almost a reign of terror among the possessors of diamond necklaces.

At last the climax came to the long sequence of daring robberies when the police arrested the Countess of Monteil just as she was on the point of robbing a rich American in the Hotel West End at Nice. The arrest was made by Inspectors Benoit and Henie, of the Central Detective Bureau of Paris. The American's name has been carefully withheld by the French police, according to their custom, in the preliminary stage of a case. It will probably not be necessary to prosecute the Countess for her last offense, as evidence has been discovered of a score or more previous robberies which she had carried out successfully.

The Police Inspectors, who had been shadowing her for several weeks, saw her through the keyhole of the door when she was on the point of robbing the American. They saw her climbing into her victim's room through the window, which she reached from the window of an adjoining room. She was dressed in an extraordinary disguise, consisting of black tights, a black coat, black felt slippers, and a thick black veil thrown over her face. In her hand was a revolver. They seized her just as she was creeping to the man's bed to give him a dose of chloroform. They sprang upon her and grappled with her. She fought like a hungry tigress, but they felled her to the ground mercilessly, for they knew that she was a desperate character, and believed she was capable of killing any of them if cornered.

The Countess has now been identified as the chief actor in the robberies, which have been perpetrated for years in fashionable hotels and in railway trains, all the way from London to Cairo. The victims were usually persons of title or great wealth.

Last Summer Henry Rea, the Pittsburg steel millionaire, was robbed of a large sum of money, reported to have been $50,000, while travelling by train to the races at Windsor. Just before that the Countess of Buchan, an English noblewoman, was relieved of her jewels. They had been placed in a carriage at Euston Station by her maid, but when the train had started the Countess found that the case had gone.

The Duchess of Sutherland lost her splendid family jewels while travelling from the Gare du Nord, Paris, on the way to England. The jewels were valued at $150,000, and among them was a necklace worth $30,000. They were contained in a green baize bag closed with a leather strap. The maid placed the bag on a seat in the railway compartment, the Duchess took a look at them, and then turned to talk to her husband, who was on the platform. Then she got on the train without thinking of her jewels again. Before she left France she realized that they had been stolen. After a long search a man was arrested for being concerned in the theft, and a portion of the jewels, valued at $30,000, were found in his possession. He absolutely refused to divulge what had become of the rest of them, and it is supposed that the bogus Countess de Monteil was his leader and had got away with most of the plunder. It has never been recovered.

The Countess of Dudley, whose husband was one of the richest noblemen in England, lost her jewels, valued at $200,000, through a robbery of a similar character at Paddington Station. She never recovered any of them.

In many cases the persons robbed in European railway compartments were murdered, and in several instances their bodies were thrown out on the track.

The former Crown Princess Stephanie of Austria, now the Countess Lonyay, was robbed of her jewels while staying at a hotel at Nice. The Countess, as most people know, is the daughter of the wicked old King of the Belgians, with whom she has quarrelled because he kept her mother's property from her. The former Princess is very reckless, quite fond of gambling, and makes all sorts of queer acquaintances during her travels. While staying at Nice for the purpose of visiting the gambling tables at Monte Carlo she struck up a great friendship with the Countess de Monteil. She was unusually lucky at Monte Carlo and won $50,000. During the following night all her winnings were stolen from her room, together with jewels valued at $75,000, while she slept. The Countess de Monteil was particularly severe in denouncing the hotel keeper who took such poor care of a royal Princess who honored him by staying at his establishment.

The Crown Princess of Denmark suffered the greatest loss, probably, ever incurred in a jewel robbery on the European Continent. While she was travelling by railroad on a visit to her brother-in-law, the King of Greece, her entire collection of jewelry was stolen. It was valued at over $350,000, and not one article has ever been recovered. The Crown Princess of Sweden, who has recently become Queen, lost her jewels while staying at a hotel at Cannes. They were valued at $100,000, and included some pieces of great historic interest which could never be replaced, although the gems were not of extraordinary value. In this case her room was entered during the daytime, and the theft was evidently committed by some one who was thoroughly familiar with the plan of the hotel, for the room was surrounded by others belonging to members of the Princess's suite and was difficult to approach without attracting attention. The Princess discovered her loss when she was about to dress for dinner. None of her jewels has ever been recovered.

The Countess of Warwick, famous as a beauty and more recently as a social reformer, was relieved of her jewels two years ago by some chance acquaintances, to whom she was explaining the desirability of distributing the property of the rich among the poor. The Countess Howe was another recent sufferer.

The Grand Duke Vladimir of Russia, uncle of the Czar, while travelling incognito to Paris, was joined in his compartment by a handsome French lady, whose pleasant manners and interesting conversation helped very much to while away the tedium of the journey. So agreeably did she impress him that it was not until she had said good-by and departed in a cab that he realized that she had separated him from $40,000 worth of jewelry.

The amount of property in the form of jewelry stolen from hotels and in trains in Europe within the past ten years has been estimated roughly at $11,000,000. There is no more profitable and successful form of theft than this, especially when it is carried on in and around the great fashionable Winter resorts, where people of wealth are constantly coming and going.

The jewels are rarely recovered. The thieves always separate them from their settings, melt down the metal and distribute the stones widely among their confederates. They have to trust largely to one another's honor. When one of them is caught but little of the property is found on him, and he refuses to disclose the whereabouts of the rest, trusting that when he has served his sentence he will know where to find the greater part of his plunder.

The prevalence and success of this form of crime cause the police to attach great importance to the arrest of the Countess de Monteil, the most daring and resourceful practitioner of the villainous calling.

The arrest of the Countess created amazement in cosmopolitan society, for she had been a brilliant and conspicuous social figure at the Riviera Winter resorts. She is a handsome woman, of distinguished and imperious bearing, and dresses magnificently. She had been frequently in the society of persons of unquestioned rank and title, some of whom, perhaps, had been bribed to support her fraudulent pretences by her wealth and lavishness. She had also made the acquaintance of many Americans of the wealthiest classes, like the Vanderbilts and Morgans.

The Countess moved about from place to place with great frequency, stopping at every well-known resort from Aix-les-Bains, in France, to Cairo, in Egypt. She alleged that her health and nerves required her to travel a great deal. She always stopped at the best hotels, was very hospitable, made herself very attractive and agreeable in society, but always exacted the deference which she considered due to her rank.

Her travelling expenses were very large, and she had to keep doing something all the time to pay for them. She carried out many of her most daring and successful feats on the railways. There is no place that offers such a good opportunity for appropriating other people's property and getting away with it safely as a European railway train. A woman of

She would peep into the room, and if her victim was in bed she would stop still for a moment to find if he was awake. In case he stirred she need only remain still, and the chances are that he will go to sleep again, not realizing what has disturbed him.

Now she creeps up to the bed like a black panther. She has a sponge soaked with chloroform in her pocket. She stretches forth her arm and holds it to his nose. She can tell from the irregularity of his breathing and the beating of his heart how the anaesthetic is working. She gives him just enough to send him soundly to sleep, but not enough to kill him. Then she turns her attention to his property. She takes her time, for she is safe from disturbance. She secures everything worth having and takes nothing worthless. She is particularly careful to take the man's pocketbook, but she does not bother about the jewelry unless it is particularly valuable. When she has got everything she wants she glides back noiselessly to her room.

The morning after a robbery of this kind the Countess was usually told about it by a chambermaid of the hotel. Then she would become very much alarmed and indignant on account of her own jewels, and would insist on moving away at once.

"My jewels are extremely valuable," she said to one hotelkeeper; "worth over 300,000 francs. I cannot the numbers of the staterooms she had written the names of their occupants, and notes about their peculiarities and their possessions. For instance, she had written in one case, "No. 10. Valise with portfolio under seat. Very rich. Light sleeper. Robust. Chloroform."

She returned from America with plenty of money and jewels and a large collection of fine dresses. It was then that she was first known in France as the Countess de Monteil, a name which she probably assumed in America. The people who have made her acquaintance since then have never known her by any other name. When she first returned to France she occupied a handsome apartment at 28 Boulevard des Italiens, which, of course, is in the heart of Paris.

She moved in very good society and made many friends of unquestioned position. For instance, she has employed for years M. Guillaume Silvy, one of the leading lawyers of Paris, whose father was a Bonapartist deputy. When she was arrested this lawyer said he was astounded at the suggestion that she was not a genuine countess and was of bad character.

In her apartment the Countess had a handsome portrait of a man in general's uniform, who, she explained, was her father, General the Count de Monteil. It is quite easy to assume a bogus title in France and difficult to prevent anybody from using it, but anybody could have found out whether or not there was a general of a certain name in the French army. It is perfectly amazing that persons of social position should have accepted this impudent invention of a general who never existed. Many of the Countess's friends, it is explained were Americans and foreigners, not perfectly familiar with French institutions.

The last apartment of the Countess in Paris was at 3 Rue Galliard. It was here that her papers and other belongings were seized after dream of staying in a hotel where a man can steal into my bedroom at night without being seen and rob me of my jewels. It is outrageous—horrible! And it means gross carelessness on your part, Monsieur."

"The Police Inspectors, Who Had Been Shadowing Her for Several Weeks, Saw Her Through the Keyhole of the Door When She Was On the Point of Robbing the American. They Saw Her Climbing Into Her Victim's Room Through the Window, Which She Reached from the Window of an Adjoining Room. She Was Dressed in An Extraordinary Disguise, Consisting of Black Tights, a Black Coat, Black Slippers and a Thick Black Veil Thrown Over Her Face. In Her Hand Was a Revolver. They Seized Her Just as She Was Creeping to the Man's Bed to Give Him a Dose of Chloroform."

The hotelkeeper apologized abjectly, but without avail. She always moved away after one robbery had been committed in the hotel. At times her actions must have been suspicious, but her appearance was so imposing and her manner so imperious that people were afraid to accuse her.

Very often the landlord in his regret at his noble customer's annoyance would refuse to accept payment of his bill, and she, while declaring that this concession was of no importance, would usually accept it.

Once in Alexandria, in Egypt, in 1892, a hotel-keeper had the audacity to accuse her of being concerned in robbing an American staying at his hotel. The Countess prosecuted him, and obtained 500 francs damages, while he was compelled to publish an apology in three newspapers for three successive days at his own expense. After that she enjoyed complete freedom from interference with her operation until her recent arrest.

The police have now put together the history of the Countess from her earliest years. Her right name was Amelie Condemine, and she was born in Macon of a good middle-class family. She married M. Portal, a wine dealer, but his business affairs became unsatisfactory; they quarrelled, and finally she obtained a divorce.

In 1890 she went to America and remained there two years. Less is known about that period than any other part of her life, but there are evidences that she began her career of crime and adventure with great success in the United States. Among the articles seized at her flat in Paris was a photograph of herself taken near New York, about to start on a balloon ascent, but that was probably only an incidental pastime to her really serious occupations. The Countess is a first-class sportswoman and athlete.

Another curious article seized by the police was one of the usual plans of the staterooms furnished to passengers on transatlantic ships. It was a plan of the ship on which she returned to France. Against her arrest at Nice. The apartment was a model of artistic decoration. It das filled with art treasures and furnished with the finest authentic Louis XVI. furniture.

But, in addition to the art treasures, the police found 14 crowbars, 38 files of various sizes, 25 false keys and 27 ouistitis, or instruments specially designed for opening hotel doors.

Besides these technical implements of theft, the Countess had a large collection of weapons. Among them were six revolvers of various sizes and makes, including a tiny one that could be held in the palm of the hand and fired between the fingers; twelve knives and five weapons known as "eels," a French variety of the sandbag.

The "eel" is a long, slender bag of flexible black leather, filled with shot. The criminal holds it by one end, and as he swings at the head of his victim the shot runs down to the other end and increases the force of the blow, which has a paralyzing effect. The "eel," of course, is particularly adapted to the use of hotel robbers, for it makes no noise and leaves no telltale blood. In case the man who is being robbed wakes up in time to realize what is going on and tries to catch his plunderer there is nothing left to do but quiet him with the "eel." The Countess always carried one under her costume. It is suspected that she used it several times, for in not a few of the mysterious hotel and train robberies that have occurred within the last ten years the victim was found in a dazed condition from the result of a blow on the head.

The police also arrested her former husband, M. Portal, at the Hotel de la Plata, in Rue Geoffroy Marie, because they have learned that he visited her occasionally. In his rooms they discovered a trunk bearing her name, and when they opened it they found it filled with crowbars, false keys and other burglars' tools. The man declared that his wife had given him the trunk to take care of some years ago and that he had no idea what it contained. He admitted that he dined with his former wife from time to time and that he was ambitious to become her husband once more, but she was unwilling on account of her superior social position. The police are uncertain whether he was associated with his wife in her career of crime or not.

Three accomplices of the Countess were arrested. They were all men of good appearance, who carried on operations like the Countess in the leading Winter and Summer resorts of Europe. The three were Hyacinthe Canesa, who passed himself off as a Russian diplomat; Henri Jean Aguitton, who called himself a retired Secretary of Embassy in the French diplomatic service, and Marius Flandrin, who alleged that he was the son of a wealthy shipbuilder.

These three worked under the direction of the Countess. When she found herself making friends with a large coterie of very wealthy people she did not wish to break up her pleasant relations with them by robbing them immediately. So she indicated to one of her accomplices how he could pinch a trifle just to pay running expenses. When she had made certain where the biggest piece of plunder was she would take it herself, and then move on to another hotel, after making the usual loud complaints about the insecurity of the place she was leaving.

TEARFUL PHOTOGRAPH OF MISS CHARLOTTA GRAHAM, "THE SOUL WIDOW," AND SOME OF HER LOVE LETTERS.

MOURNING AT THE GRAVE.

The "Affinity" and "Soul Mate" and "Soul Wife" have figured frequently in the news reports of late, but it has remained for an unmarried young woman in Michigan to announce herself as a "Soul Widow." Miss Charlotta Graham, of Cassopolis, has put on deepest black and with tearful eyes sits at the grave of the late banker, Carlton W. Morgan, who was shot by Mrs. George Metzker recently. Mr. Mergan was a married man who had lost his heart to Miss Graham.

By CHARLOTTA GRAHAM.

CARLTON MORGAN'S grave is mine to weep over. Through his death my soul is widowed. Does it lessen my grief to remember that some words spoken before witnesses had made him the legal husband of another woman? Does that lessen my grief or make me less the widow of his soul—the soul that was mine only.

Why did I love Carlton Morgan?

Ask me why the grass grows, or the apple falls from the tree when it is ripe. Why does the river run down to the sea? Does any one rail at the river because it does not run up hill?

I loved Carlton Morgan because he was mine. God made him for me. He had not been taught to think, poor boy. He did not know the mere momentary fascination exercised by a woman over a man could be anything other than love. So he married two women who fascinated him and then—then he met his soul mate, his other half.

I saw him coming and knew before his hand ever had touched mine that Carlton Morgan was "the one man." When we shook hands it was a compact, an unspoken oath. It was the union of two souls by Divine will, then and there and forever. It was one of the marriages made in heaven that by their purity and permanency shame the world.

And so I was able to meet my beloved without shame, looking coldly into the eyes of the wicked. I laughed when they reviled. I knew they did not understand and I didn't want them to understand very much. My little world and Carlton's was our own and we did not want too many people in it. It was enough that we both understood and that God knew.

There was nothing of a low, sordid passion about our love. It was as pure as the driven snow that covers the ground like a mantle of charity in the merciful Winter days. When Carlton kissed me my soul thrilled. To sit beside him was to be perfectly happy—happy as a little child with its mother.

My soul weeps when I think that Carlton came here on that last fatal day to see me, and because I was ill and unable to leave my own home he went with George Metzker to pass the time at Mae Green's home. You see, poor boy, he could not come to my house. My invalid father could not understand my love for Mr. Morgan. My dear, good, old mother wept and pleaded with me that I renounce him. So I could not ask him there.

I knew he was coming. Lying ill there, I felt it. How I longed to rise and go to him, but it was impossible.

Then came the "Judas Girl," Maude Behrner. I never shall forget her as she tripped in and kissed me on the cheek and chirruped "Carlton's here—Carlton's here."

"I know he is," I said, and then cried for an hour, because I wanted to see Carlton ever so badly, and all I could do was hold out my arms to him, while that other woman, to whom he was less than nothing, could go right to him and talk to him—even sit beside him.

Then in the night came a messenger—the awful messenger of death. I felt it coming. I remember I was sitting up there in bed with staring eyes and gasping breath. The hand of death was at my door. I knew it.

Then I heard Death at the door say, "Carlton Morgan has been shot and killed."

Oh, God! To think that if I had only been able to see him he would never have been in the company of those people. If only he had been able to come to me, how bright everything would be to-day—what gay colors would shine where now all lies dark before me.

And they say I robbed a woman of her husband? That I was a creature lacking self respect; that I enslaved Carlton Morgan and made him a bad man.

If Carlton could speak he would tell the truth, that all might know it. What I took from Carlton Morgan was mine. No other woman ever possessed it. I had his love, and until he met me he never had loved.

What Carlton Morgan gave me I treasured above all else in the world. Had he left me wealth I would have rejected it. My ideal would have been destroyed.

What Carlton Morgan gave to his wife I did not covet. Our love was honorable. I loved him.

Now that he is dead he is still mine—more than ever mine. No one can stand between us now. It is I who am his widow, for no other soul was wedded to his soul.

The Proper Way to Pack a Trunk.

BEGIN by making a bottom layer of books, boxes, photographs and such uncompromising articles. Wedge these in very tightly, fitting them together nicely like a mosaic.

Next spread a layer of underclothing; arrange these neatly, those of a kind together, being sure that every button is in place, and the dainty ribbons as well, that all may be in readiness at the journey's end. Follow these with gowns, the heaviest always underneath. The corners of the hat box, and even the corners of the hats themselves, make safe places for dainty neckwear, ribbons, veils and such perishable belongings.

Handkerchiefs, gloves, etc., should be packed in the tray, in their own special cases. Pictures under glass may be carried in safety if wrapped in several thicknesses of paper, and laid between soft clothing. Small bric-a-brac and vases, if stuffed tightly with cotton wool or paper, and wrapped in corrugated paper, will carry well, but one should take care to place them near the middle of the trunk, so that no jarring can bring them into contact with the sides. Bottles should be carried in a hand satchel, where they can be investigated from time to time.

Last of all, to dispose of that goodly array of boots, slippers, ties, and foot-gear galore—a veritable "bete noir" of the packer. Wrap each shoe separately and tuck them away in odd corners and empty spaces at the last moment, for a skilful packer is never satisfied until every cranny and crevice is filled, and she knows from experience that the contents of a closely-packed trunk will always carry better than those that have room to move about.

Before the trunk is closed, fresh towels should be spread over the things to protect them from dust and the rubbing of the trays, for she who would excel in packing must be dainty as well as deft, and exercise both ingenuity and common sense.

A Whirlwind Campaign In the Clouds.

TO boom himself from up in a balloon.

Sounds odd, doesn't it?

Fancy taking your young wife 1,200 feet up, sky-high, and dragging her around the clouds by the help of a silk gas bag of 25,000 cubic feet capacity, just to get folks to listen to you when you tell them just why you ought to be Governor—Governor of the State of Wisconsin.

That's just what young "Sherbie" Becker, the enterprising ex boy Mayor of Milwaukee, has prepared to do. He went out of office Easter week. Now he begins the most sensational race for a gubernatorial nomination on record.

Young Mr. Becker always has loved to think up "stunts" that no man before him ever conceived. Quite often this has lifted him high above the heads of other men—men of conservative tastes and methods. Once or twice this peculiarity has made him look ridiculous—but only once or twice.

It has been this boldness and originality of manner that made him, though one of the youngest lawyers in Milwaukee, Mayor of that city, and will make his administration memorable as long as the history of the beer city is written.

By the same methods—only more so—he expects to become Governor now.

In this ambition his young and attractive wife, who has always been hand-in-glove with him, as a loyal and devoted little wife should be, in all his projects, and even in this, the wildest political prank of all, she will be his partner and companion, sharing with him all the risks and remaining at his side as he soars into the clouds to boom himself.

Ex-Mayor Becker tells very carefully and with minute detail just why he is going to make his campaign this way. His best friends smile tolerantly at his serious complacency, and say that is all very well, but they know the real reason—to attract attention. It's the way the boy Mayor has with him.

Be that as it may, Mr. Becker has ordered from a St. Louis balloon manufacturing concern a monster gas bag. The car, excellently furnished and equipped, is to accommodate six passengers and all the necessaries of a successful and extended air trip.

In Wisconsin there is a direct primary law. Of course the bosses control the nominations to a large extent. But, under the provisions in the statutes, it is quite possible for a man who is successful in a popular campaign by personal appeal to defeat the plans hatched by the bosses.

Mr. Becker plans to stump the whole state and expects to put in five months doing it. For the major portion of Wisconsin he plans to use one of his several fast motor cars.

But there are certain large and important sections of the State where automobiles cannot successfully travel. For instance, the entire northwest portion of the State is almost impassable to the ordinary automobile, because of its dense woods, rough and broken roads, and vast stretches of prairie.

How to get his voice into the ear of every resident of this vast territory has been a problem of much moment with the ambitious young St. George against the "Dragon of Graft."

He told his predicament to a Chicago motor expert first in the hope that he might get some sort of a car especially built for just the requirements of his tour.

It chanced that the expert in question was also an enthusiast on airships and balloons and is president of a Chicago aero club.

"Why not try a balloon?" suggested the friend.

"Up in a balloon, boys, up in a balloon," he hummed, "what a stunt!"

The boy Mayor fell in with the suggestion at once. It tickled not only his sense of the unique, the bold, the sensational, but looked to him entirely feasible and practicable. To think was to act. He at once began his plans for the novel experiment.

First his enemies got wind of the scheme and they pooh-poohed the idea. "A balloon campaign? Gas," they cried. "Gas bag campaign. Its only cackle—sound and fury, signifying nothing."

Then his friends got the news. They gaped at the idea, even for Sherbie. They called on him and said:

"Now, look here, old man. We like you. We think you are the curly haired wonder, and the boy phenomenon, and all that sort of thing. But shake that idea out of your brain. The honest farmer will give you the rural laugh and you will be food for the feature writers and the joke papers forever."

But Mr. Becker shook them off, smiled and said quietly he had made up his mind to do it.

The greatest difficulty in his path lay in the direction of pretty Mrs. Becker, the recently "first lady" of Milwaukee and the first lady in the heart of its Mayor.

He pondered long over the quandary. He realized that a certain amount of hazard lurked in the enterprise. He knew that his wife would want to come along, nevertheless. He wanted her along, too, yet he wanted her kept safe and didn't want to imperil her life in a risky project.

Finally he did what many husbands before him have found a good plan in similar contingencies. He asked her squarely.

Mrs. Becker has never been in a balloon in her life. She has accompanied her husband to distant points of the world and shared with him in many strange and exciting adventures, but aeronautics are to her as strange as Greek.

She pondered a moment—just one brief moment—then she laid her hand on his arm and said.

"I'll go along, Sherbie, if you'll take me. Please let me go."

So he beamed and smiled and said he would take her and that they would rise and fall together on the success or failure of the plan as it might pan out.

The balloon car will be stocked with plenty of food, enough to last many weeks, to provide for any emergency in case the machine might become unmanageable and get to wandering haphazard up yonder.

A balloon chauffeur, if an engineer of an air car may thus be termed, has already been engaged. He is an expert and guided one of the balloons in the transcontinental flight from St. Louis several months ago which attracted the attention of the world.

The balloon is to be geared with so sensitive an apparatus that Mr. Becker anticipates no trouble in its steering. He has a theory that a proper study of the strata of air enables a trained operator to find accurately the needed heights for any given direction and he says that the gearing will be so adjusted that he can rise or fall to any wanted altitude with fine certainty.

In out-of-the-way places, where no fit platforms for the Becker oratory are arranged, he plans to anchor his strange vehicle to a tree or fence post, and, from an elevation of ten or fifteen feet, address the wide-eyed farmers over the side of the basket.

He thinks that in all he will probably have to travel about one thousand miles, as figured in latitude and longitude, in the balloon. With the ups and downs required for skidding back and forth, however, it is likely that the balloon will traverse several times that distance in all from the start to the finish.

He plans to make the start from Oshkosh, and after a few days of experimenting sail straight along with his boom from a balloon.

The "Girl-in-Pie" Comes Back to Life!

ANSWER.—Mr. Thaw told me he had found out more about the "Girl-in-the-Pie," and he said that she had died in want, and that Stanford White had never bothered to do anything for her, and she was buried in Potter's Field. —FROM EVELYN THAW'S TESTIMONY AT THE THAW TRIAL.

THE PIE DINNER.

SADIE JOHNSON, the famous "Girl-in-the-Pie," who figured conspicuously in the Thaw murder trial, is alive and living in New York. It was brought out in evidence in the Thaw trial that Stanford White had been present at a notorious dinner given in Mr. James Breese's studio in New York.

The climax of this orgy was reached when half a dozen sturdy waiters brought an enormous pie into the room and carefully placed it on the table. A moment later the pie was opened and out stepped a very beautiful young girl clad in filmy gauze, while a dozen mocking birds and doves fluttered forth from the pie.

When the dinner was over the "girl-in-the pie" was carried off into captivity by Stanford White. Her name was Sadie Johnson. It was developed at the Thaw trial that Harry Thaw had told the story of Stanford White and Sadie Johnson to Evelyn Thaw, and an effort was made to find the famous "girl-in-the-pie." Mr. Thaw was informed and told Evelyn that Miss Johnson had died in poverty and neglect and was buried in Potter's Field.

This was the testimony of Evelyn in regard to what Stanford White and Harry Thaw had told her about Sadie Johnson, the "pie-girl":

QUESTION (by Lawyer Delmas)—Was there anything said by Mr. Thaw to you upon the subject of any other young woman in connection with Stanford White?

ANSWER (by Evelyn Thaw)—Yes.

Mr. Delmas handed the codicil of her husband's will to the witness and she looked at the names mentioned therein. Mr. Delmas then continued his examination.

"In that connection, was there any statement made by Mr. Thaw to you, and by him, in connection with a young girl, which in the conversations between you was spoken of as the 'pie girl?' "

"Yes," replied Mrs. Thaw.

Q. And he spoke of her as the 'pie girl' too? A. I don't remember his mentioning her name.

Q. Tell us what you told Mr. Thaw ...at Mr. White had told you. A. I told Mr. Thaw what Mr. White had said.

Q. Well, what was it? A. He said there had been a large stag dinner or supper—I forget which—and that this girl, a very young girl, I think he said she was fifteen years old and she had a very beautiful figure—she was an artists' model; and that it was the best stunt he had done at the supper; he seemed very proud of it.

And he said that he had a large pie, a great, big pie; and he took and had this girl put in the pie in some way, and also had some birds put in the pie with her, and that this pie was brought in and set upon the table.

And that somebody cut the pie open, and that when the pie opened this little girl stood up in the middle of the table; and she just had a little gauze dress on—nothing else. And all the birds flew out—and he said it was a great hit, and it was the best thing he had ever done of the kind.

That was what I told Mr. Thaw that I knew. Then I said I asked Mr. White what the trouble was after, and then he said they had a terrible time over this girl—that the whole thing got into the newspapers."

Q. Did the subject of this girl that was then called the "pie-girl" come up at other times, and was her subsequent story told you by Mr. Thaw, or told by others in Mr. Thaw's presence and yours? A. Yes.

Q. Now we will take up the last or third conversation you have mentioned? A. The third was in Pittsburg, after we had married. Mr. Thaw told me he had found out more about the "Girl-in-the-Pie," and he said that she had died; and that she had been married, that she had married some man, and that after the marriage this man had found out this story about this girl, and had left her or turned her away. I don't remember exactly, but she had trouble with her husband, and he said she had died in want, and that Stanford White had never bothered to do anything for her after that, and she was buried in Potter's Field."

"Yes, I am Sadie Johnson, the 'pie girl,' " said Miss Johnson at her home in New York last Tuesday. "I read in the papers the testimony of Evelyn Thaw that I was dead and buried. I did not make any denial, because I had no desire to be brought in as a witness in the murder trial.

"I do not care to speak about my experience with Stanford White after the famous pie dinner. I have been married and have lately been on the stage, because my husband lost his money and I was compelled to support myself. This last season I have been with Gus Hill's 'Happy Hooligan' company. This company has now closed for the season, and I am busy preparing a dancing act under the direction of Constantine. I expect to be ready in a few weeks and shall probably make engagements for some of the Summer resorts this Summer.

"I was in Lexington, Ky., playing with a theatrical company when I read of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's testimony about myself. Nobody in the company happened to know me as the 'pie girl,' and as I have been playing in the West, everybody believed I was dead and buried in an unnamed grave in Potter's Field.

"Last week when I came to New York I began to have many surprising experiences with friends and acquaintances who had known me in years past. Even my solemn assurances that I am still alive in the flesh seemed, at first, to stagger them; but I am glad to be able to say that I am very grateful that I am still very much alive, and very grateful that I am not in a grave in Potter's Field.

"I have never met Harry Thaw and I do not know how he got it into his crazy head that I was dead and buried. Of course, my part in the pie dinner was well known to many, and it was known, too, that Stanford White stole me and carried me off that night. It was, I think, printed in the papers when the 'pie-girl' got married. But the rest of the story Thaw told his wife was one of his crazy dreams."

NEW PORTRAIT OF SADIE JOHNSON, THE STANFORD WHITE "PIE GIRL," AND PHOTOGRAPHED IN STAGE COSTUME.

Why Young Men Should Marry.

THE world is full of foolish bachelors. They are running around spending their money in all sorts of profitless ways, when they would be much better off spending it in supporting a wife and family.

As bachelors they have nothing to show for the money spent. As married men they would have a wife, home and family.

As a young man the bachelor is free from responsibility and at liberty to spend all he earns upon himself.

But as an old man he is simply forlorn.

Most men seem to have an idea that they can marry any woman at any age.

It is a mistaken idea, however. It may be possible for any man to marry, but it is not possible for him to pick and choose, especially after he is an unattractive old bachelor.

A man should marry between the ages of twenty-five and thirty-five. After the latter age he is beginning to get crabbed and fussy in his ways.

There is a great deal of talk about old maids being fussy and prim in their ways, but as a matter of fact they are not half as much so as old bachelors.

The married man makes a far better citizen than the bachelor. The points at issue in the city's government are of more vital interest to him.

The bachelor is selfish, thinking only of himself and his own pleasures.

The married man spends his life working for others. All that is best in him is developed and broadened, while all that is best in the bachelor is cramped and narrowed.

The married man mellows with age, the bachelor grows crusty or foolish.

There is no more forlorn sight than a lonely old bachelor. No matter how well off he is, he gets a neglected, shabby appearance.

An old maid can usually gather a few household goods about her and make a cosy nook for herself, even if her only home be a hall bedroom.

But the bachelor lives in a state of chronic untidiness and discomfort.

WALTER WINANS, AMERICAN MILLIONAIRE AND CHAMPION RIFLE AND PISTOL SHOT, WHO WILL REPRESENT THE UNITED STATES IN THE INTERNATIONAL DUELLI G CONTESTS AT LONDON THIS SUMMER.

Bloodless Pistol Battles With Wax Bullets.

ONE of the odd features of the Franco-British Exhibition at London this year will be the duelling arena.

It is a little fenced off enclosure, at Shepherd's Bush, near the great Stadium where the Olympic games will be played.

Here Frenchmen, Englishmen and even Americans will meet each other every day in apparently deadly combat. They will go through all the forms of a real French affair of honor.

Seconds will be chosen, distances paced off—and at the umpire's signal pistols will flash. Everything will be realistic and exciting but there will be no bloodshed. For the bullets will be of wax. But even so they will strike with a wicked "spat." Consequently shields have been devised for the eyes, nose and hands.

This sort of duelling for sport will be under the direction of Dr. Devillers of Paris. He devised the methods about two years ago in order to train Frenchmen for meeting their foes in earnest. Accordingly the procedures are strictly according to the French practice.

A feature of these mock duels which will lend especial interest to the subject on this side of the Atlantic is the fact that Mr. Walter Winans will act as champion for the United States. He is a celebrated pistol and rifle shot and the Britishers and Frenchmen will find in him a formidable opponent.

Dr. Devillers is now training a number of men in duelling at the Jardin de Paris. The opponents or "foes," stand at twenty or twenty-five yards distance.

"Are you ready?" asks the commandant—and the combatants raise their arms at the word "Fire"—This is but a signal for aiming. It is quickly followed by "One, two, three"—and the opponents must shoot before the word three is pronounced.

As the pistols flash the wax bullets strike and explode upon the [illegible] black coats, leaving big, white blotches. They have been chalked so as to distinctly mark the striking spots. The man whose bullet strikes nearest to a vital point, such as the heart, is awarded the victory.

Sometimes the combatants are placed back to back. They walk fifteen or twenty steps in opposite directions, quickly turn round at the order and fire at once.

A third way is called "au vise." In this method of duelling the oponents aim at each other so long as they choose before firing. But shooting "at command" is generally done in real duels, so this method will be generally followed in the duelling sport.

The face mask consists of a piece of heavy plate glass held in place before the eyes by a hard rubber nosepiece. This will effectively protect the eyes from the wax bullets. Over the head and forehead and coming down to the eyebrows is a cap with a hard enamel surface, looking like old-fashioned mail. Another kind of mask is made of stiff rubber and covers face, head and neck completely.

A heart-shaped steel shield fitted to the pistol directly in front of the trigger protects the shooter's hand. The "foes" wear long black blouses of a kind of rubber cloth, like machintoshes. The exploding bullets make white spots, which are easily washed or rubbed off. The bullets expand on striking and thus appear to explode, leaving a big, sticky mass on the coat.

The wax bullets are put into shells like the regulation metal bullet, and behind them is a regular charge of powder, which shoots the bullet at the usual initial speed of ninety-five yards a second, so that their impact on any exposed part of the body would cause a severe smart or an actual wound.

But notwithstanding this, one famous pistol shot has declared his intention of not wearing a mask, and will take the chances of being struck in the eyes.

Aiming at the head, however, will be considered "bad form" and will be discountenanced.

Dr. Devillers, who has charge of the mock duelling, is well known personally in sporting circles in Paris. Many of his pupils have fought real duels. All of these gentlemen and a hundred or so others have joined the society he has formed for indulging in duelling as a sport.

They count among their ranks some of the best shots in France. They are now in training with a view to far outdo the Britishers and Americans at the coming Franco-British exhibition in London. This fair will be held under the auspices of the Federation Nationale des Societes d'Escrimes et Salle d'Armes de France.

The only American who has thus far announced his intention of entering the list is Mr. Walter Winans, as above stated. But in him both Britishers and Frenchmen know that they have a most skillful antagonist. He is a world's champion rifle and pistol shot. Besides, that, he is a great horseman, a sculptor of note and the possessor of many millions.

Singularly enough Mr. Winans has never been in his "native" country. He was born in St. Petersburg fifty-three years ago, while his father was constructing railroads for the Russian Government. The elder Winans was the builder of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and made his millions in that and other great railroad enterprises.

After the coming Franco-British exhibition Mr. Winans intends to come to the United States to live. The yearning to see the land of his father has grown stronger and stronger of late years and has determined not to die "expatriated."

Mr. Winans has never displayed the least desire for business pursuits, preferring to spend his life in the field of art, and in [illegible] pleasure, instead of adding to an already large fortune. Horses have been his particular fad.

When Alfred Vanderbilt and Ogden Armour "invaded" England at the recent international horse show in London, and threatened to carry off all the honors, Mr. Winans came forward with his horses, and took nearly all the honors for his "adopted" country.

BLUE eyes are said to be the weakest.

Wide-open eyes are indicative of rashness.

Small eyes are supposed to indicate cunning.

Side-glancing eyes are always to be distrusted.

Brown eyes are said by oculists to be the strongest.

The downcast eye has in all ages been typical of modesty.

People of melancholy temperament rarely have clear blue eyes.

When the upper lid covers half or more of the pupil the indication is of cool deliberation.

Gray eyes turning green in anger or excitement are indicative of a choleric temperament.

An eye the upper lid of which passes horizontally across the pupil indicates mental ability.

Unsteady eyes, rapidly jerking from side to side, are frequently indicative of an unsettled mind.

Eyes that are wide apart are said by physiognomists to indicate great intelligence and a tenacious memory.

Eyes placed close together in the head are said to indicate pettiness of disposition, jealousy and a turn for fault-finding.

THE MAN WHO STOLE THE EARTH

Most Thrilling Novel of Love and Adventure Since Jules Verne's Masterpiece.

By W. Holt White.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

The King of Balkania, who has a place at Cookham-on-Thames, where he is known as Mr. Montgomery Jones, is shot at from a launch by an emissary of his enemy, the King of the Sylvanians. Mr. Jones escapes, and himself shoots one of the men in the launch. The affair is witnessed by John Strong, son of Sir John Strong, who comes across the river and remarks that it seems a mistake to allow the companion of the dead man to escape. Mr. Jones replies no, as he is certain that he will return. He does so, and begs assistance to bury his dead. Strong too, lends his aid, as he is in love with the Princess Diana, who is known as Miss Diana Jones. As they take turn in digging a grave Strong ponders on the airship invention of his friend, Joe Langley, and wonders how he can utilise it to win the Princess Diana. They have scarcely buried the Sylvanian when the Princess appears on the scene. Strong asks Mr. Jones for the Princess' hand, and tells him how, by means of Langley's airship, he means to become master of the earth. The King "calls" his "bluff." Strong then enlists the airship inventor, Joe Langley, in his great enterprise of winning the King's daughter. But first, before attempting to accomplish the gigantic scheme that is hatching in his brain to conquer the girl and the earth at the same time, Strong and Langley first put out on a night voyage to test the machine. Their journey in the dark, over the world asleep, is an adventure of marvel piled on top of marvel.

Strong, assured that his night's adventures—including a pot shot at the air ship by the King—will be in the morning papers, advises the police to dig in the King's garden. Meantime he sees Princess Dianna and confides in her. The King embarrassed by the digging of the police in his garden, charges the outrage to Strong, a repetition of which will mean "another grave in this plantation."

STRONG laughed. "Possibly," he said, "but it will not be mine."

Strong and Langley spent the afternoon in the launch beneath the willows. Langley was perplexed on many points, but Strong was gay and voluble in explanation. The tragedy of the thing did not weigh on his spirits in the least.

One thing appeared to prey on Langley's mind. "I cannot help it, old fellow," he said to Strong. "I really can't help it, but I keep on thinking of those words of Jones's. You know the ones I mean—'another grave in this plantation.' "

He caught at Strong's hand. "Don't be mad enough—don't be fool enough to go back. I know you mean to—I have seen it in your face all this afternoon. You mean to go back to Diana. It isn't worth it, old man—it isn't worth it. Believe me," he pleaded, with tears in his eyes, "it really is not worth it."

Strong turned on him in a blaze of anger. "How dare you say that to me," he demanded, "about the Princess Diana?"

The clouds which had been gathering throughout the afternoon now loomed black overhead. Under the branches of the willows it was almost pitch dark.

"I don't mean it in that way about Diana," said Langley. "You know I don't mean it in that way. I mean, old fellow, that I cannot afford to lose you. I can't spare you. I daren't let you go. The police have gone, it is true; but you know and I know well enough that the rhododendrons are not empty. We both saw those fellows come down this afternoon, and you have reason to dread them far more than you have reason to fear the police. That brute of a King of Balkania does not send for cut-throats of that sort without purpose. It would be madness to go back."

Strong, his anger passed, patted Langley on the head, as he might have done a child. "Cheer up, sonny!" he said. "Cheer up!" Cheer up! For I am going back. I promised Di. I should be a laggard in love indeed if I did not keep my tryst."

"But you can't go back," said Langley, in a whisper, glancing about him in the darkness, as though every word he uttered were being recorded by invisible spies. "If you take the punt across to-night it's a thousand to one you're spotted, and they would knock you on the head from the bank, the blackguards! And then," he added, with a falter in his voice, "there would be that other grave."

CHAPTER XII.

A Dangerous Tryst.

"YOU chucklehead!" said Strong. "Do you think that I am running my head into a noose, or, at any rate, do you think I am shoving it where it is likely to get a good hard knock? You must be a chump! I am not going by boat; I am going by water."

He turned sharp around to Langley in the gloom, and there was excitement in his face. From his pocket he drew a six-shooter and put into Langley's hands.

"Remember," he said, "that your life and mine, and perhaps Diana's, will very shortly hang on this craft of ours; so you are here on sentry-go, my boy, and don't forget your duty. Meantime," and here he laughed a queer little laugh, "I am off to the trysting-place.

"So long."

He hoisted his enormous body gently over the side of the launch and dropped with the faintest splash into the river.

Without another word he began to swim quietly away. With affectionate, frightened and utterly dumfounded eyes Langley watched Strong's head bobbing through the black water—a little black patch that showed only just blacker than the black stream itself.

Strong trod the water and let the tide carry him down the stream. He was in no mind to land opposite the Bungalow, for there he would be received with the open arms of enmity. Therefore, he drifted down toward Maidenhead for three hundred yards or so. Then he landed, wrung the water out of his dripping canvas trousers and out of his shirt, pulled his belt one hole tighter and braced himself for his prowl back through the bushes to Mr. Jones's house.

First he walked straight away from the water, afterward making a detour round to the back of the house.

Somewhere close at hand a dog yapped; a voice cursed the animal. Again there was silence, and Strong threaded his way past the stables, and so came to the left wing of the low-built, straggling building.

Diana's room, he knew, was on the north side of the house. Beneath her window ran a path, bordered by a wide box hedge. He crept along the further side of the hedge until he came opposite to the light which he was seeking. He crept into the thickness of the hedge and lay down there for a little while, the myriads of little dry leaves among which he crouched drying the water from him.

A big veranda ran entirely around the house, the roof of it forming a balcony, which in its turn circled completely around the building. A Virginia creeper, trained from the ground to the roof, served as a thin screen between the windows and the balustrade of the balcony. From his hiding place in the box hedge Strong hooted feebly, like a young owl. Strong had hooted before, and he knew that Diana would understand.

The light went out, and presently his eyes, by this time accustomed to the dark, could discern a white figure half hidden behind the tracery of the creeper.

Thrusting his head out of the hedge to look to the right and left, he gave a quick, comprehensive glance all over the face of the building. Everything was very still, and there was no sign of any movement.

He stepped quickly across the path and sheltered as much as he could in the shadows of the veranda. Then, craning upwards, he called "Di!" so softly that his voice only just carried to the balcony above.

A rumpled head was thrust through the creepers, and in the gloom Strong caught a glint of Diana's white teeth bared in a wide smile.

"Hush!" she whispered from above him.

"He felt the flesh burst on his knuckles * * * and then his assailant, with a yell of agony, fell back into the bushes."

"Listen!" said Strong, though there was no occasion to use the word. "Listen! I want to speak to you quickly on a matter which is urgent."

His tone was cold, almost dictatorial.

"Another lecture, I suppose," breathed Diana, "from the man who steals the earth! And there you are, conqueror of the universe and unable to reach your lady's bower." She laughed lightly, and again the dog by the stables yapped.

"You will see," said Strong, pulling a voluminous handkerchief from his pocket and running it about breast high around the pillar of the veranda. With the loose ends he made a loop; a second later he had shinned up and got his right foot firmly fixed in the loop. With a swift, silent jump, he was astride the balustrade. Gently he climbed over and drew near to Diana in the darkness.

"Who says that I cannot reach my lady's bower?" he asked.

"Yes," said Diana, "but not boldly or openly. I don't know that I want a knight who steals upon me like a thief."

The patter of the water dripping from Strong's clothes arrested her attention. She peered at him, and then put out her hand and touched him.

"Why, you are wringing wet," she said.

"I know," said Strong; "I swam here.

"Surely, you know," continued Strong, "that your father's 'hired assassins,' or whatever particular name he calls his retainers by, arrived here this afternoon, and they are swarming in the garden now. Well, I am too young and life is too sweet for me to appreciate the feel of cold steel in my ribs."

Again Diana laughed, and the callousness of laughter at such a time wounded Strong not a little.

"It is rather funny," he said, "isn't it," with a tinge of bitterness "to think that I must come here like a thief and run the risk of murder?"

But Diana only mocked him. "Surely," she taunted, "the man who steals the earth is not afraid of that?"

"Di! Di!" cried Strong, "let us stop this foolery and be serious. This is the beginning of serious things."

"For you or for me?" asked Diana.

"For both, dear; for both. I am in for it now up to the hilt, and therefore you are in it, too."

"So!" said Diana. She made a little curtsey.

Strong caught her hand. "Am I not to be your knight?" he asked, "even if I steal you?"

"My dear boy," answered Diana, "you have got a great deal of theft to perpetrate first. There's the earth, you know."

"Yes, yes," said Strong. "All in good time. If Rome was not built in a day, you can't steal the earth in a week. If I did steal it, would you—would you then stop laughing for once and marry me?"

"Well, yes," said Diana. "I think if you accomplished anything so colossal as that, I really would, and yet I don't see how—unless you propose to make papa abdicate or rob him of his kingdom and get yourself crowned in his place—that the match will be possible at all.

"What utter nonsense all this is!" she continued. "Here you stand, talking of monarchs and kings and stealing the world and a few other small matters, as if such things were trifles to be got through between breakfast and lunch. Why, I haven't even seen that airship of yours yet, and unless it is wonderful indeed, all your pretty scheming must fall with a bump to the ground—like your airship, I should think."

Strong drew nearer to Diana in the darkness, as near as he dared on account of the wetness of his clothes. He had it in his mind to cry out that his heart was very tender and very hungry, and that Diana's words hurt him beyond measure, but then his pride took hold of him, and forebore. It was, perhaps, well for him that he did so.

He changed his ground, and, falling in with Diana's mood, began to laugh himself. "Seeing is believing, I suppose," he said, "and therefore you shall see. I tell you what, Di, I tell you what—I will get back now, and then come back again, if you will wait. I will go back and fetch the ship, and if you will just stay here you shall behold me—master of the situation and master of the air, hanging around your balcony like a species of aerial motor-omnibus."

"But it will be tricky work. It means dodging back through your father's men below and then another swim. But that will do me good, for, upon my soul, when one's wet the Summer night is not so warm as one thinks it is." He shivered a little.

Diana was looking out across the garden. "If you are cold," she said, "it seems to me that there is a good-sized fire over there at which you will be able to warm yourself."

Strong followed her pointing hand, and from the other side of the river he saw rising a red, steady glare. Even as he looked long tongues of flame shot up above the red haze.

"Good Lord!" he cried. "The devils! Oh, the devils!"

Diana had half a mind to rebuke him for his forgetfulness of her presence, but, beholding the amazement and the anger on his face, she remained silent. Then she asked, in a hard voice, as Strong still stared, fascinated by the blaze:

"Am I to suppose that this is my father's handiwork."

"I'm afraid it is, my dear," said Strong. "I am very much afraid it is. In any case, it needs my immediate attention. Some pleasant person is evidently trying to burn my bungalow down, or, at any rate, the shed."

"And the airship?" asked Di.

"The airship," said Strong. "Oh, that is safe enough for me to fulfil my promise of coming back to you. But this is where I cease love-making," he added, "and get to work. I will say au revoir!"

The prospect of the struggle across the water had brought back his good humor. He encased one of Diana's little hands in his own huge grasp, lifted her fingers to his lips and kissed them. Then he scrambled lightly over the balustrade and slid down the post. He was quite methodical, and did not forget to unloose the handkerchief which he had bound about the pillar of the veranda. When he had unloosed it he waved it lightly to Diana and plunged through the boxwood hedge.

A moment later, regardless of the many risks he might be running, he was racing down the path through the bushes toward the plaster Cupid, and so on to the river bank.

As he approached the clearing his quick eye, though he was running at top speed, caught a shifting shadow in the gap about the Cupid. It was a shadow that retracted suddenly and disappeared beyond a clump of bushes.

Strong therefore swerved to the right to give the retracted shadow as much space as he could. The way was narrow, but there was no other course open to him.

Of them Strong took no heed, but jumped into the water and began to swim with a strong, steady breast stroke. Even in his haste he had the wisdom to choose this method of swimming, knowing that it left his body less exposed than if he were swimming with a side stroke. He suspected, and suspected rightly, that the men on the bank would recognize him and appreciate the reason for his swim, and would not be slow to stop him if they could.

He was right.

There came a crack from behind him, and something splashed the water beside his face. There was another crack, and the water splashed into his eyes. That time the mark had been overshot. Again there was a crack, and a third bullet went singing past his ears, and ploughing into the stream an inch or so before his face, sent up a splash that half-blinded him.

Strong even then turned his head and laughed as he swam on. No more shots came, and he reckoned himself safe.

He climbed like an otter up the further bank, and went bursting into the bungalow and out into the space behind it. As he had guessed it would be, the shed was enveloped in flame.

Langley, with a white face, was standing beside the water-butt swiftly bailing out pail after pail of water and dashing it frenziedly into the fire before him.

Strong, without a word, wrenched the bucket from his hand. "That's no good, my boy," he shouted. "Not the least good in the world. Let her burn—there's nothing in it now that matters. I suppose the 'Di' is all right?"

"Under the willows," said Langley.

"Then get back to her, you cuckoo, and sit tight, and, mark you, if men come trespassing at night in this country with intent to do your property any harm, they can't complain if they get hurt. You understand what I mean?"

He smacked a hand on to Langley's hip and felt the outline of the six-shooter which still was there.

Langley nodded, and without more ado began to run along the bank towards the willows.

The heat from the burning shed was so fierce that Strong felt the scorch of it even where he stood, against the wall of the bungalow; but in spite of the heat he began to throw pail after pail of water against the sides and over the roof of the bungalow to prevent the little building becoming scorched.

He worked like a demon for five minutes, and then noted that the glare and the heat were less intense. The shed was burning out.

Two men came round the corner of the bungalow and surveyed the scene. By the light of the fire Strong could see that one of them was Mr. Jones. It was Mr. Montgomery Jones, perfectly cool and collected, even debonair, lightly polishing his glasses with the aid of a silk handkerchief.

HER NEW "JUMPER" AND HER PARASOLS,

by MRS. CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER.

One Thousand Dollars a Set for Parasol Tips and Handle. Hand-Painted Chiffon and Leather Trimmed Silk Two Extravagances in Parasol Coverings.

A[illegible] jumper dresses [illegible] who [illegible] for [illegible] Summer was [illegible] with [illegible] (realizing common [illegible] wear them) — must now [illegible] the [illegible] for [illegible] case of [illegible] one will wear them" with [illegible] affection.

[illegible] for another [illegible] most [illegible] but a [illegible]

And, indeed, one wonders what one did before these convenient dresses were invented. They are suitable for so many [illegible] and fill the breach between the "severely simple" and the elaborately frilly" most nobly.

We find them shown this Spring in all styles, all colors, in nearly all materials. In many ways they repeat the jumper frocks of last Summer, but this year's models show several new points. The shaped piece or box plait running from [illegible] to hem, straight down the centre front, the newly acquired sleeves, the application of embroidered yokes or yokes of contrasting materials below the cut-out top, the more often used belt which usually ends on either side of the centre front—all these innovations mark the 1908 models.

Silks, voiles and lightweight woolen materials of all kinds will be used in these dresses, but the models of linen are particularly attractive and shown over guimpes of sheer white lace [illegible] and hand-embroidered look suggestively Summer like.

The touches of subdued or vivid colors which are a feature of this year's white gowns are seen on jumper dresses of white or ecru linen. Skilfully [illegible] they are most effective and give a character which would oftentimes be otherwise lacking. Dull blue, dull green and violet, that sympathetic color, are most often used in touches of embroidery. Embroidered dots of various sizes are again a much liked feature, but the embroidery runs toward delicacy rather than elaboration.

Skirts of jumper dresses are again cut on the side-plaited model or occasionally circular. As these frocks are for informal wear, the skirts are always walking length. They are most often made without trimming except for bias folds, although sometimes touches of embroidery are discreetly applied toward the hem.

The waists are usually made separate and joined to the skirt by various contrivances. Sometimes a narrow cording is used in making waist and skirt into one. Sometimes a fitted belt is frankly used, but almost invariably the line from yoke to hem is left unbroken in front. If there is a belt it slips under this front piece.

The opening at the neck through which the guimpe is seen may be cut almost any shape to suit the designer's taste, and yet be all that is fashionable. For round, square and V-shaped openings are all used. Around this neck opening quite elaborate trimming is arranged. It is sometimes applied in several overlapping shaped pieces, the same sort of trimming being used on the sleeves.

No longer is the kimono sleeve seen in up-to-date jumper frocks. It has been retired in favor of various models of cape-like sleeves, which sometimes extend quite to the elbow. The white guimpe sleeve is seldom permitted to be seen above the elbow.

Braiding is the distinctively smart trimming for all kinds of jumper dresses. Even a very economical touch of soutache braiding can give an "air" not obtainable in any other way. White soutache braiding on colored linen applied on a white dress [illegible] models.

An original [illegible] of braiding is shown on the figure [illegible] A. The skirt is made in striking fashion, each gore being laid open over an underpiece of heavily braided linen with worked buttonholes on one side and white braid buttons on the other to suggest a closing. The waist part of this dress has the braiding applied in a broad band in the square shape still so fashionable. A short waisted effect is obtained by the length of unbroken skirt line, which extends to just below the bust in front. The sleeves are cape-like affairs, heavily braided and trimmed with the same style buttons as are used on the skirt.

While this particular gown was first [illegible] and afterwards embroidered, here is a [illegible] suggestion for the use of [illegible] bordered materials which have [illegible] this season in such a charming [illegible]

Finely tucked bands of the material of [illegible] the gown is made and brilliantly colored oriental embroidery on filet net are used as trimming in the gown lettered [illegible] Here we have the popular side [illegible] skirt with the waist attached under a rather wide belt. The sleeves are [illegible] with bands of the tucking and are themselves composed of the embroidered filet net.

Braiding has entered even the domain of the parasol, and some of the smartest, to say nothing of the most expensive Spring models [illegible] show borders of fine silk braiding in a color harmonizing with the color of the parasol.

Just now it is a fad to lavish much [illegible] appalling amount of cash [illegible] those necessary accessories [illegible] dress. No gems are too [illegible] workmanship too fine, to [illegible] and handles which go to further decorate parasols, which are [illegible] works of art in beauty of silk and hand [illegible]

Handles [illegible] come in for an unusual amount of attention from the designers and I see ones of knobby gold encrusted [illegible] amethysts or more precious [illegible] long row of parasol handles [illegible] ends in cool-looking straight [illegible] raffia, set sparsely with [illegible] some other inexpensive stones.

[illegible] with plumage of red, green and yellow [illegible] other parasols [illegible] wise looking black [illegible] eyes is supposed to [illegible] the owner of the parasol [illegible] In Paris the women [illegible] themselves and their friends by some mild betting on the "little horses" which run their miniature race inside the crystal ball top of their parasol handles. In others a secret spring being [illegible] the top flies open disclosing a tiny powder puff and mirror or a [illegible]

All kinds of odd materials are this year pressed into the service of [illegible] parasols. Chiffon is not considered too diaphanous, nor leather too heavy or [illegible] for braving the sun's strong rays and protecting delicate skins. Brown suede is cut into patterns and applied as a border on pongee silk, the handle of the parasol being also covered with the leather. Parasols of mousseline de soie with satin striped borders are exquisitely hand painted in designs of flowers and trailing vines.

The inside of the parasol is quite as important just now as the outside, and comes in for nearly as much decoration. For instance, it doesn't seem sufficient that the outside covering should be of almost priceless lace. The under side must be also elaborated with deep hanging frills of chiffon and a complicated network of narrow strands of rolled chiffon. A plain taffeta covered parasol will look most demure and unassuming furled, but let it be raised and you will find the under side a mass of plisse ruffles of chiffon, lace edged, so fine that they do not make any bulk and most flattering to the face in their softening effect.

All kinds of gold-balled swinging tassels are attached to parasol handles—and this is distinctly a 1908 conceit. Some of them are suggestive of the result of a schoolgirl's visit to West Point, for they look like nothing so much as the brass buttons of the cadets. Others have chic little taffeta bows, their ends tipped with gold tassels. Again they will be [illegible] with [illegible] tassels of [illegible] color with the parasol covering.

The simple parasols of taffeta silk in plain colors with unassuming wood handles which we in other years considered quite good enough for every-day use are this year not to be thought of by the smart woman. The top covering must be elaborate, the underside decorated [illegible] expensive, with possibly [illegible] at both ends of the stick, and [illegible] trimmed with tassels and bows. This is undoubtedly a season of elaboration and among parasols it is felt as well as everywhere else.

How I Took My Wrinkles Out

After Facial Massage, Creams and Beauty Doctors Had Failed.

BY HARRIETT META.

Trouble, worry and ill health brought me deep lines and wrinkles. I realized that they not only greatly marred my appearance and made me look much older but that they would greatly interfere with my success, because a woman's success, either socially or financially, depends very largely on her appearance. The homely woman, with deep lines and furrows in her face, must fight an unequal battle with her younger and better looking sister.

I therefore bought various brands of cold cream and skin foods and massaged my face with constant regularity, hoping to regain my former appearance. But the wrinkles simply would not go. On the contrary they seemed to get deeper. Next I went to a beauty specialist, who told me she could easily rid me of my wrinkles. I paid my money and took the treatment. Sometimes I thought they got less, but after spending all the money I could afford for such treatment, I found I still had my wrinkles. So I gave up in despair and concluded I must carry them to my grave. One day a friend of mine who was versed in chemistry made a suggestion, and this gave me a new idea. I immediately went to work making experiments and studying everything I could get hold of on this subject. After several long months of almost numberless trials and discouragements, I finally discovered a process which produced most astounding results on my wrinkles in a single night. I was [illegible] beyond expression. I tried the treatment again and, lo and behold! my wrinkles were practically gone. A third treatment three nights in all—and I had no wrinkles and my face was as smooth as ever. I next offered my treatment to some of my immediate friends, who used it with surprising results, and I have now decided to offer it to the public. Miss Gladys Desmond, of Pittsburg, Pa., writes that it made her wrinkles disappear in one night. Mrs. M. W. Graves, of Bridgeport, Conn., states: "There is not a wrinkle left; my friends say I look 20 years younger. I consider your treatment a godsend to womankind." Mrs. James Barns, of Central City, S. D., writes: "The change is so great that it seems more a work of magic." I will send further particulars to anyone who is interested absolutely free of charge. I use no cream, facial massage, face steaming or so-called skin foods; there is nothing to inject and nothing to injure the skin. It is an entirely new discovery of my own and so simple that you can use it without the knowledge of your most intimate friends. You apply the treatment at night and go to bed. In the morning, lo! the wonderful transformation. People often write me, "It sounds too good to be true." Well, the test will tell. If interested in my discovery, please address Harriett Meta, Suite 915M, Syracuse, N. Y., and I will send full particulars.

Sunday American-Examiner Patterns—No. 357.

A Charming Summer Frock for the Little Miss, Easily Made at Home.

DURING the Summer season a good supply of simple wash frocks are much in demand. This one is somewhat out of the ordinary and is a most simple little garment to make and easily ironed. The blouse portion and sleeve are cut in one piece, the only seam being under the arm.

An inverted box pleat on the shoulder is a pretty feature and gives graceful fulness to the short puff sleeves. Linen, chambray, pique, flannel and serge are all suitable to the design, which will require 4 yards of 36-inch material for the 8-year size.

The patterns have been cut in sizes 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 years and can be obtained by [illegible] filling in the printed blank [illegible] with 10 cents in silver or stamp.

Night's Mysterious Realm

Copyright, 1908, by [illegible]

The Earth Sleeps, the Heavens Are Awake, Their Eyes, the Distant Suns, Are Blazing. What We Call Night Is THE COSMIC DAY, the Universal Day That Never Ends

THE heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth His handiwork.
Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth KNOWLEDGE.

Psalms, xix., I.

Human beings do not KNOW the night. Our lives have been daylight lives. Thinking man has been on this earth thirty thousand years at least, probably a hundred thousand years, perhaps more. All those long years were years in which night conquered day absolutely, until within very recent times. Kerosene oil, gas, electricity and other conquerors of darkness are the creations of our day. They were not known to the ancients, not even to the ancients of yesterday.

All through the long centuries men have shut their eyes when the great sun shut off his light. They have remained still in one spot. They must do that or stumble. Only here and there a few shepherds protecting flocks, a few thinkers and students defying darkness with the aid of some feeble light, have watched the night and made its acquaintance.

We do not KNOW the night, its mysteries, its wonders. In a great city of human beings millions go back and forth at night for amusement or work. How many in those millions lift their eyes above the gas jets and the electric lights to the real universe that is spread out above and around this little rolling ball of earth.

Day is for action and night is for thought. And the time will come undoubtedly when man, more highly developed and knowing himself, will conquer sleep and no longer give up one-third of his life to unconsciousness, no longer waste the wonderful night hours when the blazing suns and our neighbor planets and all the eyes of the heavens are open for his study.

There are animals that sleep all the Winter—bears, toads and turtles. They do that BECAUSE THEY MUST. They have formed the habit through compulsion. Man has slept through the night because he HAD to. And his system demands the long sleep and the waste of time because of powerful HABIT. But man will conquer that. The ants, marvellous little insects, telling us, if we only could understand them, what wonders we can accomplish, have overcome sleep.

Those wonderful geniuses of the insect world, small as the tip of your fingernail, actually prolong their working lives seven and eight years, and even more, without sleeping—every second belongs to them.

Man will do that eventually. And his mind, his reverence for divine power and kindness, will feed in the daytime upon the material beauties and comforts of our earth, upon the glory of our sun, and at night upon the infinitely greater marvels of the infinite, unfathomable, overwhelming universe, in which our solar system is a molecule, our planet an atom and ourselves the component, thinking electrons of the atom.

There are two lobes to the brain in your head. ONE would be enough for the sort of life we lead now. One lobe of the brain and nine-tenths of the entire brain substance inside your skull lie idle—are used scarcely at all. The full life of night and of day will give work and occupation to both halves of the brain and to the deep, unused brain below the cortex.

We know now that one side of the brain controls speech, the other controls other functions. Haeckel long ago suggested that man might advantageously learn to use one eye for the telescope that studies the infinite and the other eye for the microscope that studies the finite. May not human beings develop into fully rounded creatures and learn that those two lobes of the brain were given one for contemplation of the night and one for the day, for the study of the earthly finite and the cosmic infinite.

Fanciful, foolish talk, you may say. Perhaps so. But are we not conquering this little earth in a fanciful, foolish way? Do we not bore through it, sail under its waters, fly through its air, talk to each other in audible tones a thousand miles apart, flash messages across its oceans without wires, IN WHAT WOULD HAVE SEEMED A FOOLISH AND FANCIFUL WAY A HUNDRED YEARS AGO?

Study the night, study the stars, keep some of the night hours for thinking which demands solitude and quiet.

Through all these centuries the nights of men have been wasted.

This picture tells the story of night as spent by men without appreciation. It has been the time of murders, of false pleasures. It has been the time of weary watching by patient, neglected women. It has been the time of noble research by a few of the world's great minds.

To the vast majority of human beings it has been A BLANK TIME, A TIME WASTED, CUT OUT OF THEIR LIVES.

One man expressed beautifully the mystery of night, its sorrowful hidden pictures below, the majestic beauty above. And we republish here some of his words, as beautiful as any you have ever read; the words that Carlyle puts into the mouth of his strange genius, Teufelsdroeckh, looking out over the sleeping city from his high tower.

"Ach, mein Lieber!" said he once, at midnight, when we had returned from the coffee house in rather earnest talk, "it is a true sublimity to dwell here. These fringes of lamplight, struggling up through smoke and thousandfold exhalation, some fathoms into the ancient reign of Night, what thinks Bootes of them, as he leads his hunting-dogs over the zenith in their leash of sidereal fire?

"That stifled hum of midnight when traffic has lain down to rest; and the chariot-wheels of Vanity, still rolling here and there through distant streets, are bearing her to halls roofed in, and lighted to the due pitch for her; and only Vice and Misery, to prowl or to moan like nightbirds, are abroad; that hum, I say, like the stertorous, unquiet slumber of sick Life, is heard in Heaven!

"Oh, under that hideous coverlet of vapors, and putrefactions, and unimaginable gases, what a fermenting-vat lies shimmering and hid!

"The joyful and the sorrowful are there; men are dying there; men are being born; men are praying—on the other side of a brick partition men are cursing; and around them all is the vast, void Night.

"The proud Grandee still lingers in his perfumed saloons, or reposes within damask curtains; Wretchedness cowers into truckle-beds, or shivers hunger-stricken into its lair of straw; in obscure cellars, Rouge-et-Noir languidly emits its voice-of-destiny to haggard hungry Villains; while Councillors of State sit plotting, and playing their high chess-game, whereof the pawns are Men. The Lover whispers his mistress that the coach is ready; and she, full of hope and fear, glides down, to fly with him over the borders; the Thief, still more silently, sets-to his picklocks and crowbars, or lurks in wait till the watchmen first snore in their boxes.

"Gay mansions, with supper-rooms and dancing-rooms, are full of light and music and high-swelling hearts; but in the Condemned Cells the pulse of life beats tremulous and faint, and bloodshot eyes look out through the darkness, which is around and within, for the light of a stern last morning. Six men are to be hanged on the morrow: comes no hammering from the Rabenstein?—their gallows must even now be a-building.

"Upwards of five hundred thousand two-legged animals without feathers lie around us, in horizontal positions; their heads all in night-caps, and full of the foolishest dreams. Riot cries aloud, and staggers and swaggers in his rank dens of shame; and the Mother, with streaming hair, kneels over her pallid dying infant, whose cracked lips only her tears now moisten. All these heaped and huddled together, with nothing but a little carpentry and masonry between them—crammed in, like salted fish in their barrel; or weltering, shall I say, like an Egyptian pitcher of tamed vipers, each struggling to get his head above the others: such work goes on under that smoke-counterpane!—but I, mein werther, sit above it all; I am alone with the Stars."

What would the average man not give for twenty years of active thinking ahead of his life? For ages every man has wasted twenty beautiful NIGHT years.

Study night, which is the real day of the universe, the great, silent, inconceivable, beautiful, universal background whence the eyes of the suns look out in grandeur and beauty.

JACK—No, they won't kill him—yet, They never do before the first inning

DOROTHY—Do they always—then?

JACK—No. I've known 'em to wait till the [illegible] But sometimes he gets away.

DOROTHY—Don't you think we ought to warn him, Jack? Oh! I knew this was a brutal game.

JACK—That's what it is! It's brutal robbery. Look at that! Ryan was safe as a rich malefactor on second! Now, see what he says.

DOROTHY—Jack!

JACK—Pardon me, dear, I forgot. If you understood the game you'd know how I feel.

DOROTHY—But, how can I understand it when you join this perfectly fiendish cry for the death of the, the—vampire, do they call him?

JACK—They don't, but they ought to. By George, Dorothy, you'd make a bully fan!

DOROTHY—Why, I never did such a thing in my life—anyway, not since I was a little girl, when I used to make them out of tissue paper.

JACK—What?

DOROTHY—Fans; wasn't that what you said?

JACK—Oh, fans, yes. Look at that! Rotten!

DOROTHY—Jack, dear, please control yourself. I know something dreadful is going to happen, and I don't want you to die with oaths on your lips.

JACK—But, I didn't swear, Dorothy!

DOROTHY—Yes, you did! You said "rotten." And the way you said "look at that" was swearing—just low, vulgar swearing.

JACK—Ha! Here comes our greatest batter!

DOROTHY—That sounds like a cooking school. Who's got it? Is it in the pail that perfectly comical boy is carrying?

JACK—Is what in the pail?

DOROTHY—The batter.

JACK—Listen, Dorothy. The man with the bat——

DOROTHY—There, you are using more of that disreputable slang. If the man is intoxicated why don't you say so, and not speak of "the man with the bat" in that horrid way.

JACK—But he has got a bat. It's that club he's carrying.

DOROTHY—Oh, is that our club?

JACK—No, silly, it's his club.

CHORUS OF FANS.

In just about a minute
We'll come off of dis here bleachers
An' take a bunch of paving stone
An' smash dat umpire's features!

DOROTHY—Oh, hear that terrible threats! Are they going to do it?

JACK—No of course not. See that man running to first?

DOROTHY—I see a man running, but——

JACK—Great! Bully! Look, he's gone down to second, he's stolen third and now he's coming home!

DOROTHY—Why, Jack, then he's a thief!

JACK—Oh, no, he isn't a thief. The umpire's the thief!

DOROTHY—But, you said he'd stolen something!

JACK—He did. He stole third, and now he's got home.

DOROTHY—Well, I confess I don't understand this game. If he's stolen third I shouldn't think he'd dare go home!

JACK—Dorothy, if you will wait till the end of this inning——

DOROTHY—What is an inning?

JACK—Why—why, an inning is an inning. It's when our side is in.

DOROTHY—But the umpire said they were out.

JACK—No, he didn't—not yet, at least. He would if he dared!

CHORUS OF FANS

Here's ten men against us,
But de game is won!
For Hooly's gone de t'ree bags 'round
For one home run!

DOROTHY—They seem to be better natured now, anyway. Perhaps they won't kill the vampire.

JACK—If they don't, I will. The cur!

DOROTHY—Who is that nice looking young man with his left leg up in the air all the time?

JACK—The pitcher. He pitches.

DOROTHY—What does he pitch?

JACK—Why, the ball, of course.

DOROTHY—Oh! Is there a ball!

JACK—Of course, there's a ball. See, he's pitching it now.

DOROTHY—Well, if I couldn't throw better than that!

JACK—Humph! That was a bully throw. Did you see the batter fan?

DOROTHY—I saw him try to dodge it, but the pitcher couldn't hit him!

JACK—He wasn't trying to hit him; he was trying to strike him!

DOROTHY—See here, Jack Ransome, I will not be imposed upon. How could he strike him if he didn't hit him?

JACK—Oh! Dorothy, didn't I tell you you would never understand this game?

DOROTHY—I wish I hadn't come to the hateful place. I've heard more awful oaths and curses since I've been here than there are in a modern society play. I'm going home!

JACK—But, Dorothy, not now. We're winning. Don't you see we've got them over a barrel!

DOROTHY—No, I don't see anything of the kind, and I wouldn't look at such a thing if I could see it. Talk about college hazing!

CHORUS OF FANS

Gee it's great! Gosh, it's great! Say, it's Great! Great! Great!
We win out!
We win out!
We win, six to eight!

JACK—That's right. That run made it. They don't need to play the last half of the inning. We win! Dorothy, we win!

DOROTHY—I think blue would be better!

JACK—Blue, what do you mean!

DOROTHY—With a little green on it, and perhaps a couple of canary yellow birds.

JACK—Dorothy, what are you talking about? We WIN!

DOROTHY—Win? Win what?

JACK—The game! Six to eight!

DOROTHY—Oh, the game. I'd forgotten it. Jack, do you think green would be better on my new hat than blue, or would you rather have purple poppies if it was for you?

ARE THE REALLY GOING TO KILL THE POOR MAN?
HBM

"SEE HERE, JACK RANSOME, I WILL NOT BE IMPOSED UPON. HOW COULD HE STRIKE HIM IF HE DIDN'T HIT HIM?"

The Seven Wise Women

by Dorothy Dix

THE Third Wise Woman spoke as follows:

"I [illegible] that every Woman [illegible] gets home from the Altar and sits down and calmly looks at what she has Got, gets the Surprise of her Life. She thought that she had picked out a Noble and Heroic Being, who was a little God before whom she would always stand in Awe and Reverence, and [illegible] that she has merely tied up with an ordinary Individual, who [illegible] Vanities and [illegible] to Soft Soap if she is to get along with him in Peace, it gives her a Jar that Loosens her Back Teeth.

"Now, I am not Knocking Men. A Husband is a mighty handy thing to have around the House, especially about the First of the Month, when Bills become due [illegible] Nerves.

[illegible] my Peregrinations in this Vale of Tears I have met a Person who was Always Right, and I Bless Heaven for its Mercy that I was not Married to [illegible] been it would have [illegible] Get-away to the D[illegible]

[illegible] Purchase [illegible] from the Bargain Counter. [illegible] got Wise that [illegible] Vanity.

"'Ha!' said I to myself, 'it isn't Exactly what I looked for in one whom I expected to Worship, but it might have been Worse. At any rate, it is where I Get Busy. I was not Born Yesterday, and I have got Something on my Mind besides my Marcel Pompadour. A Craving for Admiration is like a Hankering for Drink. It has got to be Satisfied Somewhere, and if a Man does not get it at Home he will find it Abroad.

"'I do not Intend to be like Mamie Smith, who let a Fat Lady of Forty-five take her Husband away from her, nor like Susie Jones, whose Husband has to go to the Club when he wants to Hold-up anybody and tell them a Joke.

"'I am aware that when a man is Good Looking and possessed of a Sufficiency of the Long Green, as my Husband is, that his Wife has to be Up and Doing if she wants to Hold her Own, but anybody who Annexes Mine sure will have to be an Artist!'

"So I kept my Weather Eye Peeled, and whenever I would perceive that a Peroxided Lady was Fanning him with Hot Air about being Handsome I did not, as many Foolish Wives do, get on my Ear, and say that I would not Stand for Such Conduct, and that the other woman was No Better than she Ought to Be. On the contrary, I would Hand her a Few Choice Compliments Myself about being a Woman of Artistic Taste, but then I would File an Exception to her Judgment.

"'I think that she was mistaken,' I would say, 'in saying that you looked just exactly like a Gibson Man and a Richard Harding Davis Hero, for while they are Good Lookers all right, they have not your Greek Profile and the Intellectual Expression that you Possess. I do not see how anybody could Fail to Observe that you are the living Image of the Statue of Apollo Belvedere. You have just Exactly the same Perfect Proportions pervaded by the same Soul of Beauty.'

"At these words he would faintly demur and say that he Feared that I Exaggerated a Trifle, and I would reply Not at all, and add Another Chapter or two of Judicious Praise of his Personal Appearance to such good effect that when I got through he felt as if the Other Woman had been Batting Him and he Never cared to go about her Again.

"In the same way I Double-Crossed the Band of Cheerful Workers. When I perceive a Female Gazing with Rapt Eyes in my Husband's face and murmuring, 'How perfectly wonderful! How brave and strong you are! Did you really get up in the Dark and go downstairs Alone to see if there was a Burglar in the Dining Room?' I do not explain Before Everybody that it was Nothing but the Cat. Nixie. Not Me. I wait until the Lady has Exhausted all of her Small Shot, and then I Fire a Forty-Pounder.

"'You really Don't Appreciate, my Dear Miss De Simpkins,' I observe sweetly, 'how Very Heroic my Husband's conduct was, for we did not know but what a Band of Armed Thugs, Desperate and Ready to Shed Blood, were waiting in Ambush for him, and it was simply Foolhardy Courage for him to Attempt Single-Handed and Alone to Attack them, but all of my Tears and Prayers were Powerless to Prevent His Undertaking the Daring Deed.'

"And as I offer my little Tribute of Praise my Husband's Chest swells out until I can hear his Shirt Studs give way under the strain, and where, then, is Miss De Simpkins? Oh, where is she? He can't see her with a Telescope.

"Nor am I one of the Feeble-Minded Wives who sit up with the Expression of an Early Christian Martyr, undergoing the third Degree of Torture, while her Husband tells a Funny Story. I should judge, on a Conservative Estimate, that I have heard all of my Husband's Good Ones 4,935,648 times, and in consequence thereof they are not as Fresh to me as they Might Be, but I greet them every time with a Laugh that is so Natural that he has never Suspected that I am not Tickled to Death.

"When any Foxy Dame has given him the Glad Hand with Unusual Fervor I casually remark:

"'It is almost a Pity that my Husband's Father left him So Much Money, for if he had Gone on the Stage he would have made the Greatest Comedian of the Century. Mr. Frohman and Belasco are Always after him. I think myself that I have Never seen Anyone who Approached him as a Raconteur. His Wit is so Subtle and his Pathos so Unforced and Heart-Wrenching.'

"'Tut, tut, my Dear,' my Husband responds upon such Occasions, 'your Affection makes you Exaggerate my Small Talent.' But I Notice that when the Company is gone he is not Really Vexed with me, and that he Generally says that if I Really want that Imported Gown that I was talking about I had better go and buy it tomorrow before Somebody else Snaps it up.

"In the same manner I Listen to his Opinion with Bated Breath, and if I happen to Know Better upon any Subject, I keep my Exclusive Information to myself, for I hold that the woman who Corrects her Husband's Grammar, and Sets him Right when he says that Hughes was born in South Carolina, or that Roosevelt belongs to the Society for the Prevention of Killing Wild Animals, is such a Three-Ply Idiot that she Deserves to lose out. She only gets what is coming to her when her Husband passes up a School Mistress for a Jollier. Nor do I blame the Man, for it sure would Grouch me to have to spend my days Toiling to Support a Candid Critic who felt it her Sacred Duty to point out my Faults to me.

"By the simple Expedient of Always pushing the Velvet and having a more Liberal Supply of the Salve, to apply than any one else I have Managed to be Happy though Married, and I have kept my Husband Nailed to his own Fireside, for by the side of my Compliments all other women's Flattery seems as Flat as Beer after Champagne, and everyone else appears Cold and Unappreciating. I apprehend that my Case of the Husband who has a Sweet Tooth is not the Only One, and that many a Man goes away from Home in order to hear a few Kind Words and to get someone to Listen to Him." Dinkelspiel on the Foibles of a Father

by George V. Hobart

"IN DEIR HEARTS DER FODDERS VAS TICKLED ALMOST SENSELESS VEN DER DAUGHTER GETS UP ON DE PARLOR FLOOR BEFORE DER SUNDAY COMPANY UND RECITES IT."

Home. Lately.

MEIN LIEBER LOOEY—Ve haf receifed your letter from Skeattle und ve vas glat to heerd it dot your healt' is making you pleasant company, yet.

Ve vas all vell at home mit der eggsception dot your mother gafe a leedle dinner last efening to some of der neighbors vich infest dis wicinity und much conversationing changed ears.

Among dose present und eating eggstensifly vas Herman Splevin und vife, also Gust Bauerhaupt und mother, und Rudolph Pfuff, der Napoleon of der canned wegetable trade in der Bureau of der Bronx

After der dinner Pfuff und I ve sat together smoking a cubble of my own personal seegars because, Looey, I nefer like to took a chance und let vun of our wisitors smoke his own seegar in my house vare politeness forbids me to open der vindows or chump on him und by brute force remoof der insulting veed from his face.

I could notice it py der vay Pfuff nervoused himself dot someding was playing hide und seek in his mind, so I asked him vot vas der matter, yet

"It is my daughter, Gretchen," he responsed: "she is yust come home from der Young Ladies' Summernary to wisit mit us vile she is spending der Easter holidays, aleretty."

"Vell," I set, "such is a nice idea because vot is home mitould a family?"

GRETCHEN HAS BEEN STUDYING ELECTROCUTION.

"It ain't because Gretchen has came home dot I got a vorriment," set Pfuff, taking vee leedle pulls at der seegar so he is eckonomical mit der smoke; "it is because she declares und eggsists dot hereafter I must call her name Gasoline!"

"Ja! dot is it, Gwendoline' but vy is der occasion for such?'" he shouted "Ain't Gretchen yust so goot as Gasoline or Kerosene or votefer is it" Vy should I in der olt age of my youth be compulsioned to consult mit a memorvandom book to get der right name before I can call my daughter to hand me a match? Haf I got to go through dis wale of tears for der rest of my life mit a blue string tied on my leedle finger so I can remembrance dot my daughter's front name ain'd her name now because she has remoofed her front name to make room for a name vich I doan'd recollection?'"

"Vell, Gwendoline is a preddy name," I set, soothingly "I know a case vich has much similarity to yours, Pfuff. It vas a olt college champ of mine py der name of Mike Clancy vich hat a daughter py der name of Bridget, und ven Mike made a fine bunch of money by owning a leedle piece of property in der Bureau of Brooklyn vust vare vun of der tunnels happened to come up to get her air decisioned dot Bridget must go to a private school vare she could learn to be a young lady of refinery, so avay she goes to a Young Ladies' Summernary ofer in Pencilvania vare der Penns come from. In abould t'ree veeks time Bridget is home for der Tanksgifing holidays und she says to Mike 'Fodder, I doan'd like me name und der udder girls doan'd like me name, now vot vould you suchchest'" says she. 'I vould suchchest der stove lifter in ouldvard applications,' set her fodder says he, und Bridget goes back to school. In annadder two veeks she is back home for der Christmas holidays und she says to Mike, 'Fodder, me name is unpleasant to der ear und all der udder girls eggspress deir opinion dot me name is unpleasant to der ear, vot can you recommendation?' says she. 'I can recommendation dot you hurry back to school vile dere is someding left to fasten a name to,' set her fodder, says he, und she hurried back to school In abould t'ree veeks she is home for der Easter holidays und she says mit a lankval chesture, 'Fodder, me name is so plebian dot efen der hoi polloi haf got her laugh on me und I vould petition you to permission me to change it,' says she 'Back to der knowledge factory,' says her fodder 'back und send hoi polloi to me und I vill change der geography of his face!' says he, und she goes back to school In two veeks she is home for der mid-summer holidays, und says she, 'Paw,' says she, 'by your leaf' says she 'I haf changed my name' says she It vas too bourgeoise for any use' says she 'und hereafter I am called Beatrice by me friends und ackvaintances,' says she. Mike Clancy gafe her vun long look, den he nefer stopped running till he reached der nearest saloon, und from dose days to dese he has been a changed man"

Pfuff sighed deepfully und asked me for annuder seegar

"[illegible]" he vent on after lighting it "my daughter, Gretchen, has been studying electrocution, und all der day long she is making faces at herself und saying 'Corkscrew Shall Not Ring To-night.' I could bear der blow vot she calls herself Phenacetine, but I doan'd vant no play actor vimmens in my family—I doan'd vant it' tell mit" dis he smashed his fist mit der table

"Electrocution is vun of der great evils of der day," I vispered back at him. "Ven a man sends his daughter to a private school he takes der same chances abould electrocution dot he does mit der measles und malaria Sometimes der electrocution cherm bites dem, sometimes it doan'd. Medicine doan'd do no good. Ven she gets it yust buy her a bunch of recitation books und let her disease runs its course. Close der vindows und [illegible] of der parlor. Keep shuffling Rudyard Kipling's latest poems at her through der transom und eggsplain der trouble to der policeman on your beat—dot is as far as human ingenuity can go."

"Vell," set Pfuff, "I vill go home und get der coal shuffle, und if Gretchen runs at me mit a vild look in her eyes und says, 'I am dying, Egypt, dying!' I vill make some realisms abould der place right avay, quick yet!"

But I bet you he doan'd, Looey. All der time dot he is complaining abould Gretchen he is delighted dot she is so precoachful All fodders is alike, Looey. Dey pretension dey vant deir daughters to be shy und timid und retireful, like a clam, but in deir hearts der fodders vas tickled almost senseless ven der daughter gets up on der parlor floor before der Sunday company und recites it

Den outd spake brave Horatius,
'I stand here, vot's der stake;
For der bank checks of your fodders,
For der I. O. U's, you make,
I, mit vun more to help me,
Am on der chob, you see!
Now, who vill stand on elder hand
Und play britch vist mit me?'"

HERE AFTER I AM CALLED BEATRICE BY MY FRIENDS

Our Need of Anti-Affinity Clubs

by Ella Wheeler Wilcox

SOMETHING less than a year ago a man died. Death cheated the divorce court of one more scandal, and a deserted wife and troubled children, old enough to feel the humiliation of the situation, were saved the shame of seeing columns of personal details relating to their parents' unhappiness published in the daily press. The simple obituary announcing the man's death was less painful reading. Divorce proceedings had been instituted, and a young woman "affinity" was named as co-respondent.

But before the case came to trial the man died.

It is said that the young woman bears the look of one stricken with deep sorrow. She really loved the man.

During the time when she knew that she was named as the co-respondent in the case she showed no evidence of suffering; indeed, there was triumph and satisfaction in her demeanor, and she made no disguise of the fact that she expected to be the happy wife of another woman's husband as soon as the divorce was obtained.

To-day she feels herself one cruelly treated by fate, and she wonders what she has done that life should be rendered so desolate and barren. I do not know the wife of the dead man; I never saw the man himself. It is possible that the wife drove her husband to disloyalty; many good women do drive their husbands from them by a thousand and one petty and unbearable acts, which are impossible to enumerate or classify. They are like mosquitoes or flies which spoil one's rest.

Entering such a home, you see beautiful draperies and comfortable beds and softly tinted walls, and you think how restful it all is, but when you try to rest the insects drive you out of the room in a rage. Just so, many wives are beautiful, cultured, soft-voiced, models of chastity and economy and other Christian virtues, and you think what a lucky man is he who calls this woman wife.

But try living in the same house with her for one month, and you will fly forth out into the street, to the club, to the hotel, anywhere to escape the maddening buzz of the fly and the stab of the mosquito.

Yet does this fact justify a self-respecting young woman for accepting the lover-like addresses of the disillusioned husband?

However sympathetic she may find him, it is in her power to PREVENT an infatuation before it engulfs them both.

If she possesses any ideals of high womanhood, she can maintain them and turn her would-be lover into a nobler man, a man who will realize his obligation to the woman he has selected for a wife, and who will either go back to her with a resolve to make the best of his self-imposed martyrdom, or else to quietly and calmly arrange for the support and maintenance of his wife apart from him

There is scarcely one attractive young woman grown into the twenties unmarried who has not been the recipient of some man's confidences about his domestic troubles.

It speaks well for our young women that so small a percentage of them have separated husbands and wives. Hundreds of sensible and good girls have talked such husbands into a reasoning frame of mind and aroused in them an ambition to be braver men and to accept the situation with philosophy.

It is, curiously enough, almost universally the man of wealth who finds his affinity ready to act as understudy in the play where the wife has missed her role.

I do not believe it is incumbent upon a man to live with a wife who makes his home a hell upon earth. But it is a curious fact that scores of men live for decades of time with wives who seem perfectly satisfactory to them as comrades until they encounter a younger woman, who appears in the guise of a soul-mate. And immediately the wife of the man's youth, according to his story, develops impossible characteristics. And he is certain that to do his best as a man and a citizen he must possess the soul-mate.

Yet if we look over the records of history we will find some of its greatest men achieved their highest work through sorrows, disappointments and suffering of soul.

I do not believe the great Creative Power ever meant a man to reach his best development through any act that brings suffering to those who make his nearest duties and obligations, his wife and children

This sort of justification for an entanglement is growing tiresome. It would seem far more manly for the obsessed husband to say, "I am weak and cannot resist this infatuation; self-indulgence is more to me than the happiness of my family or the respect of my fellows."

Then at least one could be sorry for him, as for any other invalid.

When a woman says, "It was fate; this man came into my life, and there was no escaping the results; it was destiny," she ignores the great truth that IN OUR OWN SELVES LIES DESTINY.

We can be what we will be.

There is always the first moment of consciousness between a married man and the other woman when the danger point is reached, and it is always in the woman's power to turn away from the path wherein he would lead her. But the love of power, the vanity which loves to be flattered, the lack of consideration for others and, in most cases, the worship of money, all combine to create the increasing horde of affinities which are disintegrating our society to-day.

SELFISHNESS IS THE ROOT OF ALL EVIL.

And what selfishness is more undisguised than that of the woman who brings sorrow and humiliation into the lives of innocent children through a public scandal?

One may believe that the wife was in fault for losing her husband's love; a wife is always more or less in fault for such a disaster, but would not a man reach a higher plane of development who stopped to consider his obligation as a father, and who resisted a fascination that meant a broken household, than he would attain by yielding to it?

One half the mental concentration, will power and determination used by a man in an effort to free himself from the wife who has ceased to be a companion to him would restore his lost domestic happiness if he applied these powers to that purpose instead of in the pursuit of another woman.

Would not the affinity of a married man help him to a fuller, nobler growth by spurring him on toward an effort to resurrect his domestic happiness than by taking him from his wife and children?

Surely renunciation is a more sublime thing than the gratification of a selfish desire which means sorrow to others.

And such renunciation brings its own reward, a reward far greater than can result from self-indulgence or gratified ambitions.

When any young woman is convinced that she is the affinity of a married man she would do well to give her state of mind a careful analysis, and ask, "Would I choose this man from all the world if he were poor and without any prospect of wealth? Would I give up the world and the respect of my friends and family for his companionship?" Alas how many women who believe themselves inspired by a great passion would find ignoble Mammon was the tempter, not Cupid, if they subjected themselves to such a test.

We have many women's clubs and organizations in the land, and many churches, but we sorely need a "Moral Obligation and Personal Responsibility Club." Such a club might bear the sub-title of "The Anti-Affinity Organization."

Lyceum Theatre

Just as a sample, the show at the Lyceum [illegible] next week contains ten [illegible] girls [illegible] good looking, all the same height and [illegible] nearly the same weight. Bijou Dream

Another good programme has been provided for the Bijou Dream this week, one varied, interesting and made up with the same view to timeliness that characterizes this theatre. A specialty is now being made of [illegible] production of current events, by which the patrons of the Bijou will see, in the most vivid manner, scenes and incidents that are most talked about in the [illegible]. There was a startling illustration of this last week when a splendid series of pictures showing the famous dive by Houdini from Harvard Bridge, showing him from the time he arrived until he made the jump, and after reappearing with the handcuffs. All this was shown at the Bijou in less than three hours after the event had taken place. The week before the Marathon runner was shown after he had won his great victory.

Star Theatre

See the Hackenschmidt-Gotch wrestling bout at the Star Theatre, Tremont row, this week. The Star has secured moving pictures of this famous bout exclusively for Boston exhibition. When the "Russian Lion" was in Boston last March everyone thought he would walk away with Gotch, but the Westerner made him quit in one of the most hotly-contested matches in the history of modern wrestling.

Hub Theatre

The feature for this week's bill at the Hub is a series of moving pictures showing Jim Jefferies on his California ranch. Jack Manley, the Boston tenor, formerly of the Hap Ward company, appears in the illustrated ballads at the Sunday night concert tonight and at the evening performances during the week. Ben F. Loring and Miss May White, two favorites, are booked for ballads. There will be instrumental music by the ladies' orchestra. The bill changes again next Thursday.

APPEAL FOR BRANCH OF PUBLIC LIBRARY

Meeting House Hill People Want Place to Take Mischeivous Boys Off Street.

The location of a public library reading room at Meeting House Hill is strongly urged by hundreds of Dorchester residents backed by Councilman Harry O. Cumming and the public library trustees are now considering the matter.

The establishment of the branch station with a well-equipped reading room would do away with many complaints which have been made to the police against mischievous boys, who are accustomed to congregate on the street corners to the annoyance of the pedestrians, in the opinion of those who are advocating the measure.

"Give the boys a place where they can find innocent and healthful amusement and I think that the district would be improved," said a prominent clergyman who has taken the initiative in advocating the matter. "The boys will either gather on the corner and give way to their mischievous tendencies or else congregate in the more harmful atmosphere of the pool room or bowling alley. I feel that we need such a branch station."

Councilman Cumming has called the matter to the attention of the Common Council and urged the library trustees to consider the matter and a definite answer is expected at the next meeting of the Common Council.

POPULAR ACTRESS WHO HAS MADE BIG HIT IN "THE LION AND MOUSE"

GERTRUDE COGHLAN COMING TO THE HOLLIS

'SHIRLEY ROSSMORE' WITHOUT A 'PAST.'

Answer—Because she is "A Contented Woman."

Well, one might ask, What's she so contented about, anyhow?

About her role of Shirley Rossmore in "The Lion and the Mouse."

Why is she so contented?

Gertrude says it's because Shirley Rossmore hasn't any "past," nothing in the role to make one blush. So she's satisfied to play Shirley Rossmore till the theatrical cows come home. That's Gertrude Coghlan.

"The Lion and the Mouse" opens at the Hollis Street Theatre a week from tomorrow. The splendid role of Shirley Rossmore is familiar to Bostonians and Miss Coghlan, who has had the part for the past three seasons, was recently asked if she were not weary of it.

"No," she answered quickly, "I like the part of Shirley. She is a womanly woman, who has the sympathy of the audience from the first of the play to its finish. Furthermore, Shirley is the kind of woman that we too seldom see represented on the stage; she has no 'past,' nothing in fact that could cause her sex to blush. I wouldn't mind playing Shirley the rest of my life."

Gertrude Coghlan is the daughter of the late Charles Coghlan, an actor widely known in his day. She is a niece of Miss Rose Coghlan. She began her stage career at the age of sixteen, appearing in her father's production of "The Royal Box."

In July, 1906, she was married in Michigan to Augustus Pitou, Jr., son of Augustus Pitou, the New York theatrical manager.

Actress Whose Beauty Has Made Her Paris' Reigning Favorite

MLL. E. LANTELME

One of the present favorites of the Parisian theatregoers [illegible] fair Mlle. Lantelme, a dramatic star who is one of the best drawing cards of the season and is said to be the most [illegible] woman on the Paris stage.

As shown in the illustration Mlle. Lantelme possesses beauty of [illegible] both [illegible] face. Her features are [illegible] Her eyes are most expressive. Her mouth, though a trifle over the average feminine size, is modeled in charming lines.

Her [illegible] is interesting. When she smiles with [illegible] the vivacity of her [illegible] is fascinating. She wears [illegible] gowns which might [illegible] for this country, but which in Paris are merely regarded as [illegible] a beautiful woman who would not be too chary of her charming [illegible].

HERE'S ONE FERDIE THINKS SO ANYWAY

But Darling Little Ferdie Has a Kick Just the Same.

A [illegible] Ferdinand has come up out of the depths and is making a fearful roar because the "Ferdie" of "The Girl in Green" fame is ungallant to May Bouton in the first place and, as the complainant thinks, is bringing discredit onto the grand old name of Ferdinand.

It all started from the song that Miss Bouton sings in "1492" at the Globe Theatre called "The Girl in Green." The story of the song is to the effect that a young [illegible] has written a sentimental note to some young woman of the "1492" company, which is doubtless no stage joke, but he doesn't know her right name. So he has addressed his billet-doux to "The Girl in Green." Miss Bouton tells about this in the song and then six pretty girls appear all dressed in green.

Oh, They're All Pretty.

At this interesting juncture the original "Ferdie" gets up in the middle of the house and [illegible] says, "I am Ferdie."

Then he adds, "That's the girl I mean."

"[illegible] you mean me?" says Miss Bouton, giving him the chance of his life.

"No," yells the fellow, ungallantly, "I mean that pretty one."

As a result all the girls in green hop over the footlights and accept an invitation to dine with the candid "Ferdie."

That's all very well. But several admirers of Miss Bouton take exception to the frankness of Ferdie in intimating some other girl is prettier than Miss Bouton. Some of these admirers have written earnest letters telling her that they didn't grow 'em any prettier than she is, that they don't care what "Ferdie" says, she is a beauty and that Ferdie's taste is so poor that it ought to apply to some relief committee for assistance to the indigent.

Not This Ferdie! No!

The limit came yesterday however, when one of the Bouton admirers, whose name is also Ferdinand, wrote the following moving epistle to the slighted lady:

"My name is Ferdinand, but I'll be hanged if I ever wrote a note to any 'Girl in Green,' or for that matter to anyone else until now. What I want to say is this: The name of the young man who is supposed to have written the note must be changed. All of my friends are kidding me about it and I'm getting sore. I didn't write any letter, and if I had I shouldn't have been such a chump as to address it to a color. Incidentally I consider my namesake had exceedingly bad taste."

Miss Bouton is highly obliged to her gallant defender and feels encouraged to think that her charms have such a warm champion.

OUTING CLUB IN NEW SHORE COTTAGE

With a substantial sum in the treasury as a result of two very successful entertainments conducted during the past Winter months, the members of the Mount Pleasant Outing Club of Roxbury will lease the cottage, "Agnes Belle," at Hough's Neck for the coming Summer season.

On May 30, the opening day of the cottage, it is the intention of the members to entertain friends from Rockland, Brockton, Whitman, Weymouth and Roxbury. Talent from Boston theatres has been procured. In addition there will be a banquet.

Those who have charge of the opening exercises comprise President James E. Smith, Joseph P. Barrett, Thomas Buckley, Frederick T. Keefe, Henry Schaeffer, Joseph Barry, Maurice Ritchie, Edward Finnerty, John W. Goff, Patrick H. Gallagher, James J. Denehy, Thomas F. Phelan, Francis Irwin, Robert T. Strain, Patrick J. O'Neil and Francis Bowen.

SAVIN HILL BOYS WANT PLAYGROUND

Indignant Because Field for Sports Turns Swimming Pool and City Won't Aid Them.

Because the Savin Hill playground is more like a swimming pool than a recreation spot where the children of the district can play ball and outdoor games, there is much indignation among the residents of the district.

The playground was flooded last Winter for skating purposes, and now the city officials maintain that there are not enough funds available to fill in the land, with the result that there are large pools of water all over the surface of the field.

[illegible] high tide sweeps over the retaining wall at the side of the playground and the [illegible] has been filled with pools of stagnant water for some weeks.

Accordingly the boys of the district who [illegible] year waged a campaign for a new ground and whose parades and meetings attracted the attention of thousands of [illegible] residents are preparing a similar campaign to secure the needed improvements on the old playground. The Board of Aldermen decided that they did not need a new playground after a spirited debate and the boys' efforts were unavailable.

Councilman Harry O. Cumming will champion the cause of the boys. Seventy-five of the boys, led by Walter Fultz, John Cronan, Timothy Murphy and others, disgusted at their inability to have the city officials place the playground in proper condition, started in to perform the work of filling in themselves. They found the task much too hard for their inexperienced and youthful laborers, and they now propose to use every effort to have the proper authorities do the work, since, they maintain, it will involve the expenditure of but a small amount of money.

TEDDY-B AND TEDDY-G; THE BEAR DETECTIVES

XXV.--Mystery of the King's Fiddlers Solved

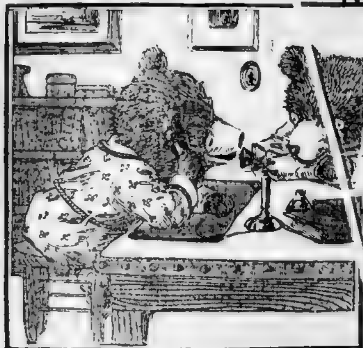
Copyright, 1908, by Seymour Eaton.

*"The case arranged they said good-bye
And the Teddy Bears said they would try."*

"WE charge no fee," said TEDDY-B,
"But tell us, please, how long," said he,
"They've been away, and when they went,
And if you know how their nights are spent;
And perhaps you have a photograph
Of how they act when they make you laugh
We should like to have, if you can spare,
Three suits of clothes, the kind they wear,
'Twould help us much as we search each nook
To know just how these fiddlers look.
Their fiddles, too, send two or three,
And the music played we should like to see."

The case arranged, they said good-bye,
And the Teddy Bears said they would try
To find the fiddlers that afternoon
They'd search the earth and sun and moon,
And perhaps the stars, they said, to see
If by any chance these fiddlers three
Had taken wings to get out of sight
When they disappeared the previous night



*"They phoned for Billy and when he came
They told him all about their game."*

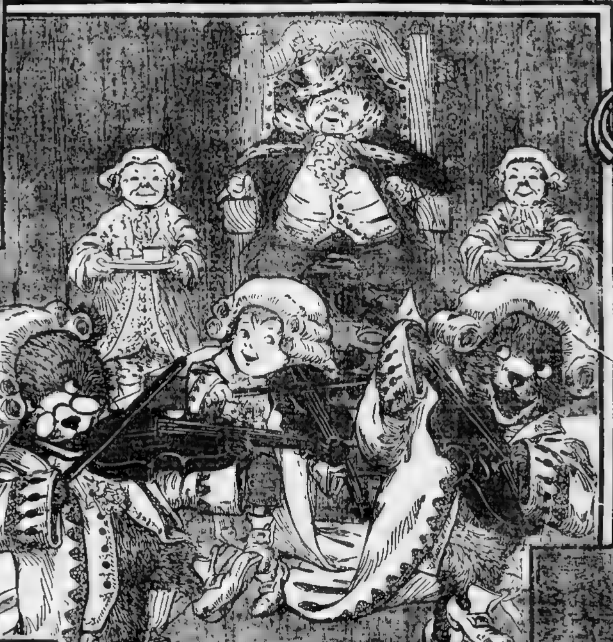
A royal page, with the fiddlers' suits
And violins and leather boots
Arrived at ten, and all he said
Was that the King had gone to bed
He'd awake at two and expect to see
In his dining room his fiddlers three

'Twas then the fun of [illegible] began,
For the Teddy Bears had a secret plan
To get Billy Blink to help them play
A joke on the jolly King that day,
They 'phoned for Billy, and when he came
They told him all about their game
"We'll use these suits," said TEDDY-G,
"And dress ourselves like the fiddlers three;
Go to the palace and be on hand
When the King awakes, to play our band,
To dance our jigs and joke and laugh
Like the funny things on a phonograph."
When the King awoke, the merry soul,

*"A royal page, with the fiddlers' suits
And violins and leather boots."*

He rang for his pipe, he rang for his bowl,
His fiddlers three, in their usual way,
While he smoked his pipe, marched in to play,
To dance and joke and sing and jest,
And do each thing their very best.
The King was cross and began to speak
To ask them where they'd been all week;
But they never listened; just played ahead

*"Played loud and louder and danced and sang.
And made the strings like banjos, bang."*



*"His fiddlers three, in their usual way,
While he smoked his pipe, marched in to play."*

And gave no attention to what he said;
Played loud and louder and danced and sang,
And made the strings, like banjos, bang,
And marched in step and wheeled about,
And at each turn gave a merry shout.
At last he laughed, this jolly King,
At the way they played and everything,
Laughed with his eyes and mouth and nose
All down his body to his toes,
And rolled on his chair and shook so hard
You could hear him out in the palace yard

When the pipe was finished and the music through
The King gave each ten sovereigns new;

"The King gave each ten sovereigns new."

For this old King could hardly see,
And he didn't know that his fiddlers three
Were the Teddy Bears and Billy Blink;
At least that's what they all three think;
But folks who know good Old King Cole,
His great big heart and merry soul,
Have said that the King knew TEDDY-B
And guessed at once his fiddlers three,
And the joke was his instead of theirs;
On Billy Blink and the Teddy Bears.

It's Blessed to Be Broke, If You but Look at It Right

By Kennett Harris

THE young man with the rueful countenance cleared his throat nervously. "The fact is, I'm broke," he confessed. "I've just a few dollars in my pocket, and when they're gone—well, I don't know I'm up against it."

The Good Old Chastened Soul smiled beautifully. "Is that all?" he said. "Why, bless my stars! I thought that it was something serious. My dear boy, you ought not to let a little thing like that worry you. Being broke isn't anything."

"It isn't, eh," said the young man with the rueful countenance.

"It's the finest thing in the world, if you look at it the right way," said the Good Old Chastened Soul. "It's a moral tonic. It simplifies living, it stimulates activity.

"I've known lots of people who would never have gone to work if they had not been fortunately brought to a condition of brokeness. I don't know anything that sharpens a man's faculties like being broke."

"And his appetite," suggested the young man.

"And his appetite," agreed the Good Old Chastened Soul. "That's an advantage very often. I've had doctors tell me that fasting now and then is extremely beneficial. We work our digestive apparatus entirely too hard, as a general thing, we eat too much.

"The body doesn't require a great deal of food to sustain it. I was very much interested in some experiments in that direction conducted by a Washington scientist. He got the war department to lend him a few soldiers—privates, of course—and deprived them of nourishment for periods of from

All the Better!

"IF you'll excuse me," interrupted the young man with the rueful countenance, "I'd rather not hear about it. I'll face it when it comes, but in the meantime I'd prefer to listen to something a little more cheerful than the pathology of starvation."

"I think you are a little morbid, but we won't talk about it if you find it distressing," said the Good Old Chastened Soul. "But I assure you that it was very interesting. Only three of the men out of a total of eight entirely succumbed, and the constitutions of the survivors are not impaired to nearly the extent that you might imagine.

"But to talk about being broke as though it were something to be dreaded. Besides, you'd be all the better for the experience. Sweet are the uses of adversity.

"Misfortune teaches us more valuable lessons than you can shake a stick at. You may consider it a little unpleasant at the time, but you will emerge from the ordeal a better and wiser man. I really feel as if I ought to congratulate you."

"You're awfully kind and encouraging," said the young man.

"You will find that the friends you trusted and loved will turn their backs upon you," continued the Good Old Chastened Soul. "You will get the glassy stare and the cold, cold shake. You will know just how a sensitive pestilence feels.

"You will know what it is to walk the streets with aching feet and fainting heart and to eat your free lunch with furtive glances at the bar, but you will spring from all that like a Phoenix from its ashes, and soar into the empyrean with shrieks of exultation."

Wrong to Shun It

"I THINK I would certainly feel like giving a few whoops when I got out of it," said the young man. "All the same, I would sooner keep out of it if I could."

"You are wrong to shun it," said the Good Old Chastened Soul. "I have omitted to mention the greatest advantage of all. Some of these fine days, say twenty or thirty years hence, when you are rolling in affluence and finding it stick to you when you get up, you will be able to look back [illegible] and when your friends are [illegible] you and the cherry glows [illegible] the goblet of crystal, or when the gentlemanly young representative of the press seeks to interview you, you can say, 'There was a time when I hadn't a cent to my name.'

"'There was a time when I hadn't a cent to my name!'

"Think of that!" said the Good Old Chastened Soul. "Isn't that worth while? Do you realize the satisfaction that you will get out of the repetition of that proud boast? I hope you do."

"I guess I'll have to be moving around a little," said the young man with the rueful countenance, rising.

"Sit down, my son," said the Good Old Chastened Soul, detaining him by the sleeve. "Of course, if you really object to being broke, after considering its many advantages, that's another matter entirely. Sit down now and tell me just how much it will take to straighten you out and bring back the glad sweet smile of old."

Jealous? The Idea Is Too Ridiculous!

"YOU might tell me what's the trouble," insisted the young man with the frowning brow.

"There isn't anything," said the young woman in pink, with the sweet accent a woman uses when she is ready to quarrel.

"Well, you're mad about something," said the young man. "I haven't done a thing!"

"You have, too!" burst out the young woman. "That's just the trouble! You've done too much! You—you've tried to do two things at once, which is always fatal."

"I'd like to know what you mean," cried the young man with the frown.

"I am telling you, if you'd only listen," said the young woman indignantly. "You've mixed me all up, interrupting! And it wouldn't have been so bad if I could have borne it alone, but other people saw, and no girl likes to be slighted before other people.

A Puzzler

"Mabel," said the young man, grasping one of her hands, "I seem to gather that you're mad at me about something. I don't for the life of me know what it is! Please"—

"You took me to the Smiths to call last evening, didn't you?" demanded the young woman. "And after we got there you never paid any more attention to me than if I had been in the Klondike. You talked the whole evening with Gladys Jones. Though, I must say, how any human being could endure her so long is more than I can guess.

"I'm sure I don't care how much or how long you choose to hang around Gladys, but it was the pointed way you did it, over in the corner by yourselves, as if you were having the best time of your life."

"Weren't you talking to Howard as if your life depended on it?" broke in the young man. "I'd like to know what else I could do."

"That was very different," said the young woman in pink. "Did you expect that I was going to sit gazing with weeping eyes at the corner where you sat engrossed with Gladys?"

"You slighted all the rest of the room, too, when it comes to that," persisted the young man, sternly.

Not the Question

"That isn't the question at all!" said the young woman. "I didn't mind your talking to Gladys, not in the least. I want you to do as you like, of course. I suppose she seemed amusing and interesting to you after you had been with me, for I never pretended to be clever. Still, I've heard people say she was as stupid as—as much. There is no accounting for one's preferences, I suppose."

"I'd like to know what's got into you," said the young man. "You know perfectly well that I don't care a rap about Gladys Jones."

"Well, even if I were of a jealous disposition," said the young woman, "I couldn't be jealous of her. It isn't in my nature. Those things don't bother me a bit."

"Well, they do me," said the young man, with an inspiration. "Do you want to know the real reason I talked to her? Just because I was so fearfully jealous of Howard and the way you were enjoying his conversation."

The young woman in pink began to dimple. "Were you, really?" she asked.

"Frightfully," said the young man, frowning as hard as he could.

"You foolish boy!" murmured the young woman. "It is so ridiculous to be jealous! You ought to be as I am! Why, Howard isn't to be compared with you!"

Fat Wives and Nervous Husbands

(Article 2.)

That "comparisons are odious" is realized by a thin man with a fat wife when the two are riding on the cars. Everybody is amused, or at least the husband thinks they are, when his wife's bulk crowds him insignificantly into a corner. Such marked physical contrasts are bad for domestic peace, and any married person who is noticeably fatter than his, or her, partner, should reduce.

To take off flesh is not difficult nowadays. The Marmola Prescription has made the old-time exercising, dieting and the ruining of one's stomach with acid drugs unnecessary. Now all one needs to do is ask her druggist for ½ oz. Marmola, ½ oz. Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 3½ oz. Sirup Simplex—a pleasant mixture—which should be taken in teaspoonful doses after meals and at bedtime. In a few days the formerly stuffed up fat person feels as though a load had been lifted from her shoulders. The loss, in some cases, will amount to a pound a day, but although this is considerable flesh to lose in twenty-four hours, the use of this mixture is not followed by stomach trouble or wrinkles. Instead, the fat decreases uniformly until the ideal proportions of a beautiful figure have been obtained.

The above receipt is very popular, but for the many who prefer a remedy in tablet form the Marmola Co., of Detroit, Mich., have condensed its full strength into an elegant Prescription tablet. These Marmola tablets may be obtained from any good pharmacist or from the company direct, and as they are packed in extra large cases are not only the most widely used fat reducing tablet your druggist has, but, also, the least expensive.

GERMAN POTATO CAKES

FOUR medium sized potatoes, grated, add one-quarter cup sweet milk and one egg, a good pinch salt and flour enough to make batter as griddle cakes. Fry in just enough lard to cover the bottom of the frying pan. Put in a tablespoon of the batter for each cake, as you would if making fritters. When one side is well browned turn and brown the other side. Delicious. Try it.

Expert Advice on Health and Beauty

WANTS WHITE HAIR

DEAR PROFESSOR:

As my hair is a dirty color, black and gray mixed, I would like your advice on how to turn it all pure white.

MRS. E. F. L.

I KNOW of no way to turn the hair white, but you can do much for it by keeping it in a perfect condition. Air it well for an hour each day. Do not shampoo it too often; use nothing but pure castile soap in the shampoo, except in the last rinse water, when you can add a little bluing, which will keep the white hairs pure white. Brush it much and get it into as lively a condition as possible; don't use the curling irons on it, but train it to curl by putting it up in soft kids at night. If you get the white a pure white its mixture with the black will give an effective iron gray that is always pretty.

KEROSENE FOR HAIR

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you please publish the formula of the kerosene treatment for falling hair?

RENIE.

IT is very helpful to the growth and condition of the hair to massage the scalp about once a month with a few drops of kerosene. After rubbing this well into the scalp, tie up the hair and let it remain over night. In the morning shampoo and dry if possible in the sun. This is especially effective in connection with the vaseline treatment, which demands the application of a few drops of vaseline rubbed well into the scalp each night before retiring. Do not shampoo until actually compelled to for the sake of cleanliness, then use the kerosene the night before. If the hair becomes oily from the treatment, rub the scalp with a soft cloth wet with alcohol. This will remove the oil.

CONSULT PHYSICIAN

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you kindly tell me of some good blood purifier, for my face gets real itchy in the Spring, and then blotches come in my face, also, and make it look bad?

A. T.

IF your trouble is something that does not yield to the home remedy of sulphur and molasses, so often described in this column, you would better consult a physician. The trouble is only an outward indication of some inward disturbance, and as that part of the anatomy is properly the province of the physician, he should be consulted.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WAIT FOR INTRODUCTION

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man residing in [illegible] and almost every evening while out walking, see a young lady whom I would very much like to know. This young lady is very friendly with a few of my friends (men), but they never happen to be with me when I meet her. I have written her several letters, but she has ignored them. What I would like to know is, how shall I become acquainted with her? My friends say they will not introduce me, why, I don't know.

C. J.

YOU [should] not have written to her, and [illegible] she resented your [illegible] did quite right in not answering. In time your friends will [illegible] introduce you to her if she has no [illegible]. In the meantime, if I were you I would not make any effort to meet her or write her again.

NOT VERY SERIOUS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man of twenty-six, and am deeply in love with a young lady four years my junior. She has professed to love me in return, and I believe she does so, yet of late she has been very cold. I have not been able to see her for some time, and I have written several letters to her, to which I have received no reply. The climax came the other night when I called on her and was told that she was out. Later I learned that a young man (a personal friend of mine) was calling on her at the time.

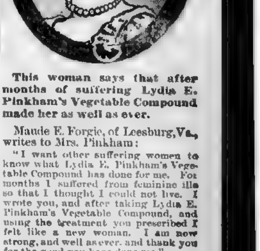
IN LOVE.

IF she did not know that you were going to call I do not see that she was in any way to blame. The other man was there first, and she probably did not feel like entertaining you both at the same time. If she has not answered your letters she may be offended in some way. Why not write and ask if you may call and explain matters?

A Prospect of More Pockets

IT IS said that pockets are to return [illegible] in spite of the rumor no one has ventured to foretell where these comforts to femininity will be placed in the costume. Is it that they will be fastened, as of old, to the underskirt, or will they take their old position at the placket, or, perhaps, will they be cunningly placed in the belt of one of the new semi-princess gowns?

Perhaps they will find a nestling place at the end of the long sash ends, so popular this year, or again there is a possibility that they may be sewn to the hem of the dress. Of course, no matter where they are, it will only be possible to use them to carry the dainty mouchoir of milady.



This woman says that after months of suffering Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made her as well as ever.

Maude E. Forgie, of Leesburg, Va., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I want other suffering women to know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. For months I suffered from feminine ills so that I thought I could not live. I wrote you, and after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and using the treatment you prescribed I felt like a new woman. I am now strong, and well as ever, and thank you for the good you have done me."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

FROM ACROSS THE FOOTLIGHTS

By W. H. Ross.

MME. NAZIMOVA is an actress from whom a whole lot of her American stage sisters could learn something about the fine points of their art. She never lets go of the character she happens to be playing for an instant. Some actresses have a habit of lapsing into their own individuality ever and anon, even if it isn't for a space longer than is necessary to get a fold of a skirt adjusted to the best advantage.

But this little Russian person seems to be absolutely unconscious of anything except the work in hand. Of course, that really is not the case at all, for the highest kind of art is the kind that conceals itself completely and merely puts on the guise of nature. She acts every second. The trifles which are said to be the component parts of perfection stand out in her proceedings like a sunflower would in a dahlia bed. There is a smoothness about her stage business—and abandon, too—which rounds out the whole performance into a remarkably even contour. Most American actresses have as an initial advantage no end of good looks. Their beauty very often is what gets them a chance on the leeward side of the footlights. They look so well that the audiences will stand for a whole lot of bad acting until they develop and become presentable from a dramatic point of view or even "great." But Mme. Nazimova is not dependable for beauty for success. She is where she is to-day because she sure can act. It's more to her credit that she should be attracting so much attention, because she is playing in a class of drama that sends a sensitive soul home with a good deal of a Katzenjammer feeling. Mr. Ibsen is a great dramatist beyond cavil. He has a deep look-in to all the phases of human nature which come out in action. He seems to have had the faculty of weighing soul subtleties and turning them loose on the stage in situations so commonplace that if he was not a consummate artist of his kind not even a psychologist of the most patient brand would stand for three acts of him with doors unbolted and windows unbarred. To make good in Ibsen an actress has to bring the goods right on the stage. It is to the credit of humanity that the Ibsen play is not popular. Even if the world is sordid and averages bad, it is a grand testimonial to the prospects of the human race that people as a rule have keen desire for poetic justice and a play that ends in happiness for the truthful and the virtuous. There are only a few dramatists who tried to get people to sit through a sociological clinic with a stage setting—and also pay for it. When a man can do that he is something of a genius. And an actress who can hold up her share of such a theatrical burden must be very similarly endowed. It will be interesting to watch Mme. Nazimova when she gets cast in plays that have the kindly touch of nature, or artificiality, that makes the gallery shout and stamp in approval.

* * * * * *

Speaking of plays now running in town, and with the same trend of previous thought continued, George Broadhurst's "Man of the Hour," which has had a four months' run at the Tremont Theatre, is a piece which has no soul or sex problems to elucidate, but fills a much larger public want than anything Mr. Ibsen ever wrote. It is justly popular because it rightly pleases. It is purely contemporaneous and is not a play that would live [illegible] because it mirrored most keenly some great human [illegible] truths. It is a play of the present time and of this country [illegible] deals with conditions in these United States which, happily for the [illegible] our beloved country, are sure to be evanescent. It would not be [illegible] aside from its sentimental phase, in any other country in the world. It is as thoroughly American as a broiled live lobster. The demand is for up-to-date plays which deal with local life and manners. The stage is beginning to hold the mirror up to home nature like newspapers do. Until very recently we lived theatrically upon the British drama, which was a fine thing in its way, but bound to get passe in a land so original that the English [illegible] we are ruining their language.

Richard Carle is a comedian who comes near being sui generis. He isn't like any other comicalist at present doing stage stunts. He has so much individuality that he is hard to copy, and he shifts the cut so often that he doesn't stand long in any part or pose to serve as a model for imitators. There is always something new in a Carle production. As a "producer," as variety performers used to say before press agents elevated them into polite vaudeville, he is away up at the top of the list. He is an actor man who deserves his success, for he has more than the crass ability to simply make people laugh. There is a good deal of intellect represented in his climb as well as inherent mirth-producing proclivities. Added to natural talents and the sore vicissitudes that go with stage life—the popular belief notwithstanding—Carle had a plethoric persistence which would not be denied. In fact, his success shows it is always better to knock the door of opportunity than to knock your fellow-man. Carle is a Somerville man. He is one of a goodly company of stage favorites who have come from Greater Boston. Incidentally, this is not only a good town to come from, but a good town to come back to.

It would be fine to have one green dollar for every time "East Lynne" has been played. It made almost everybody's grandmother weep. In the number of times performed it would run a close second to "Uncle Tom's Cabin." It is a fine old play. It is full of heart throbs and will never die. It will be holding down the stage long after John D. Rockefeller voluntarily pays that $29,000,000 fine.

Keith's Theatre

Houdini proved at Keith's last week that he is one of the greatest drawing cards vaudeville has ever known. His new feats, particularly the one in which he is submerged in a [illegible] galvanized iron can, are the most perplexing he has yet done in Boston, and he promises still more mysteries for the coming week, the last, by the way, that he will play in Boston for several years. He will accept a limited number of challenges, being particularly desirous of receiving "defies" to attempt stunts of a novel nature. Due announcements of his special performances will be made in the daily papers. A capital surrounding bill will include the Elinore Sisters, Kate and May, the comediennes, in their latest merriment maker, "The Actress and the Maid"; Goodman's troupe of trained cats, dogs and pigeons, a feature at the New York Hippodrome for the past six months; Pat [illegible], the winsome soubrette, in her pretty playlet, "A New Year's Dream"; Marecna, Nevaro and Marecna, in a droll acrobatic comedy turn; Clifford and Burke, two of vaudeville's best blackface entertainers; [illegible] Gardner of Bankers' theatricals fame, in a new monologue of stories and songs; the Five Musical Spillers, in a [illegible] instrumental act; Brandon and Wilson, slick dancers; Jeanre and Ellsworth, in a novel conception, and new kinetograph pictures.

Hollis Street Theatre

One [illegible] week for "Bob" Edeson in "Classmates" at the Hollis Street Theatre. The attendance has been good at the theatre during the opening week, and it looks as though the play could have had here for a longer run than the brief fortnight allotted it. But this is not possible, owing to other bookings, so the coming week brings "Classmates" to a close. There will be the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees. The feminine attendance has been of the usual large proportion, and the Boston young woman has watched Edeson's love-making in ecstatic delight. As Lieutenant Irving in "Classmates" Edeson has a congenial role. From the time he appears as a West Point cadet in the first act till he reaches the tense third act in the South American jungle Edeson plays the Irving role with virile force and ready intelligence.

Boston Theatre

Manager Lindsay Morison thinks of his offering for the public at the Boston Theatre this coming week and smiles with satisfaction. For he's going to put on "The Girl of the Golden West." By special arrangement with David Belasco the local company will have all the scenery, costumes, properties and lighting effects planned and made for the presentation of the play at the Belasco Theatre in New York. The incidental music composed and arranged for the New York production will be introduced. This noted play has had no performance heretofore except those given by Belasco companies at the combination houses. In offering it at popular stock company prices Manager Morison thinks the public will be pleased.

Eleanor Gordon returns to the local company and will play the leading part of The Girl. Other roles will be capably filled and the entire strength of the company will be utilized.

Park Theatre

Patricia O'Brien-Rose Stahl is going to do a little entertaining on her own account. She announces that on next Thursday afternoon she will give a special matinee performance of "The Chorus Lady" at the Park Theatre, to which all the chorus girls at present playing or residing in Boston will be admitted. And she adds that the public isn't barred either. As is pretty well known most everywhere by this time, Miss Stahl plays the part of a chorus girl in the James Forbes comedy and it is with the idea of letting her sisters of the profession get a view of the performance that she has arranged to give the special matinee next Thursday. Miss Stahl begins the eighth week of her Boston engagement at the Park on Monday evening.

Globe Theatre

"1492" enters on its last week at the Globe Theatre to-morrow. On Monday afternoon, May 11, Mayer & Sweeney's musical comedy company will present the famous New York success, "The Rounders." So this week brings the last chance to see Richard Harlow as Isabella, to see Bud Ross and Nellie Daly's "Tornado" dance and to see Neil McNeil and Anna McNabb in their Indian specialty. Also, it will be last chance to hear the merry "Girl in Green" song that has made quite a hit. This revival of "1492," with its added allen to Rosen in the second act, has been a treat to lovers of good musical comedy in general, and that favorite old production in particular. The merry songs, the clever comedy "business" and all the familiar parts of the Columbus show have been gladly welcomed.

Park Theatre Benefit

To-morrow night at the Park is a benefit performance for Treasurer James R. Keen and Ticket Agent Frank Canley, whose friends will swell the attendance at "The Chorus Lady" to proportions even greater than usual. Keen and Canley were together at the old Boston Museum and went up to the Park Theatre when Charles Frohman, Rich & Harris took that house.

Bowdoin Square Theatre

United States history holds forth at the Bowdoin Square Theatre the coming week when the famous military drama, "Northern Lights" will be played. The story of the play is based on the stirring incidents connected with the redskins' attack on Fort Terry during the early days of '76, when General Custer and Sitting Bull were fighting for supremacy. Without straining the true historical narrative, the events of that time furnish material for most sensational situations, thrilling lines and intense dramatic action. Among the features are the victorious ride of Wallace Gray, the self-sacrificing deserter; and the unsuccessful ride of Swiftwind. Charlotte Hunt will play "Little Major," the "Pet of the Regiment." Arthur Maitland will appear as Swiftwind, the Sioux; Charles Stevens as Sidney Sherwood; Edwin Denison as Colonel Gray, and other members of the company in acceptable roles.

Columbia Theatre

Williams's Imperials hold forth this week at the Columbia, with new songs, pretty girls and lively action. Larry McCale has the principal comedy role, and the cast includes such as Harry Bentley, Joe Love, Ida Sturgis, Margie Hilton, Nellie Lawyer and Julia Heintzman. They have two burlettas, "A Night in Paris" and "Off to the Front," with a strong olio.

Cazeaux, who has been matched with Tom Jenkins for a big purse, will appear at the Columbia Wednesday night, his opponent being Samson, the Western heavyweight, who gave Steurs such a hard tussle last season. Amateurs are carded for two evenings this week—Thursday and Friday. Bargain matinees for ladies will be given every day this week with the exception of Saturday.

Howard Athenaeum

The "Yankee Doodle Girls" come to the Old Howard to-morrow, and the "Yankee Doodle" damsels do claim that they can show Boston who's who in burlesque, they do. Among the features will be the military drill, given by the girls, all attired in neat fitting military garments. The program includes two musical burlettas written and put on by James F. Leonard, the clever comedian of the company. One is named "Sullivan on Parade," the other "Sullivan's Recruits." Jules Harron, the German comedian, will assist in the fun making. Martini and Maximillian will be there and also Sadie Huested, the "Girl With the Goods," and Etta Victoria, the "Bashful Venus." The "continuous" includes Donovan and Ireland, in their comedy "A Wise Fool"; DeMuths couple in song and dance, Joe Hardman, Cora Evelyn and her baton, Hill and Ackerman, the grotesque acrobats; the two singing Stanleys, Esther Wallace, comedienne; Billy Barlow, the talkster; Ada Corbett, the change artiste, and new moving pictures.

Tremont Theatre.

"The Man of the Hour" enters upon its one hundred and twenty-fifth Boston performance to-morrow night. Figures may lie or they may not, but there is no argument when a play has been so consistently "on the job" as this story of love and politics which is still drawing good houses at the Tremont. They say at the box office that by the close of to-morrow night's performance [illegible] with just such political problems in it as "The Man of the Hour" elucidates.

Castle Square Theatre

Just tell father or mother that The Players at the Castle Square Theatre are going to put on "East Lynne" for the coming week.

"Well, well," says father, "why, I saw 'East Lynne' years and years ago. I don't just remember the year. It was long before you were born, my dear. And it was a great play."

And mother adds: "'East Lynne,' dear me. I saw that too, when I was a girl."

So if you haven't seen that famous old emotional drama, then go to its revival at the Castle Square this week. Very likely father and mother will want to go to, just to see it over again, for it's a very famous old production and a mighty drawing card in its day. Charles Miller will play Sir Francis Levison. Miss Mabel Carruthers will be Lady Isabel Vane. Gertrude Binley will play Barbara Hare and the other members of the company will have suitable roles.

Grand Opera House

With last night's performance the Grand Opera House closed its doors for the season, after a successful period of forty weeks. In reference to this Messrs. Stair & Wilbur and Magee say: "We closed for the Summer, Saturday evening, May 2, after a remarkable successful season covering forty weeks, ending the twenty-first season at the Grand Opera House, and we wish to herewith thank our patrons for their cordial and constant support. What renovations that are necessary in the auditorium and foyers will be made during the Summer, the theatre reopening early in August with a big new melodramatic offering."

Palace Theatre.

The Gay Morning Glories will glow at the Palace Theatre this coming week. This company carries a chorus of thirty girls of the "peach" variety, while its comedians are clever performers. The Gay Morning Glories claim to be among the leaders in the burlesque field. It has two rollicking burlesque pieces. One is "The Pleasures of Paris." The other is entitled "Forbidden Fruit." Funny situations, catchy lines and lively music are not lacking. The olio includes James and Lucy Cooper, comedy entertainers; the three musical Stewarts; Flo Zellar, comedienne; the Six English Bells, a sextette of singers and dancers, and the Spitz Moore Company, in a character skit, "A Self-Made Man." There will be new pictures by the Palacescope to round out the bill.

THOUSANDS CHEER NEW NATIONAL PARTY.

ENTHUSIASM ABOUNDS

PICK NATIONAL DELEGATES

W. R. Hearst, A. J. Boulton, R. R. Lyon and Dr. G. H. W. Auel Elected Delegates.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Amid scenes of the greatest enthusiasm and harmony the new Independence Party in New York State stepped into the arena of national politics to-night at its first State convention in this State held in Carnegie Hall.

William Randolph Hearst, of New York; Alfred J. Boulton, of King's; Rubin Rolin Lyon, of Steuben, and Dr. C. H. W. Auel, of Erie, were named as the four delegates-at-large to the first national convention of the party, to be held in Chicago late in July.

In addition, thirty-nine electors to represent the party in the electoral college, which will name the twenty-seventh President of the United States after the election in November, were named. A strong, straightforward platform, meeting the great issues before the voters of the country, fairly and openly, was adopted with a shout of approval as soon as it was presented to the convention by Clarence J. Shearn, chairman of the committee on resolutions.

Spectators Crowd Hall.

Delegates and spectators crowded the body of the great auditorium and women in bright dresses filled the boxes beneath the brilliant decorations that girdled the hall when the convention opened at 8.45 o'clock. For half an hour before Begg's Military Band had been playing patriotic airs, and as executive committeeman John T. Martin of New York stepped forward to the speaker's desk to call the big gathering to order the whole audience was singing the "Star Spangled Banner."

When the national song had been finished with vim and dash and cheers, Mr. Martin made the appointments of his secretaries and introduced Henry A. Powell of Kings, the temporary chairman. There had no day been a let up in the enthusiasm from the moment the doors opened, but when Mr. Powell declared that the year is not far off when the country will flock to the standard of the Independence party and make it the national champion of [illegible] and righteousness the applause became [illegible] could hardly be stilled.

[illegible] Mr. Powell nominated Chairman [illegible] delegations. Dr. [illegible] was made head of the committee on permanent organization and credentials [illegible] Clarence J. Shearn was chosen [illegible] of the resolutions committee [illegible] as leader of the committee [illegible] and electors.

[illegible] Chairman Powell had undertaken [illegible] the enthusiasm of the convention [illegible] after naming these committees [illegible] that a fifteen minute adjournment be taken while the committees [illegible] in ante-rooms outside to make [illegible] reports. The crowd wouldn't [illegible]. They called for speeches from [illegible] old leaders of the movement [illegible] upon the stage. They cheered [illegible], Max Johnsen, the former candidate of the League for sheriff, and [illegible] called so insistently for John Temple Graves that Mr. Graves was [illegible] to the front of the platform and to [illegible].

John Temple Graves's Speech.

"The platform of the Independence party," he said, "is clear, definite and sincere." Mr. Graves alluded to Mr. Hearst [illegible] great leader." This allusion was [illegible] to the echo.

"[illegible] reform campaigns first waged by William Randolph Hearst were what induced President Roosevelt to make them his issues," said Mr. Graves. "It was [illegible] who taught the President what [illegible] do in the coal trust and the beef [illegible]. It is Mr. Hearst who has led the way through pretty nearly every one of [illegible] that have resulted in so [illegible] good to the people, and the people [illegible] beginning to find it out. Already they [illegible] understanding what they owe him, and already they are beginning to make their voice heard."

Cheers for W. R. Hearst.

Colonel Alexander Bacon was still in the midst of his address when Mr. Hearst at 10 o'clock entered the hall.

The delegates, the people in the boxes and the whole audience packed into the auditorium clapped hands, sang and stamped as Mr. Hearst took his seat. The band, playing "Hail to the Chief" as he entered, was forced to repeat it for fifteen minutes before the audience would permit it to cease. Part of the crowd even started to march about the tiers, singing and cheering before the chairman and Mr. Hearst could gain a hearing.

This convention was remarkable in its difference from the stale conventions of the two old parties which preceded it—the Republican convention, boss-ridden and listless, declaring for Governor Hughes, whom

23 HORSES LOST IN STABLE FIRE

Three-Story Building on Dorchester Avenue Damaged by Early Morning Blaze.

Twenty-three horses perished in a fire which broke out at 1.15 o'clock this morning in the W[illegible] & Co., three-story brick [illegible] at No. 70 Dorchester avenue, South [illegible]. The horses were on the second floor, reached by a runway. In the dense [illegible] smoke that poured out into the avenue it was impossible to reach them.

Next door to the stable was a thickly tenanted dwelling house. The Feeney, Tobin and [illegible] families, aroused by belated pedestrians [illegible] to the street in their night clothes [illegible].

At [illegible] early hour the cause of the blaze was still a mystery. On the street floor of the W[illegible] & Co.'s stable were wagons and carriages. Some of these were got out into the street, but the smoke was so dense and the fire so menacing that with the arrival of the firemen nobody [illegible] attempt at rescuing the horses. The frenzied animals kicked and whinnied [illegible].

In the lower floor at No. 72 Dorchester avenue, on the corner of First street, lived Mrs. Bridget Feeney and her seven children, the oldest, John, twenty-two years, and the youngest, [illegible] May, seven months old. The Feeneys came out of the threatened building with nothing but their night dresses. Some early arrivals on the scene however, rushed into the house and brought out furniture, which was carried across the way.

Mrs. Tobin and four little ones and the [illegible] on the upper floor, also escaped in safety.

Fire which broke out in the stable at No. 87 Dresser street, South Boston, at 12.45 this morning, damaged the building and contents to the value of $400. The stable was occupied by F. Kane, a peddler. In it were two horses, wagons and harnesses. Both horses were taken out by Patrolmen Scott, De Yone and Coffin of the East Broadway station. The building was owned by Frank Squires.

WIRE BURNS OFF; LEAVES SOCIETY IN DARKNESS

The burning out of an eighty-foot wire, which connects the main electric wire in the town of Brookline, left the lower part of the town in darkness for more than five hours last night. All the hotels and residences in the fashionable Winchester street district were in total darkness until the Edison Company could rush a gang of linemen to the district and replace the wire.

HOLDUP AT POINT OF GUN IN WALTHAM

Within a few rods of the throngs of Saturday night shoppers on Main street, Waltham Clifford S. Cobb, proprietor of the Central Dry Goods Store of that city, was held up and robbed of $25 and a gold watch at 10.15 last night. Mr. Cobb was within 200 yards of his own home, which is on Townsend street, when a masked man suddenly thrust a revolver into his face and demanded his money.

Although Cobb was within easy call of the crowds on Main street, and almost within the glare of an arc light at the corner of Towsend street, he became so flustered that he handed over all his money and his watch without making a single outcry.

THROWS OUT LAMP AS TENANTS FLEE

Boarder in North End Save Tenement Building by Brave Action.

Endicott street and the other crowded avenues in that section of the North End turned out to witness a brief but spectacular blaze shortly after 11 o'clock last night, when John Januseefski, thirty-two years old, a boarder in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Jeanutes, on the second floor of No. 25, [illegible] one to one of the Jeanutes's [illegible] window and threw a flaming lamp [illegible] to the hallway [illegible] burned [illegible] the furnishings of the parlor were practically destroyed.

There were [illegible] tenants on three upper floors of the four-story brick structure, the [illegible] being occupied as a grocery [illegible]. Each of the tenants had ten or [illegible] boarders. They poured into the street and joined the lookers-on.

The story [illegible] policemen and firemen is that [illegible] lamp exploded. Josephine [illegible] the boarders, heard the explosion. When she opened a door leading [illegible] a gust of fire burst forth. Miss [illegible] gave the alarm.

[illegible] the same instant, Januseefski [illegible] of the night, entered the [illegible] door, grabbed the flaming lamp and threw it out into Endicott street.

An alarm was rung from the corner of Hanover street and firemen came in from [illegible] and Bullfinch streets. They made short work of the blaze. Fire and water caused a damage of about $100 to the Jeanutes parlor and some damage to the building owned by Luigi Squillicioto.

STUDENTS RIOT AS FLAMES RAGE

One Fireman Fatally Hurt Dies, Two Others Injured at New Haven.

New Haven, Ct., May 2.—Returning from a fire that for three hours gave the firemen of New Haven the most stubborn fight they have had in months, and during which all the police reserves of the central police stations were required to quell a fierce fight with a crowd of Yale students and young men of the town, who attempted to break through the fire lines, one fireman was fatally injured and later died, and two others are in a precarious condition, as a result of the explosion of the heating plant of their engine house.

The men injured in the explosion are: Lieutenant Frank Connors, fatally scalded; Fireman James Martell and John Flasey. The latter are in the hospital in a precarious condition.

When the alarm was turned in at 8 o'clock for the Arnold Building, occupied by the Frank E. Fowler, general merchandise company at Church and State streets, in the very centre of the business district, smoke and flames were pouring from the upper floors of the four-story building, attracting the largest crowd the police have had to deal with in months.

Hundreds of Yale students were in the crowds pressing against the fire lines. Police reserves, shouting and waving their clubs, waded into the crowd, and in the fighting several persons were clubbed.

Students Graham Foster, Charles Gilbert and Benjamin F. B. Wallis were badly battered up, when followed by a mob, they were taken to the police station and charged with inciting a riot. They were released on $500 bail each.

Foster is in the law school, captain of the Yale wrestling team and played tackle on the 'varsity football team last year. Gilbert, who is a senior, is manager of the Yale Daily News.

LIGHTNING BOLT FROM CLEAR SKY

Wrecks Malden Telephone and Telegraph System While Sun Shines.

A lightening bolt coming out of a practically clear sky, while the sun shone brightly on the other side of the city caused considerable excitement in the West Side section of Malden yesterday afternoon, and played havoc with the telephone and telegraph lines.

Over 170 lines of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company and half a dozen lines of the Western Union Telegraph Company were put out of commission by the lightning.

CHARGE MURDER, SAYING WOMAN WAS POISONED

Edward R. Bostwick Declares That Sister, Who Died in Agony, Was the Victim of Foul Play in Strange Case.

AUTHORITIES TO PROBE WORCESTER MYSTERY

Her Own Kin and Husband Join in Asking Investigation of Circumstances Surrounding the Fatal Illness of Mrs. Attie Bostwick Hall.

WORCESTER, May 2.—Relatives of Mrs. Attie Bostwick Hall, who died at her home, No 468 Park avenue, February 29, declare that she was murdered, and have appealed to District Attorney George S. Taft to make a searching investigation into the circumstances surrounding her death.

Mrs. Hall died in agony. Symptoms preceding her death are declared to indicate that she had been poisoned. Her body was embalmed and taken to her girlhood home at South Londonderry Vt., where it was laid at rest. Steps have already been taken to exhume the woman's remains, that an autopsy may be performed and a chemical analysis made to determine if the viscera contains traces of poison.

Advices received to-day from South Londonderry by Edward R. Bostwick, a brother of the dead woman, state that Medical Examiner B. F. Willington has secured a permit for the exhumation of the body and is ready to take action upon definite instructions from either Mrs. Hall's relatives or the Massachusetts authorities.

"I believe my sister was poisoned," said Edward R. Bostwick to a Boston Sunday American reporter to-day. "I have consulted Attorney Harrison W. Bowker and have been advised to secure a thorough investigation into her strange death. I called on District Attorney Taft on Thursday, laid all the facts before him and secured his promise that he would conduct a searching inquiry, and if murder has been done leave no stone unturned to bring the guilty to justice."

Husband, Too, Wants Inquiry.

The dead woman's husband declares that he, too, is anxious to have a thorough investigation made into the death of his wife.

He said to a Boston Sunday American reporter to-day:

"Twice have I asked Dr. Clark, the medical examiner, to perform an autopsy, so as to know just what my wife died of, but they said that it wasn't necessary.

"Once I called on the chief of police about it and once on Detective Roach, but they told me I needn't come again; that they would send for me if there was anything to ask me.

"I'll go to the District-Attorney and demand that the State hold an autopsy and find out what my wife died of."

The investigation thus initiated brings the authorities of Worcester County face to face with a deep and perplexing death mystery.

Dr. Windsor A. Brown, who was called to attend Mrs. Hall in her dying agony, but who got to the house too late, pronounced death due to neuralgia of the heart. Dr. Brown admits that he made this declaration without making an examination.

Acting Medical Examiner Clark readily accepted this declaration as conclusive and final and did nothing about the case.

"Couldn't Tell As to Poison"

The Medical Examiner has had nothing to do with the case since then, despite the fact that the friends of Mrs. Hall declare that they called his attention to the fact that Dr. Brown had made no examination of the dead body of Mrs. Hall. Now the facts are in the possession of District Attorney Taft.

"I did not arrive until Mrs. Hall was dead," Dr. Brown said to a Boston Sunday American reporter. I examined for her pulse and found none. I put a mirror to her face and tested with my stethoscope. The woman was dead.

"I questioned Mr. Hall and he told me that his wife was subject to heart trouble and so I supposed that she died as the result of one of these spells.

"When I got back to my office I telephoned to the Medical Examiner and stated the circumstances to him. He said that he didn't see any reason for him to investigate the case or to view the body.

"I could not tell whether the woman was poisoned. I did not look for any symptoms of poisoning because I had no cause to. I could not say that she was not poisoned."

Dr. Clarence W. Whittaker, who was the Hall family physician, has given the authorities much valuable information on the case. His information is regarded as most important, and Dr. Whittaker will be one of the chief dependencies in the investigation which has been [illegible].

Mr. Hall and his three boys, Raymond, eighteen, Leon, fifteen, and Ralph, twelve, are living quietly in their home in Park avenue. Mr. Hall has secured the services of Mrs. Belle Worcester, who had lived in Rutland, Vt., for some time, as housekeeper.

Just twenty years ago Attie Maud Bostwick and Eugene F. Hall eloped from South Londonderry, Vt., and fled across the State line to a small town in New Hampshire where they were married. The girl was but sixteen years of age, pretty and one of the belles of the countryside. The boy was not more than nineteen, and he was the handsomest youth in the village.

It was a love match, the kind the world

WILLIAM R. HEARST'S SPEECH AT NEW YORK CONVENTION

NEW YORK, May 2.—William Randolph Hearst's speech, delivered at the Independence Party Convention at Carnegie Hall this evening, follows:

My Friends: When I look upon this great hall, well crowded in this inclement weather, I am filled with admiration for the vitality of a movement which has survived two fusions.

This astonishing strength, attained under the most disheartening circumstances, is but an intimation of what the party may achieve if it remain free from the contamination of fusion, and devotedly true to its own principles.

It has been difficult to prevent fusion while the Independence party was composed of disconnected organizations in different States, largely influenced by local conditions. Indeed, the National Independence Party was founded not only to give this movement unity of organization, unity of purpose and unity of action, but to compel recognition of the fact that the League is not the trading club to be used for the benefit of politicians, but a great party to be devoted to the best interests of the whole people.

The members of this convention do not all know that I have been a most sullen and reluctant convert to fusion in times past, and that I have argued strongly against it in the councils of the League.

Yet there are many in this hall who have been on committees before which I have spoken, and what I have said to them privately I am now going to say publicly to all.

Fusion Political Hari-Kari.

Fusion is merely a political adaptation of the Japanese custom of committing hari-kari on the doorstep of your enemy.

Every fusion means a loss in strength, in standing, or at least in opportunity for the Independence League.

There are three stages of fusion—fusion, confusion and diffusion.

Now, my friends, either this Independence Party movement is necessary or it is not. If it is not, then let us go back into the old parties and vote there and stay there, and if it is necessary, then let us not sacrifice our ultimate high aims and patriotic purposes for the false hope of a temporary success.

If we are sincere in our denunciation of the old parties, we must be consistent in our opposition to the old parties.

If the old parties are not good enough to vote for, they are not good enough to vote with.

I claim that even where fusion is defensible morally, it is unwise politically. Every time we fuse with the Democrats, we lead some of our ex-Democrats back into the ditch of Democracy, and drive some of our ex-Republicans back into the slough of Republicanism. The same thing happens when we fuse with the Republicans. And after fusion it takes at least a year's experience of Republican robbery or Democratic depravity to bring our lost sheep back into the fold.

Every time we fuse, we infuse some of our vigorous new blood into the veins of the decrepit old parties, and while that may do the old parties some temporary good, it certainly does us and the ultimate success of our cause inestimable harm.

That homely philosopher, Josh Billings, declared that success consists not so much in never making mistakes as in never making the same mistake twice.

Experience has taught us that fusion is a mistake, and prudence, as well as public duty, should prevent us from repeating that mistake.

Our experiences, both in New York and Illinois, may be cited as illuminating examples of the evils of fusion.

In 1906 the radicals in this State claimed to have control of the Democratic party and declared that it would be deplorable if the progressives in the League and the progressives in the Democratic party should be divided, and the reactionaries, united in the Republican party, should be allowed to win.

This argument prevailed, and finally the League fused with, or rather allowed the important candidates on its ticket to be indorsed by the Democracy. The League's candidate for Governor was indorsed, the League's candidate for Lieutenant-Governor was indorsed, the League's candidate for Secretary of State was indorsed, and a compromise candidate for Attorney-General was indorsed.

Refuse Harmony With Hypocrisy.

This seemed like a complete victory for the League, but it was, nevertheless, a mistake. I had not advanced far in the campaign before I found that there could be no harmony without hypocrisy, and so I personally declined to fuse. I denounced McCarren, the Democratic boss of Brooklyn. I said that Murphy might be for me, but I was not for Murphy, and when Van Wyck came out in my support, I said I did not want the support of any ice trust Mayor or any gas trust Mayor.

Of course I lost my election, but I saved my self-respect.

I was defeated by the machines of New York city and Brooklyn.

And I congratulate them on their foresight in defeating me, for my first act as Governor would have been to lift the dishonest officials of those corrupt machines out of office by the hair of their unworthy heads.

That is one experience. Another occurred in Chicago. The Independence League was a promising party when Judge Dunne was renominated by the Democrats for Mayor of Chicago.

Judge Dunne was an able and conscientious man, and his friends insisted that the League should indorse him. They admitted that the Democratic machine was dishonest, but claimed, truthfully enough, that Judge Dunne was honest, and said that if the League did not support him he would not be elected, and the cause of reform would receive a setback. The League finally indorsed Judge Dunne, and the Democratic Party defeated Judge Dunne.

The League brought many honest and sincere citizens to his support, and the Republican and Independent wards showed heavy gains in his favor, but the Loefflers and the Hinkey Dinks and the Bath House Johns and purchasable politicians of certain Democratic districts betrayed their own party and defeated their own candidate.

But even if fusion had proved successful in a given election, I maintain that it would still have been a mistake.

I declare that the formation of a new party, permanently devoted to rescuing the government from the control of selfish interests and restoring it to the impartial administration of the whole citizenship is of more importance than the election of any individual whatsoever.

The government of this nation was reposed in the hands of the whole people by the Declaration of Independence, by the Constitution and by the plain purposes of its founders.

People Robbed of Government

It has been taken out of the hands of the people by powerful special interests who have controlled it and conducted it for their own selfish advantages.

To express the spirit of the Declaration of Independence, to maintain the Constitution, to carry out the purposes of the founders of the government, to re-establish free government by fair majority rule for the full benefit of the whole community, the Independence Party exists.

There is distinct danger to the Republic in the attempt to deprive the citizens of the free exercise of the liberties and the full enjoyment of the opportunities which the founders of the government secured for us and bequeathed to us.

There is a distinct danger, not only in the control of government by privileged interests, but in the interference of government with individual liberty.

There is a distinct danger, not only in the centralization of power, but in the exercise of that power for the favoring of friends and the persecution of enemies.

These evils have developed under the domination of the old parties, and will exist as long as the domination of the old parties continues.

These evils will only be corrected—can only be corrected—by a new party whose sole purpose is the perpetuation of the government as the founders framed it, and the preservation of the liberty and equality, the independence and opportunity which have been the invaluable inheritance of all American citizens.

DEMAND DEATH INQUIRY

RELATIVES DECLARE WOMAN POISONED

Authorities Will Investigate Circumstances in Case of Mrs. Hall of Worcester.

DR. MAGRATH'S DEDUCTIONS FROM SYMPTOMS IN THE CASE

WHEN shown the following description of the symptoms which are declared to have immediately preceded and succeeded the mysterious death of Mrs. Attie Bostwick Hall of Worcester, and yet not told in what person these symptoms were observed, Medical Examiner George B. Magrath of Suffolk County said: "It seems to me not impossible that in this instance they may have been caused by some form of poisoning." The symptoms submitted were as follows:

Drank glass of liquid; got up from bed almost immediately and fell groaning to the floor. Found lying face down upon the floor.

Groaning as though in great pain. The tongue was out and the patient seemed to be trying to get water.

Seemed to be seized with contortions, though position was such that arms could not be moved freely.

Tongue seemed to be doubled up in the mouth.

Limbs became rigid while patient still lived.

After death hands were discolored, and around finger nails the color was deeper.

Lips were dried and looked as though burned. The face was a peculiar pallor of a yellowish tint.

Dr. Magrath made the following statement:

"The conditions described in the enclosed copy appear to be those of a death preceded by the symptoms of pain and convulsions.

"Although it is true that in the course of certain diseases death may be preceded by such symptoms, it seems to me not impossible that in this instance they may have been caused by some form of poisoning."

always pauses to look and smile upon. On January 28, last, the girl of the romance, grown to be the mother of three fine boys well along in their teens, died suddenly in her home in Worcester, whither she and the boy hero of her life had come shortly after their romantic marriage.

"Gene" Hall and Attie Bostwick never knew when they first fell in love. They never even knew when they first met, for they grew up together as school children in the quaint and pretty town of South Londonderry. As children they had played together from infancy and when they attended school they were known to their schoolmates as more than chums.

Bride's Family Angry.

The schoolday affection quickly ripened into love of youth. "Attie" was everything to "Gene" and "Gene" was "Attie's" greatest hero. This mutual affection between boy and girl and then maiden and youth was not pleasing to the Bostwick family, but the parents thought it would soon pass away as such affairs usually do.

But when all South Londonderry was interested at the elopement of young Hall and the pretty Attie Bostwick, there was anger in the home of the girl bride's family. No one else in the town was surprised, for everyone said "Just what I expected." Steps to the annulment of the marriage were even contemplated by the Bostwick family, but cooler counsels prevailed and the paternal blessing was reluctantly given.

At nineteen young Hall had the physique of a man, and when married he was over six feet in height. Though somewhat stocky now, in build, he is still a handsome man.

"Gene" Hall was independent from the beginning. The reluctant parental assent to the runaway match chafed him, and he persuaded his bride to go out with him into the world, where he would easily earn a good living for them both and soon provide her with a cozy, comfortable home.

Of course she agreed. "Gene" could do anything, and almost hand in hand they left old South Londonderry and went to Worcester, where they lived until the strange tragedy of last February.

Became a Great Favorite.

As soon as Hall arrived in Worcester he secured a position with a firm of building contractors. The Vermont boy was strong, faithful, steady and more than fulfilled the expectations of his employers. He soon became invaluable, and in turn a great favorite.

For a time the couple lived with Mrs. L. H. Samoson. Then "Gene," true to his word, established a pretty home for his bride in Eastern avenue, Worcester. After two years of happy life a baby boy came to the home, and as the years came and went two other boys were added to the family.

Once there was an estrangement and in August of 1905 Eugene Hall, after a misunderstanding and dispute with his wife, left his home, which had been moved to No. 488 Park avenue, Worcester, and took a room at his father's home.

He frequently visited his wife and his handsome boys, however, and upon the occasion of each of these visits Mrs. Hall assured him of her undying love and begged him to return to his home.

Finally, the wife's prayers prevailed and Eugene Hall came back to live at the Park avenue house with his wife and sons. There was joy in the little home and, apparently, the husband's love for his fine-looking wife returned and they happy and reunited.

NEVER COMPLAINED OF HEART DISEASE, SAYS HER SISTER-IN-LAW

Worcester, May 2.—Mrs. Edward P. Bostwick, sister-in-law of the dead woman, makes this statement:

"The morning that Attie died I didn't get to the house until after she was dead. When I got there the doctors had gone. She was lying on the couch. Her hands were discolored and looked purple, and around the finger nails the color was deeper. Her lips were dried and looked as though burned. Her face was a peculiar pallor of a yellowish tint.

"Attie used to tell us all of her troubles, and she never said that she had heart trouble. We never knew that she had it. I was up at her house the night before she died, and that was after she had done a big day's work. She had done all the washing and ironing alone, besides cooking and the general housework. She was happy and looked well. She played and [illegible] at the piano.

"When I got to the house Saturday morning Mr. Hall asked me if I didn't think the body ought to be embalmed at once. I told him that was for him to decide, and he said that he thought it should be done. Then he went down stairs and called up the undertaker. The body was taken down to Caswell's that noon. Attie did not have any life insurance. She was in some association which simply guarantees to pay your doctor bills if you are sick."

one of its leaders desired and the Democratic convention, ending in fisticuffs, which made it necessary for the police to interfere and restore order.

Independence was the watchword of the convention, delegates expressed themselves freely on every point at issue, and the men named to represent the party at its national convention, as well as the men to serve as electors, were the choice of the 150 delegates elected at official primaries held in every county of the State. Outsiders and followers of the old boss-ridden parties expressed their surprise at the freedom and harmony which prevailed throughout the convention.

Red Letter Day for Party.

In many respects to-day was a red letter day for the party in New York State. The Executive Committee of the State Committee assembled in the parlors of Carnegie Hall at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. At this meeting preliminary details were discussed. The Executive Committee then adjourned, and the full State committee met at 3:30 o'clock.

At this meeting arrangements for the campaign organization were considered and various planks for the platform of the party were discussed. While the State committee was in session hundreds of delegates gathered in district conventions to elect two delegates each and two alternates to the National convention were held in the eleven congressional districts of New York county.

One of the features of the session was the fact that practically every one of the 150 assembly districts in the State was represented by full delegations of three delegates and three alternates.

The fact that men not chosen as delegates by their counties came to New York to attend this launching of the party which they have decided to support, was an indication of the spirit of enthusiasm for the State convention. In addition to this, the fact that not a single contest was brought in a single one of the 150 delegations indicated the fairness by which the primaries at which the delegations were selected were held.

CLAIM TAFT LACKS BUT 32 DELEGATES

359 Instructed, 100 More Declared for Secretary of War, Bureau Says.

Columbus, O., May 2.—The following statement was given out by the Taft bureau to-day: Delegates selected, 744; instructed for Taft, 359; Knox, 68; Cannon, 41; Fairbanks, 32; LaFollette, 25; Hughes, 58; uninstructed, 160, of whom 100 are declared for Taft.

Secretary Taft needs only thirty-two more delegates to insure him the Republican nomination for President on the first ballot. There remains to be selected 262 delegates, so he has a good chance to get the few he needs. There will be 980 delegates, with 491 necessary to nominate.

Of the 744 delegates already selected, 350 are instructed for Taft. Of the 160 uninstructed delegates, 100 have openly declared that they will vote for Taft. This brings Taft's score up to 459.

HUSBAND DECLARES HE WILL INSIST UPON AN AUTOPSY

MRS. ATTIE BOSTWICK HALL'S GRAVE AT SOUTH LONDONDERRY VT.

MR. SHERIFF J. WASHINGTON MELENDY OF SOUTH LONDONDERRY VT.

EDWARD R. BOSTWICK

B. F. WILLINGTON M.D. MEDICAL EXAMINER

ROYAL BOSTWICK

DEMANDED AN AUTOPSY DECLARES HUSBAND

Eugene F. Hall Says He Will Insist on Exhumation Of Body in Order to Clear Mystery.

Worcester, May 2.—Eugene Fred Hall, husband of Attie Bostwick Hall, whose relatives assert she was poisoned and have demanded an investigation, declares that he is anxious that his wife's body be exhumed and that a searching investigation of her death be made.

He said: "Twice have I asked Dr. Clark, the medical examiner, to perform an autopsy that I might know just what my wife died of, but they said that it wasn't necessary.

"Once I called on the chief of police about it, and once on Detective Roach, but they told me I needn't come again; that they would send for me if there was anything to ask me.

"I'll go to the District Attorney and demand that the State hold an autopsy and find out what my wife died of."

Eugene Fred Hall is a rugged, strong-limbed man, fully six feet in height. He was born in South Londonderry, Vt., but spent much of his time in Worcester. His family consists of three fine looking boys, Raymond, eighteen; Leon, fifteen, and Ralph, twelve. They are boarding with Mrs. Belle Worcester at Mr. Hall's old home, No. 468 Park avenue, and according to Mr. Hall he pays her $12 a week for board and lodging.

Here is Mr. Hall's story of his wife's death:

BY EUGENE FRED HALL.

I remember everything that happened that morning. I wasn't in a hurry to get to work and my wife and I talked and joked together before rising. Finally, I said I must get ready and go down to the shop. She hadn't been feeling very well. We had a case of porter in the house and during the middle of my breakfast she asked me to get her a bottle.

I got the bottle of porter and she poured out some and drank it while I finished my breakfast. We kept on chatting until I glanced at the clock.

"Attie," I said, "if I don't run I'll surely lose the car," and with that I seized my hat and hurried out.

It appeared afterward that she was taken sick as soon as I left the house and she sent the younger boy after me, but I had to run after the car and he didn't overtake me.

My wife had been subject to neuralgia. She had it in bad form. Only the day before, while we were talking, she stretched up suddenly and clasped her hands over her heart.

So it seems that she was seized with another attack. My boy told me later that she hurried over and leaned out of the window looking for me, with her hand pressed tightly against her heart. Not seeing me, as it appears, she turned and walked across the room, looking very pale and in great distress. She sank down near the stove, about ten feet away.

The first I knew of this was when I got to the shop, No. 187 Union street. There they told me word had come by telephone to hurry right back to the house. This I did. It had taken me fifteen minutes to get down to my work. Fortunately, I got the same car going back.

When I entered the room Attie was lying unconscious on the couch. I raised her head on my arm and begged her to speak to me, but she could not. In the meantime two or three physicians had been telephoned for. When the first one came he produced a glass and held it to her mouth to see if my wife breathed. Then he shook his head.

I begged him to tell me she was alive. "She can't be dead," I almost shouted at him. Others came. One used an instrument to test the heart. When he used it he told me that her heart had stopped beating. "Yes, I am satisfied that she is dead," he said, but even then I wouldn't believe it.

Sent for Mrs. Worcester.

After the funeral it became quite a problem what to do with the children. I talked with them about getting a housekeeper, and the second son, who knew Mrs. Belle Worcester, having met her at my father's house, suggested that she would be a fine woman to care for them.

I wrote to her in Vermont. She replied, and I still have the letter, that she would not consent unless all the children were satisfied. They declared they would be pleased with her, and so she came.

Mrs. Worcester is a splendid housekeeper. I had known her in Vermont and Massachusetts. She was a friend of the family. I think I had known her for nearly six years. When my wife died I sold out everything I had to Mrs. Worcester and we completed the arrangements for boarding with her. The arrangement is especially satisfactory to the children.

That is the situation as it stands. The physicians and the authorities satisfied themselves as to the cause of my wife's death. If they made a mistake I shall demand that the case be fully investigated. I shall ask the authorities to exhume the body and perform an autopsy and officially determine what was the cause of my wife's death.

DR. BROWN TELLS HOW HE FOUND MRS. HALL DEAD

Worcester, May 2.—How he was called upon to attend Mrs. Attie Bostwick Hall in her last illness, how he arrived after she was dead and why he made no more than a superficial examination of the dead woman's body is set forth in the following statement by Dr. Brown.

By Dr. Windsor A. Brown.

Although I was called to attend Mrs. Hall, I did not get to the house until after she was dead. I received a telephone call early Saturday morning, February 29 last, and immediately went to the residence of the Halls. When I got there Mrs. Hall had been dead for some minutes.

She was lying on the couch where they had placed her after she had been carried from the floor where she had fallen. I at once examined her pulse, but found none. I put a mirror before her face and made tests with my stethoscope. The woman was dead.

I had been there to attend her earlier in the month, but I could not connect this with her death in any way. I asked Mr. Hall about his wife, and he told me that she was subject to heart trouble. For this reason I at once inferred that she had died as the result of one of these spells. Mr. Hall told me that his wife had had a severe spell some time before this. I knew that Dr. Whittaker was the attending physician, so I did not make so careful an examination as I would had the patient been one of my own.

When I got back to my office I telephoned the medical examiner and stated the circumstances to him. I told him that the woman had recently had medical treatment, but that I couldn't see that it had any connection whatever with her death. He said he didn't see any reason why he should make any investigation or even to view the body.

I could not tell whether or not the woman had been poisoned. There was no reason for suspicion so far as I know, so I treated it as an ordinary case. I did not look for any symptoms of poisoning, because I had no reason for doing so. I could not say that she was not poisoned."

EXHUMATION PERMIT IS ALREADY MADE OUT

South Londonderry, Vt., May 2.—The permit for the exhumation of the body of Mrs. Attie Bostwick Hall, of Worcester, Mass., whose friends say she was poisoned, has been made out and it only awaits the official orders from the Worcester authorities to have the body taken up and an autopsy performed and the viscera examined by a chemist.

Sheriff J. Washington Melendy of South Londonderry, said to-day to a Boston Sunday American reporter:

"I know all the parties in this affair well. The inquiry into the cause of the death of Mrs. Attie Hall who is buried in this town, will be proceeded with according to the law, which in Vermont is in simplified form.

"They may exhume and examine the body after signing the application to the South Londonderry Board of Health and the Superintendent of Cemetery. In the present case the cemetery sexton, Loyn. Bostwick, is the father of the dead woman. I understand Mr. Bostwick is very much interested in determining the exact cause of his daughter's death."

Medical Examiner B. F. Millington of South Londonderry knows both the Bostwick and Hall families very well. He said:

"I was rather surprised, in view of all that was reported here, that an effort was not made earlier to determine the cause of death."

BROTHER SAYS, "I'M SURE MY SISTER WAS POISONED"

Worcester, May 2. Edward R. Bostwick of No. 70 Russell street, Worcester, brother of Mrs. Attie Maud Bostwick Hall, who has been most active in demanding that an investigation be made into the strange circumstances surrounding her death last February, believes that his sister was poisoned. Ever since she died, on Saturday, February 29, he has been quietly investigating, spurred on by his suspicions. He has been informed of all the circumstances leading up to and following the death of his sister.

Just why he believes his sister was the victim of a poison plot and what led him to prosecute a long and secret investigation before he divulged a word of what he had learned Mr. Bostwick disclosed in a detailed statement to a reporter for the Boston Sunday American.

By Edward R. Bostwick.

I am convinced that my sister was poisoned.

The doctor who was called in the day she died, but who did not get to the house until after she had passed away, gave the cause of death as heart trouble. Attie never had the least sign of heart trouble, and I do not think that she died from that cause.

It seems to me very strange that Attie should die immediately after drinking a glass of porter.

Ever since my sister's death I've wanted this thing investigated, but people with whom I have consulted told me that it would cost a small fortune and that it wouldn't bring my sister back to life anyway.

Now I have determined to have everything done that can be done to reveal just what she died of and to solve the mystery that I feel sure surrounds this whole case.

Just a short time after my sister died I went to see Dr. Brown, who had called when she was dying, but who got there when it was all over. I asked Dr. Brown if he noticed any symptoms of poisoning. He told me he didn't look for any symptoms.

He told me he was told at the house that my sister was sick from heart trouble frequently, so he thought that that was the cause of her death. When I told him of my suspicions he said he wished that he had brought a certain surgical instrument along with him when he first called.

Another thing that makes me want my sister's death investigated more than anything else is the fact that the body was not examined by the medical examiner when she died. Dr. Clark, who is acting in Dr. Baker's place while he is in Europe, took Dr. Brown's opinion, so he said that he didn't see any reason why he should investigate the death, and he didn't.

My sister, Mrs. Cora Van Dyke, insisted that my sister's death be investigated at the time. I felt just as she did, as I have said, and I would have had it done then when we got to South Londonderry, but I delayed for fear of my mother's health. Now I am determined to have the truth out.

FELL GROANING ON THE FLOOR AFTER TAKING PORTER, SAYS SON

Worcester, May 2.—Leon Hall, a fifteen year-old son and the favorite child of Mrs. Hall, tells this story of his mother's death.

"I got up Saturday morning a little after 7, just before my father went to work. I was sitting on the edge of my bed and was nearly all dressed. I was all done but one shoe, and I was tying that when I heard my mother say to my father, 'You haven't given me my porter yet.' Father went and got it and gave it to her. Just before that she asked papa not to go to work until 8 o'clock. Papa said that he must get to work.

"Then papa started for work, and was on his way down stairs when I heard mamma get up. She came towards the window next to my room. She was holding her hand to her side and said she had an awful pain there. Then she told me to run and get my father. Just then she said, 'Gene, I want you,' and fell on the floor groaning.

"I ran down stairs after my father, but when I got to the street he was running up the street and didn't hear me. Then he got on a car at Charlotte street. I came back to the house and then went down and telephoned for the doctors. My brother telephoned to the place where my father works, and he got back just as my mother was taking her last breath.

"Once before my mother had a bad spell like that. It turned her hands purple and her fingers got black around the finger nails. She took too much of one kind of medicine, so papa said, and it nearly killed her. Dr. Whittaker came to the house and she got better.

"Mamma always took ale or porter in the morning. She had heart trouble, and papa always used to fix it for her before he went to work."

Dr. Baraduc Declares Corpse Is Surrounded by Globe of Visible Ether for Eighty Hours.

Paris, May 2.—Dr. Baraduc, a French scientist, famed through his investigations of occult things, declares that he possesses a photograph, taken by himself, of the departing soul of his wife at the time of her death. His claim has startled the world of science.

Alleging that he is neither a Spiritualist or a doctrinaire, Dr. Baraduc says man is surrounded by an atmosphere of personal ether. This ether survives when one dies, he says, sometimes as long afterward as eighty hours and occasionally longer than that. Then it becomes visible as a phantom.

Dr. Baraduc claims when his wife died he photographed a nebulous [illegible] which escaped from her like a soul. Man does not belong to this planet only, the doctor adds, but to the starry spaces in which his thoughts revolve.

WOMAN FRIEND TELLS HOW MRS. HALL DIED

Mrs. L. H. Sampson, Long a Neighbor, Describes Agony of Woman's Last Hours.

Worcester, May 2.—Mrs. L. H. Sampson of No. 458 Park avenue, with whom the Halls lived prior to their removing to No. 468 Park avenue, for years a confidant of Mrs. Attie Maud Bostwick Hall, and who was with Mrs. Hall when she died so mysteriously last February, to-day describes that tragedy for readers of the Boston Sunday American. Her statement follows.

By Mrs. L. H. Sampson.

Mrs. Attie Hall was infatuated with her husband. She loved him devotedly. She was really childish about her love for him.

From the time that Mrs. Hall first lived in our house she was a frequent visitor in our flat.

Although the doctor who came to attend her the morning she died said that her death was caused by heart trouble, I had never heard her complain of having had any trouble with her heart in all the years I had known her. I am sure that she would have told me if she had had any trouble with her heart, for she always came to me when she was sick. She was not [illegible] that I knew of, but just had ordinary good health.

Groaned as in Great Pain.

The morning before she died she was in the best of spirits. That day I know she did a big washing alone, and she seemed to me to be happy. The first I knew of her being sick was when her little boy, Leon, came to call me early in the morning.

That was between 7.30 and 7.40. I remember the time, because my husband had just gone to work. When Leon told me that his mother was sick I hurried [illegible] to the house.

[illegible] Mrs. Hall [illegible] face downward on the floor, [illegible] the dining room stove and the mantel. One of the boys and I tried to put a pillow under her head and her head was partly resting on this.

I tried to turn her over on her back, but she was too heavy and I succeeded in getting her [illegible] on her side. Then I ran down stairs and telephoned for Dr. Whittaker. Dr. Whittaker told me that he wasn't up yet and that I would better call another physician. I ran back upstairs and tried [illegible] turn Mrs. Hall over upon her side.

All of this time Mrs. Hall was groaning as though she were in the greatest of pain, her tongue was out, licking the air, and she seemed to me to be trying to get water. She seemed to be going through contortions, but her hands were under her body so she couldn't move them much. I managed to turn her over a little more than I had at first, and then ran down stairs again and once more telephoned for Dr. Whittaker.

Limbs Became Rigid.

I told Dr. Whittaker that Mrs. Hall was dying, and he told me I had better get another doctor, as he couldn't get there in time to do any good. Then I asked what I should do for her, and he said to put her on the couch and to give her a drink and to sprinkle water on her face and hands.

I got two small glasses of water and tried to get her to drink. She [illegible] lick up the water, but her tongue seemed to be doubled up in her mouth. She was in the greatest agony all of this time and was groaning continually.

[illegible] Raymond, the oldest son, and I lifted her to the couch. As I took hold of her to lift her I noticed that her lower [illegible] quite rigid, but she was [illegible]. We got her on the couch, where she died in a very short time. At just [illegible] very moment of her death her hands and her whole body became rigid.

Just before she died, her husband, Mr. Hall, [illegible] to the house. He came to the couch, opened her eyes with his fingers and [illegible] "Attie, I'm here. Don't you know me?"

The woman was dead even then, but he went down stairs and telephoned for more doctors.

In the meantime two doctors whom the boys had telephoned for came. One was Dr. Brown and the other one I didn't know. Dr. Brown went up to Mrs. Hall, tried her pulse, held a mirror in front of her face and then put an instrument in her ears.

Knew of No Heart Trouble.

Then Mr. Hall told the doctor that his wife was subject to heart troubles, and the doctors left. After this Hall came to me and asked if I would stay a while, as he was going out, and I did so until his sister-in-law, Mrs. Bostwick, came. Then I left the house.

About 1 o'clock that afternoon the body was sent to the undertaker's rooms.

As I said, I never knew that Mrs. Hall had heart trouble. Mrs. Hall's death came as a great surprise to me. I never thought that she was the least bit [illegible] and the statement that she had been suffering from heart trouble seems very strange to me.

Bella Stewart Kelly of Portland, Me., asked the Sunday American to print the following personal appeal to the missing Jessie Stewart, whose disappearance was noted recently:

Heeds Father's Dying Words.

Dear Jessie, If this letter in the Boston Sunday American should catch your eye, please write to me. The members of the family have all passed away but three. Your mother, father and sister are dead and your brother Sandy was killed in a wreck. Your father's dying words were: "Try to find Jessie and bring her back home."

"But the old home has broken up years ago. I have a home and the doors are open to you any time if you will only come back. If you went on the stage and changed your name, or if a [illegible] won't let you come back, write to me and I will go to the end of the earth [illegible] you and help you if I can.

Had I known about the Boston Sunday American Tracer Bureau I should have tried it before and believe I would have found you long ago.

"I think often of the good times we had together [illegible] ago. I can't help thinking of you and all that has happened since you went away. I am in Portland and wish you would write or come back. Your loving sister, Bella Stewart Kelly."

My father died in South Boston on March [illegible], 1861, leaving my mother, two sisters, one brother and myself.

"I was placed in an orphan asylum at No. 44 Kneeland street, Boston, in the Spring of 1861. I was taken from there to Island Pond, Vt., in July of the same year. Since then I have heard nothing from any of my family and I am very anxious to locate them."

John Kelly of No. 76 Neptune avenue, West Lynn, Mass., is trying to locate Alfred Arthur McCurdy, John McCurdy, Prudence McCurdy, Lillian and Fanny McCurdy, and Minnie, now Mrs. James Davis. The latter, in 1888, lived in Boston. The others were last heard from in Salem or Beverley, in 1884.

SMASHES ALL JAIL SPEED RECORDS

Pittsburg, May [illegible].—All speed records were broken at the Allegheny County Jail last night, and to Frank Miller belongs the honor of establishing a new record. At 8 o'clock he was committed to jail on a charge of assault and battery preferred by Harry Abel, a negro. Twenty-five minutes later he was taken to Alderman Frankel's office in Wylie avenue by Constable Wychinsky to sign a bail bond. At the Alderman's office Miller and Wy[illegible] engaged in an argument during which Miller is said to have knocked the constable down. At 8:45 o'clock Miller was back in jail with another charge of assault and battery against him. He now holds the championship for rapid-fire commitments.

EXPECT HISGEN TO HEAD INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE'S DELEGATION TO CONVENTION

State Gathering to Be Held in Faneuil Hall Next Saturday Afternoon.

John Temple Graves to Speak at Gathering and at Banquet in Evening.

Faneuil Hall will be the scene of the Independence League State Convention next Saturday afternoon, and in the evening many of the delegates and other Leaguers will banquet at the Quincy House.

John Temple Graves of Georgia, the famous editor and orator of the South, has accepted an invitation to address the convention and speak at the banquet.

Final plans for the banquet will be made this afternoon and evening by the committee on arrangements, which will be in session at the headquarters, Room No. 348 Old South Building, from 4 to 9 o'clock. The Boston City Committee is planning the banquet, and members and enrolled Leaguers are invited to attend the session of the committee to-day and give their views on the tentative programme and obtain tickets.

Arrangements for the State convention are in the hands of the Executive Committee and have practically been completed. The chairman of the committee will announce the recommended list of convention committee members in a few days. It has been suggested that Richard A. Hennessey of Springfield act as the permanent chairman.

It is conceded that Thomas L. Hisgen will lead the delegation of the Massachusetts League to the Chicago convention. The four at large and the 28 from the fourteen districts will all be selected at the State convention. There are many candidates for the honor of attending the first national meeting of the new party. Particular interest is being manifested in the boom that has been gaining size for Hisgen as the candidate for president and the Massachusetts Leaguers are only waiting for the word from him to extend the boom to the limit.

John Temple Graves, eloquent Southern orator, will address State Convention of Massachusetts Independence League.

In an interview with a reporter for the Boston Sunday American, Mr. Hisgen said:

"I don't know just what to think about all this booming that I am receiving for the nomination for President. Of course, I would much rather run again for Governor on the Independence League ticket. I think Mr. Hearst is the man who should lead the party in the national campaign.

"Sometimes I feel this must be a dream, when I think that only three years ago I was unknown as a political factor and unthought of as a candidate for any office. I had no aspiration then to even be a fence viewer, and if anybody had ever told me that I would be nominated for State auditor I would have run away, in fear that that person was not quite right in the head. But two years ago I was the Independence League candidate for State auditor.

"If anyone had told me three years ago that I would ever be a candidate for Governor, I would have warned that person's friends to watch and restrain him. But I have had the great honor and distinction of being the League candidate for that office. I did not do so very badly either.

"I should certainly be overwhelmed if I should become the League candidate for President, but I would not shirk the call if it should come to me. I want it distinctly borne in mind, however, that my choice for the nomination for President is Mr. Hearst, and I hope he can see his way clear to take it."

The State convention will undoubtedly demand a speech from Mr. Hisgen, and the delegates will want to know from him just how he feels about the Presidential nomination. He has agreed to respond to a toast at the banquet. He has several invitations to speak the coming week, but has decided to decline them all in order to give his entire time to his business and be free to attend the convention and banquet next Saturday.

Among the other prominent Leaguers who have been invited to speak at the Quincy House gathering are Charles E. Gehring, chairman of the New York county committee of the Independence League; Judge Alexander S. Bacon of New York and James H. O'Neill, chairman of the Rhode Island State committee of the League. John J. Walsh, Boston lawyer and orator, has accepted an invitation to respond to the toast, "The non-partisan in politics."

Tickets for the banquet may be purchased at the headquarters, 348 Old South building, and from William C. Johnson, at the City Hall drug store on School street.

PE-RU-NA AS A TONIC AND BLOOD PURIFIER.

Mrs. Paul Casavant Writes From 219 Monroe Street, Topeka, Kansas, Concerning Peruna. Read Her Letter Below:

In Spring and Early Summer a Tonic is Needed.

Mrs. Emily Kellogg, 5649 S. Lawrence St., South Tacoma, Wash., Gives Her Experience With Peruna. Read Her Letter Below:

The source of good blood is fresh air and well-digested food. If anything interferes with digestion the blood becomes impure.

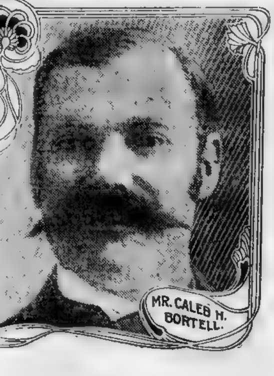
A catarrhal condition of the stomach prevents perfect digestion. Such a condition allows the food to ferment and decompose in various ways, instead of digesting. The blood is thus contaminated with various materials that do not belong in the blood.

This gives rise to spring fever, eruptions on the skin, general lassitude and constipation.

Peruna corrects all these difficulties by striking at the source of them. By eradicating the catarrhal condition of the stomach Peruna at once cures digestion, the blood is thereby purified, and the whole machinery of the body is put in working order.

Peruna has probably made a more remarkable record in cases of catarrh of the stomach than any other medicine. These cases are very frequent, and we have a host of testimonials in which Peruna has received lavish praise for prompt and permanent relief in cases of catarrh of the stomach.

MRS PAUL CASAVANT.



MR. CALEB H. BORTELL.

MR. WILLIAM HOGE.

MRS. EMILY KELLOGG

Mrs. Paul Casavant, 219 Monroe street, Topeka, Kansas, writes:

"I have found Peruna very effective in restoring my health and strength after I had been worn out and run down for a long time.

"I began to use it about six months ago when I was unable to leave my bed.

"My nervous system was shattered and I was daily losing flesh and strength.

"This condition was completely altered after a few bottles of Peruna had been used, and I kept on using it until I was finally restored to perfect health and had gained about fifteen pounds.

"I feel so grateful for what your medicine has done for me that I am pleased to give it my hearty endorsement, and shall always be glad to speak a good word for it."

Mrs. Emily Kellogg, 5649 S. Lawrence St., S. Tacoma, Wash., member of the Ladies of the Maccabees, writes:

"Three months ago I had an attack of biliousness which threatened to undermine my health and strength.

"Luckily for me, I tried Peruna at the suggestion of my friends before it was too late.

"I found in a few days' time that I did not have the usual sick headache, neither did food nauseate me any longer.

"In two weeks' time Peruna had completely rid my system of the poison and bile, and I was in a much better condition. My skin assumed its normal color, I had a splendid appetite and I was in every way improved in health.

"I used Peruna for a month longer and it wrought a wondrous change in my entire system."

Tones up the System.

Mrs. William McRoberts, Waverly, Minn., writes:

"I am perfectly well of the catarrh. I took Peruna and Manalin. I recommend your medicine to every one and cannot praise it enough. It is a fine medicine to take any season of the year. Taken in the spring it tones up the system and acts as a gentle stimulant."

A Good Tonic.

Mr. Joe Leonard, Flat 3, 232 Allen St., Buffalo, N. Y., writes:

"I have good reason to endorse Peruna, as I have found it a good tonic, stimulating the system and sustaining it under great pressure, imparting unusual endurance and enabling me to work much longer and harder than the system could possibly do were it not for the great powers with which it endowed me. It gives one nerves of iron."

Mr. Caleb H. Bortell, Police Officer, 212 North Paca street, Baltimore, Md., writes:

"For several years I was troubled with catarrh of the head, throat and stomach. Many times I would vomit before and after eating.

"I took seven bottles of your Peruna, and I am glad to say that it has cured me.

"I feel more like living and working, and am not bothered at all with my old troubles.

"I take great pleasure in recommending Peruna to all sufferers with catarrh, and I thank you for what you have done for me, for none but those who have suffered as I have can appreciate a great cure as I have found Peruna to be."

Mr. William Hoge, President Commercial Travelers' Association, 280 Broadway, New York, N. Y., writes:

"I endorse Peruna as the most effectual remedy for catarrh I have been able to find in my travels in this country or Europe. I can truly say that I have spent thousands of dollars in this country alone trying to find a cure, and it was not until I was induced to give Peruna a trial that I obtained anything like permanent relief. As a tonic it is simply great. It ought to be in the grip of every commercial traveler on the road. It cured my wife as well as myself. We have not had the slightest symptom of catarrh for a long time."

In a later letter Mr. Hoge says:—"I have used Peruna for many years, never without a bottle in my grip. I am the youngest feeling and youngest looking man of my age in New York, which I think is entirely due to Peruna."

Splendid for La Grippe.

Mr. Frank H. Felder, 213 Pleasant Ave., Montgomery, Ala., formerly principal of Haynesville High School, writes:

Pain in Chest.

Mrs. A. W. Gustin, 5209 Lake Ave., St. Joseph, Mo., writes: "When I began taking Peruna I had quite a severe pain and ache in the left of my chest. I suffered a great deal with it.

"I wrote to Dr. Hartman and asked him what I should do. He advised my taking Peruna, which I did. I took three bottles, and I can say I am cured.

"Thanks for kind advice and Peruna."

Hay Fever and Catarrh.

Miss Mayme E. Smith, 444 East Mound St., Columbus, Ohio, writes:

"Have used Peruna for catarrh and hay fever. The results being remarkable, I can highly recommend it to all who are suffering with the above diseases. I am happy to be able to say it has helped me wonderfully."

Eyes Red and Watery.

Mr. William S. Hearn, 1063 Segal St., Camden, N. J., writes:

"For about two years I was troubled with my eyes being red and watery, and my general health was very poor.

"Finally, a friend advised me to try Peruna. I had tried almost everything else, so I purchased a bottle of Peruna and commenced to take it at once, and before I had finished the first bottle I found I was improving.

"I wrote you for special advice concerning my eyes, which I received. I continued to take the Peruna until I had used six bottles.

"Now my eyes are absolutely well, and I feel like a new man in every way.

Peruna Tablets.

Some people prefer to take tablets, rather than to take medicine in a fluid form. Such people can obtain Peruna tablets, which represent the medicinal ingredients of Peruna. Each tablet is equivalent to one average dose of Peruna.

KOHOLIA

Better than Alcohol for Burning Purposes

KOHOLIA is a refined methylic spirit, sweet smelling, as clear as crystal, always pure, and can be depended on to give satisfactory service at all times.

Koholia More Economical than Grain Alcohol

Because it is cheaper in price and because it will go further. That it will go further can be easily demonstrated by taking equal quantities of Koholia and grain alcohol and burning them separately in open vessels. It will be found that grain alcohol emits a yellow, smoky flame, whereas Koholia burns with a clear blue flame, which shows Koholia has a much greater intensity of heat.

THE 'SECRET POLICE' OF PARIS A SYSTEM OF SPY ON SPY.

LITTLE SINS ARE DETECTED

By Vance Thompson.

Special Correspondent of the Boston Sunday American.

PARIS, May 2.—The "secret police," as it is called, of Paris is one of those things few people know anything about. The average person gets his notion of the "secret police" from detective novels; and queer theories float abroad.

Here are the facts.

Take in the first place the famous Third Brigade. Its business is to supervise the police.

It is under the direct command of the chief of the municipal police, and numbers eighty-three men and officers. One and all they are picked men. About half of them are assigned to watch the regular patrolmen; by day and by night they slip about the streets, noting all infractions of the rules of the service.

He is a bold policeman who runs the risk of visiting a wine shop for a sly glass or commits any of the other little sins dear to the patrolman's heart. There is hardly a chance that he will not be detected in time; reprimand follows and after that fine and lastly dismissal. The discipline is extremely severe.

Investigates Patrolmen.

The other half of the Third Brigade is engaged in work of a subtler kind. In the first place it investigates all complaints made against the patrolmen. These investigations are rigorous and quite impartial; the agent who is taken in fault must go. And in the second place it maintains a regular system of espionage upon the private lives of all policemen of every rank.

In its turn the Third Brigade is watched by a smaller body of detectives, who report directly to Monsieur Lepine, the Prefect of Police. So in one way or another there is a spy upon every man in the force—even a spy upon the [illegible]. The choice agents who watch [illegible] safety of the [illegible] of the [illegible] are tracked [illegible] their comings [illegible] by a counter police.

"The plain clothes men" are [illegible] the famous Brigade of the S[illegible]. Its present chief is Monsieur Hamard, who has under him two assistants, five chief inspectors, thirty brigadiers, and three hundred detectives, commonly known as inspectors. This force is divided into eight sections. One is occupied in office work; another serves warrants from the various courts, a third section watches the governmental pawn shops, a fourth attends to the sad girls of Paris, another section is sent out into the streets and hunts day and night for pickpockets, thieves and casual rogues; and so in one way and another the system is spread like a fine-spun net over the city.

Elite of Secret Police.

A special section [illegible] composed of about [illegible] of the most intelligent detectives is under the direct command of M. Hamard. They form the elite of the secret police. Chosen men, one and all; there has never been a time when there was not at least one man of genius among them, like Rossignol of yesterday or Bisenop of to-day.

There is a popular legend in Paris that they are chosen among the repentant criminals upon the old principle of "set a thief to catch a thief." Vidocq, indeed, was an ex-convict and chose his aids among his former comrades, but that bad practice was changed long ago.

Besides these [illegible] its command a swarm of stool pigeons or "indicators," as they are called in French slang. These permanent auxiliaries of the secret police are taken from all classes. Most of them are loafers, street peddlers, many of them are thieves, [illegible] some hold [illegible]. They are provided with yellow cards, countersigned by the chief, which protect them from arrest by the uniformed police.

Found in All Classes.

It is impossible to estimate the number of them. Every detective has his own spies. And they are found in all classes of society. You may meet one of them in your club; you may take in to dinner a pretty woman who draws pay from the State [illegible] with whom you talk in the café [illegible] who gives you [illegible] for [illegible] tection.

BALFOUR WRESTS ASQUITH'S POWER

London, May 2.—England is apparently on [illegible] Premier Asquith's [illegible] power [illegible] Premier Asquith [illegible] They are known [illegible] as political [illegible] government [illegible] now [illegible] generally [illegible].

For a liberal, Asquith [illegible] Churchill [illegible] are in [illegible] cals hold [illegible] of power [illegible] between [illegible] real [illegible].

The [illegible] Henry Campbell-Bannerman [illegible] two wings of [illegible] he feared [illegible] between the two factions became greater. On his resignation last month—shortly followed by his death—few politicians believed it would be possible to [illegible] many months. Hostilities threaten now even sooner than they were expected.

Premier Asquith gave both wings fair play in making up his cabinet. Churchill got the presidency of the board of trade. To take it he had to appeal to his district to re-elect him to [illegible].

Asquith [illegible] the Church [illegible] Churchill lost. Of course [illegible] Parliament. Dundee [illegible] most surely will [illegible] provide for him, for [illegible] of Parliament need not live in the district they represent, as in America.

JAPS ASK ENGLISH TO CURB CHINESE

Shanghai, May 2.—Japan has finally asked England to help her persuade or compel China to call off the anti-Japanese boycott.

Though it is said the request has been made through regular diplomatic channels, no formal announcement has been given out. The Japanese foreign office hopes the Mikado will not have to openly figure in the matter. British commercial interests are quietly doing their best to influence their government against interference.

6,000 SHIPBUILDERS ARE LOCKED OUT

Glasgow, May 2.—The Clyde shipbuilders to-day locked out 6,000 woodworkers from their yards. The pressure is an outcome of the dispute between the Shipbuilding Employers' Federation and the Shipworkers of the Northwest coast, who struck rather than accept a reduction in wages and who have not been able to get the federation to arbitrate their demands.

There seems every prospect of a complete stoppage of the shipbuilding industry, a condition that will affect directly not less than 250,000 men.

EUROPE'S RICHEST PRINCE FOR LOUISE

Scion of Schaumburg-Lippe Said to Have Been Selected for German Princess

Berlin, May 2.—Though the Kaiser recently declared that his only daughter, Princess Louise, was [illegible] a girl in short dresses with no intention to marry or to be married off [illegible] heard that a match is about to [illegible] between Prince Adolph, heir [illegible] Schaumburg-Lippe, and the [illegible] of Prussia.

LILLAH MACARTHY FORGOT HER SPEECH

London, May 2.—Mrs. Lillah Macarthy (Mrs. Granville Barker), the famous actress and wife of the manager, who was at one time considered as the possible head of New York's New Theatre, is feeling very miserable just now because she made a hash of a speech at a dinner given by the Literary Club.

The actress has a wonderful memory and a very fine delivery, and she took the chair at the dinner on a Ladies' Night. One of the members of the club wrote out a particularly brilliant speech for her, and she committed it to memory. Her sister was arriving at Waterloo Station that night from New York, and possibly the anxiety told upon her, for scarcely had she begun her speech to an accompaniment of tremendous applause than she suddenly ceased and could not utter another word.

FORESTS OF IRELAND ARE TO BE GROWN AGAIN

Dublin, May 2.—The re-forestation of Ireland on a vast scale is the latest official report. A commission was recently appointed which has recommended that the area of Ireland under forest should be raised from 100,000 acres, the present figures, to 1,000,000 acres.

The commission declares that all Irish wood-making industries will be extinguished within fifteen years if re-forestation is not begun. In proportion to area, Ireland has the least forest of any European country, and the lack of shelter is one of the great curses of Irish agriculture.

RUSSIAN COURT GAY WITH BRIDAL FETES

Prince Wilhelm of Sweden Marries Grand Duchess Marie Pavlovna.

St. Petersburg, May 3.—Prince Wilhelm of Sweden will marry the Grand Duchess Marie Pavlovna, daughter of Grand Duke Paul Alexandrovitch and cousin to the Czar at three this afternoon.

The ceremony will take place at Tsarskoe-Selo. The Czar, King Gustav of Sweden, the bridegroom's father, and Prince Carl and Princess Ingeborg, his brother and sister, will be present. So will most of the Russian royal family and all the greatest of the nobility outside the charmed circle of royalty.

First there will be the Greek church ritual and then a Lutheran ceremony, that proper deference may be shown to the dominant religions of both Russia and Sweden.

Outwardly it will be a most magnificent affair, but really not a very happy one. Tsarskoe-Selo is cordoned by an immense army to protect the couple and the guests from the terrorists. Besides the Prince is admittedly in love with a beautiful Swedish actress, so that few Swedes think he will be a very devoted family man.

St. Petersburg is magnificently decorated for the occasion, but it is by order of the Prefect of Police. The common people are not particularly enthusiastic. There is a general feeling of resentment at the expenditure of a vast sum for a royal wedding at a time when the country is financially seriously embarrassed.

The merrymaking at Tsarskoe-Selo will continue until May 8, when Prince Wilhelm and his bride will start for Sweden, their future home.

WORCESTER'S SWEDISH FOLK SEND GOOD WISHES TO LOVED YOUNG PRINCE

Worcester, May 2.—A cablegram to Prince Wilhelm of Sweden was dispatched to-day by the Swedish-American people of Worcester, congratulating him upon the occasion of his marriage at St. Petersburg to-morrow to Princess Marie Pavlovna of Russia.

The message was authorized at the first annual festival of the new Swedish-American Federation and was drafted by President J. C. Emanuel Trotz as follows:

"Prince Wilhelm of Sweden, at St. Petersburg, Russia.

"The Swedish speaking people of Worcester remember your visit here and respectfully send Prince Wilhelm and bride loving greetings and wishes for lasting happiness."

REVOLUTIONARY OUTBREAK IN PERU

Rio Janeiro, May 2.—News has been received by telegraph from the west coast of a revolutionary outbreak in Peru. The movement is said to have started at the town of Chosica, near Lima. The revolutionists, under the command of Augusto Duran, cut the wires that carry the current for the electric lighting of Lima, and they also took possession of a railroad train. Government troops were at once sent out against them.

TWO QUEENS FIGHT D'ABRUZZI MATCH

Dowager Vigorously Opposes Union of the Duke and Miss Elkins.

Rome, May 2.—Members of the Court entourage say that the two Queens continue their opposition against the marriage of the Duke of Abruzzi to Miss Katherine Elkins.

The Dowager Queen, Marguerite, is very Olympian in her ideas, being descended from a long line of Kings, and owing to her age and surroundings is very settled in her views. In her opposition to the marriage she is upheld by her brother, the Duke of Genoa, and though the Duke of Abruzzi's brothers, the Duke of Aosta and the Count of Turin, have tried to persuade her to favor the love match she persists that no genuine happiness can be attained by what she calls a "mesalliance."

It is not impossible, also, that Her Majesty may be moved by financial considerations. The Italian royal family is not rich and though the Duke of Abruzzi has a considerable income it is hardly enough to keep up a princely establishment.

It was the Queen's wish that Abruzzi should marry some rich Catholic Princess. The Austrian Imperial family, which of late has not intermarried with the Royal Savoys, has many archduchesses of marriageable age offering to a prospective husband marriage portions of from two to ten millions.

BABY'S EYESIGHT WAS THREATENED

By Terrible Eczema—Head Became a Mass of Itching Rash and Sores—Would Scratch Till Blood Came—Much Money Wasted in Fruitless Treatments—Disease Was Soon

CURED AT SLIGHT COST BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"Our little girl was two months old when she got a rash on her face and within five days her face and head were all one sore. We used different remedies but it got worse instead of better and we thought she would turn blind and that her ears would fall off. She suffered terribly, and would scratch until the blood came. At night we had to pin her hands down. This went on until she was five months old, then I had her under our family doctor's care, but she continued to grow worse. He said it was eczema. When she was seven months old I started to use Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent, and in three weeks—what a change! I kept using the Cuticura Remedies for two months and our baby was a different girl. You could not see a sign of a sore and she was as fair as a new-born baby, and all for the small cost of a dollar and seventy-five cents where we had spent ten times the money for doctoring. She is now two years old and has not had a sign of the eczema since. Mrs. H. F. Budke, R. F. D. 4, LeSueur, Minn., Apr. 15 and May 2, 1907."

SLEEP KILLED

By an Itching Humor. Another Cure by Cuticura Remedies.

"I broke out with a humor which spread almost all over my body. The itching would get worse on retiring, so I could not sleep. I tried several remedies but it grew worse until I got some Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Pills which began to relieve me at once. By the time I had used one vial of the Pills, the humor was entirely gone. I wish every sufferer could secure the Cuticura Remedies. Travis Bates, Hamburg, Ark., April 26, 1907."

Complete External and Internal Treatment for Every Humor of Infants, Children, and Adults consists of Cuticura Soap (25c.) to Cleanse the Skin, Cuticura Ointment (50c.) to Heal the Skin, and Cuticura Resolvent (50c.), (or in the form of Chocolate Coated Pills, 25c. per vial of 60) to Purify the Blood. Sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston, Mass. Mailed Free, Cuticura Book on Skin Diseases.

WATER UNDER HUB "MADE LAND" MENACE TO 75,000

Health of South End and Back Bay Residents in Dire Peril, Says I. H. Frothingham.

That 75,000 people in the South End and Back Bay, who reside on "Made Land," are living under highly unsanitary conditions, and that their health is dangerously and constantly menaced, all because of the tide forcing water into their cellars and backing sewage into their houses, is the assertion of Isaac H. Frothingham, who is leading a movement to improve conditions.

Mr. Frothingham is one of Boston's aged and prominent citizens. He is a member of the famous Frothingham family. He resides at No. 43 [illegible] street, Dorchester.

Governor Guild's assistance has been secured by Mr. Frothingham in his fight, the chief executive having given his personal attention to the matter. It has also been brought before the Metropolitan Improvements Commission, Mayor Hibbard and the Boston Board of Health.

2,000 Acres "Made Land."

Over 2,000 thickly-settled acres in the heart of Boston, all of which is land that has been "filled in" within the past seventy-five years, is included in the district affected. It reaches from the South Bay through the South End and Back Bay to the Charles River and from Dwight street to West Concord street.

"It is scandalous that the tremendous population of that district should be forced to live under such conditions," said Mr. Frothingham. "Why, the valuation has sunk $30,000,000 in the past fifteen years because of conditions.

"This question is a momentous one. It involves the health of over 75,000 Bostonians. It affects that thickly settled portion of the South End known as the 'lodging house' district and includes the lower part of Back Bay.

"The mortality rate of that 'made land' district is increased by the conditions. Many of the houses are practically uninhabitable. The cellars often contain from two to four feet of water, the foundations are rotted and the houses are dampened.

"All of Boston south from Dwight street to West Concord street and from the South Bay over to the Charles River is 'made land.' It was all water a century ago. Ships plied back and forth there. It is now filled in with gravel and built upon. It is one of the most thickly settled portions of the city.

Tides Rise in Cellars.

"Except among the people who live in that big district it is not realized by Bostonians that the tide still rises and falls under that 'made land.' Still it does, and the water goes up and down in cellars with the tides. A good stiff northeast wind or a freshet often drives from two to four feet of water in cellars.

"Conditions in the Spring and Fall, when the winds and tides are highest, are the worst. I lived at No. 36 Milford street for years and saw the tide regularly rise and [illegible] in the cellars. Naturally that condition makes every house affected unhealthy and unfit to live in.

"The trouble is that the land is too low. It was not filled in high enough. Why, on Dover street, where my father once lived, the land had to be raised twice about sixty years ago. Houses were jacked up and gravel brought from Needham was used. The Shawmut Avenue district was taken by Boston and filled in once because of the tides arising in cellars.

"The city of Chicago, which is mainly built on 'made land,' has had to fill in the land twice since, it was claimed, to stop just the conditions under which thousands of Bostonians are now living.

Valuation off $30,000,000.

"The houses in the affected district rent for from $300 to $2,000, excluding the lower part of Beacon street, south of the Charles river, which is a very aristocratic section and consequently worth more. Now the city has lost a vast amount of money by ignoring the conditions existing. The valuation of the district has decreased $30,000,000 in fifteen years.

"Another bad feature is that the rise of the tide in this 'made land' forces the sewage back into the houses. Is it any wonder that the mortality rate is affected by such conditions?

"The whole district was filled in with gravel, refuse and sewage. The tide flowing into that stuff cannot provoke a healthy odor. I personally know that examination will disclose frightful conditions. I have been familiar with it for thirty years, all of which time I have been fighting to have improvements.

"I can remember when the city of Boston was a peninsula, with Washington street the only passage to the mainland. Then a northeast gale would wash the sea water over Washington street. I remember when I could stand on Washington street and throw a stone into the Back Bay, and I have seen vessels of 200 tons burden come up to a bulkhead on Middlesex street.

Causes Epidemics.

"The Boston Board of Health has been aware of the condition existing. I notified it years ago, but it has ignored the matter. It is responsible, and still it allows thousands to dwell under such unhealthy conditions. It also knows that sea water shuts up the opening of the metropolitan sewer.

"I have known of human beings living and sleeping over two feet of water. People have protested continually for years to the city authorities without avail. I know of a house near the corner of West Concord and Tremont street that had four feet of water in its cellar just before last Thanksgiving.

"The dampness caused is responsible for thousands of cases of diphtheria, pneumonia, fevers, rheumatism and other ills. It has rusted metal in the house and made clothing mouldy. It has undoubtedly hastened the death of thousands.

"The remedy is to raise the houses and fill the land in higher. That would cost an immense amount of money, but the health of thousands would be benefited and the city would profit by the increased valuations which would be derived.

"Governor Guild is deeply interested in this matter. I have also informed the Metropolitan Improvements Commission and Mayor Hibbard of the fact. Something should be done right away. It will have to be done sometime."

CREW STICKS TO WRECKED SHIP

Refuse to Leave Stranded Peter Rickmers Though in Dire Peril.

Sandy Hook, N. J., May 2.—More than half a hundred men are in grave peril of their lives to-night, behind battened down hatches awaiting daylight, while the big ship, the Peter Rickmers, which they are on, strains and groans as she sinks deeper and deeper into the sands from which she is unlikely ever to get off, while a raging southeaster smashes mountainous waves across her.

Off shore, less than two miles away, but powerless to give aid under present weather conditions, are the lights of two big wrecking tugs, which have spent two days in an endeavor to budge the stranded ship.

Tried to Save Ship.

They are keeping headway as close to the ship as possible, and if her condition should become too desperate will try to get the crew off by means of the life gun and lifelines.

The doomed four-master will hardly make Bremen again. When she was driven ashore in Thursday night's gale it was believed she was resting easily and would be saved. Last night the big tugs Rescue and Chaplain got alongside and stretched their lines. But with all the strength of their powerful engines utilized, they could not move the German freighter.

So to-day they tried lightering her cargo of case oil. Much of it was thrown overboard and another try was made. But the craft had hit too hard and could not be moved.

As nightfall approached the wind arose, bringing with it out of the southeast a cold rain. The tugs cast off and put out into deep water. It was suicidal to remain.

Crew Sticks to Boat.

Before going, however, the tug men asked Captain Bachman and his men to come aboard.

The giant be-whiskered mariner cursed them in gruff but decidedly emphatic language. Abandon his ship? [illegible] There is nothing like that in German marine tradition. But the men? Ach! That was different. Sure they could go—if they wanted to. But none did, and from the cabin boy to the biggest bully of the lot they are all aboard.

Before the [illegible] set in those on the tugs could see the Rickmers' men making ready for the storm. All of the sails that had been hoisted in the hope of aiding in getting her afloat were furled and everything made snug.

There is great anxiety here as to the outcome. The weather is bad and growing worse hourly. The stranded ship lies in a bad position. Wave after wave is breaking over her, and she is so deep in the sands that her structure must be straining badly.

Life Savers Ready.

Whether she will survive the night is problematic and the life savers here are standing by ready, if the worst comes, to try to get the crew off with the big power lifeboat, although it will be necessary to take volunteers aboard to make up a crew.

The crews were reduced as per custom on April 30, and the station is several men short. But there will be men enough to man the boat should it be needed.

The experts here declare that there is no chance now of having the Rickmers. To-night's storm is expected to not only start her seams, but also to drive her so far into the sand no power can budge her again.

BRIDE OF ROMANTIC WEDDING TO WEALTHY CHARLESTOWN SUITOR

MRS. JOSEPH O'RIORDAN

MAYFAIR CLUB ENTERTAINS FRIENDS

The Mayfair Club, consisting of a number of "Hello" girls from the Richmond Exchange, will entertain their friends next Thursday night at a dance to be held in Winthrop Hall, Upham's Corner. Miss Anna M. Currier, president, will be floor director, assisted by Miss Bessie A. Saunders, vice president.

YOUNG COUPLE SEEK MOTHER'S BLESSING

Joseph O'Riordan and Bride Surprise Host of Friends by News of Wedding.

"Joe loves me, I love Joe. So we're perfectly happy. We always intended to have a quiet wedding and we had it. That's all there is to it. But, listen—I think Mrs. O'Riordon is won over to the match! There's news for you. And with just a little perseverance, Joe thinks everything will be all right."

Happy as a turtle dove, Mary McAuliffe O'Riordan, bride of Joseph O'Riordan, son of the wealthy Charlestown contractor, whose romantic Easter marriage startled all the good parishioners of St. Mary's parish, Charlestown, yesterday told a Boston Sunday American all about the affair.

They are living temporarily at the historic Lexington Inn at East Lexington. Mrs. O'Riordan accompanies her husband each day to Boston to his business, and then when evening comes she returns home with him. Now that the secret of their marriage is out, all East Lexington is talking about their devotion to each other.

Planned Quiet Wedding.

But that isn't the best part of it. The pleasant feature, the bride declares, is the winning over of her mother-in-law. The bridegroom is doing it, she says, slowly but surely.

"Why," said the pretty Mrs. O'Riordan, shrugging her shoulders, "if we hadn't been in love with each other we should not have been married. We had always planned a quiet wedding, and we had it. And we were married according to the rules of our church, too. How long engaged? Who cares?

"Anyway, we met five years ago, and at St. Mary's church. We fell in love of course we did. We had a right to, didn't we? Then we decided to be married. We went to the cathedral and after that we drove out to Lexington with the bridesmaid, my sister Nora, and the best man. There were but four of us at the church.

Members of St. Mary's.

"Listen! I think Mrs. O'Riorden is won over to the match. With just a little perseverance Joe thinks everything will be all right."

Bride and groom are members of the congregation of St. Mary's church. They were married Easter Sunday by the Rev. John G. [illegible] of the Cathedral of the Holy Cross. The marriage was kept quiet, but yesterday it leaked out.

The bride was formerly a shop girl. The groom, he is thirty two, is a contractor and is wealthy.

TAFT AND GUILD IS POWERS' TICKET

Secretary of War's Bay State Manager Declares Governor Is Right Man for Second Place.

Taft and Guild as the Republican national ticket is what ex-Congressman Samuel L. Powers sees after a week's visit to Washington where he has been in touch with leaders of the Grand Old Party from the country over.

Confident that the Secretary of War will not only have a majority of votes in the Chicago convention but will be nominated on the first ballot by a two-thirds vote, the Taft manager for New England hopes for the nomination of Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., for vice-president and comes home prepared to have Massachusetts take the lead in presenting the name of Governor Guild to the convention.

"Michigan is ready," declared the ex-Congressman last night, "to present the name of Governor Guild, but the general sentiment is that the presentation should come from Massachusetts. And it will surely come."

"With everyone practically conceding Taft's nomination I found that the talk in Washington now centre upon the man for second place," said the ex-congressman. "I was pleased, but not extremely surprised to find a great deal of outspoken sentiment as to the ability and availability of Governor Curtis Guild.

"I found in Washington that it is now assumed, especially by men from the West and South, that Massachusetts will bring forward the name of Governor Guild as a vice-presidential candidate in the convention. A good many of our own people would be actually surprised, I believe, to realize accurately how popular the Governor is in the South and middle West. Far and wide through this region he is known both as a soldier and as a campaigner.

"As long ago as the second McKinley campaign, when he went on a stumping trip with Roosevelt, he aroused much enthusiasm and became very well known in such States as Colorado, Wyoming and others of the Rock Mountain regions. I doubt if any one has been mentioned as an available candidate for the vice President of late years who is any better known to the masses of the people everywhere than is Governor Guild.

"Another thing that would make the available candidate for the Vice-President on the ticket with Mr. Taft popular is the fact that it is well known that he has been and is a great admirer of the Secretary of War and stands for the same policies.

"The matter of availability must always be considered. Of course if New York should swing into line for Taft and decide to support Hughes for Vice-President, another strong ticket would be formed if the Governor of New York would consent to run in second place. It is not probable that he would do so and in the opinion of the prominent Republicans at Washington Governor Guild appears to be by far the most available candidate."

JOHNSON TRIES TO AVERT CAR STRIKE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Cleveland, O., May 2.—His prestige at stake, Mayor Tom L. Johnson to-day and to-night exerted his greatest effort to avoid or at least to delay the imminent walk-out of the conductors and motormen of the Municipal Traction Company, fostered by the Mayor to operate all lines in the city at a three-cent fare.

He conferred with A. L. Behner, national vice-president of the Employes' Union, and a committee of the men, when the result of the balloting of the union men was announced as 1,452 to 120 in favor of authorizing the issuance of a strike order. The Mayor urged arbitration and in a second conference at 11:30 to-night made a more definite proposal.

"The Mayor's concessions must be greater than in the afternoon," said a union officer late to-night, "or the strike will be ordered at once."

The men insisted the contract with the Cleveland Electric, granting a two-cent raise, must first be recognized, and that arbitration would then be agreed to.

President Dupont insists his company cannot pay the two-cent raise and operate at three-cent fare, as pledged by Mayor Johnson, and at the same time meet the 6 per cent. annual rental on $12,700,000 and whatever more of $35,000,000 authorized capital of the Cleveland Electric is issued.

He was taken to the Waltham Hospital. The auto speeded on after the accident. Neither the number of the machine or any of its occupants were recognized.

CHORUS GIRLS BEAT TENOR.

Vienna, May 2.—The chorus girls who appeared in "Hoffman's Tales," administered a severe beating to the representative of the title role, a tenor named Sussmann, after the latter had knocked down Herr Simon, director of the Vienna Popular Opera. After beating him the girls threw the tenor bodily out of the stage door.

Don't Purge the Bowels—Do as Nature Does

Nature gets her laxatives from food.

If you ate plenty of fruit, coarse food and green vegetables, you would get laxative enough.

But you eat fine food, and too much of it. And you exercise too little.

So it is vital that you help the bowels in another way.

But don't use salts or pill cathartics. Never employ harsh physic.

Nature does all things gently. Give her gentle help.

Cascarets are vegetable. They have just the same effect as a laxative food.

They never gripe, so you know they don't irritate.

They act in Nature's way. Yet they are just as effective as violence.

Every effect is curative.

Those who are well informed about laxatives employ only Cascarets.

Cascarets are candy tablets. They are sold by all druggists, but never in bulk. Be sure to get the genuine, with CCC on every tablet. The box is marked like this

Cascarets

The vest-pocket box is 10 cents
The month-treatment box 50 cents

BEGINNING

MONDAY, MAY 4th

THIS year's "Nemo Week" is more than usually attractive, and there are two good reasons why retailers are anxious to co-operate with us to make this annual event a great success.

1. Nemo Corsets are not like ordinary corsets. Each is a patented specialty that does something—reduces the abdomen, strengthens the back, straightens the form, or brings health, comfort and style in some way quite its own. Nemos must be understood. To know Nemo Corsets is to wear them.

2. The phenomenal success of the Nemo has naturally brought forth many worthless imitations, which are so adroitly named and so skillfully misrepresented that any woman who doesn't happen to know, may easily be deceived. It is only right and fair to give all women every opportunity to guard themselves against such imposition.

MERCHANTS generally recognize these facts, and desire to protect their trade by exposing frauds. "Nemo Week" gives them an exceptional opportunity to explain to their trade the invaluable patented special features that have made Nemo Corsets famous throughout the world.

THE new Nemo models are of absorbing interest. Some of them are entirely new inventions, producing results heretofore thought impossible.

THE wonderful "Back-Resting," and the ingenious and lissome "Willow-Shape," should be studied carefully by women of slender and medium figure, while the stout woman will rejoice in the new "Flatning-Back" models in the "Self-Reducing" styles, whereby graceful Princesse effects may be attained even by fleshy women.

SELF-REDUCING, No. 312, for tall stout figures; and No. 320, same with Flatning-Back
SELF-REDUCING, No. 314, for short stout figures; and No. 318, same with Flatning-Back } $3.00
SELF-REDUCING, No. 516, for tall stout figures; and No. 517, same with Flatning-Back
SELF-REDUCING, No. 518, for short stout figures; and No. 515, with bust supporters .... } $5.00
SWAN-SHAPE, Nos. 205, 206, 303 and 355—$2.00 to $3.50; MILITARY BELT, Nos. 301, 302 and 304, $3.00
BACK-RESTING CORSET, No. 351—$3.50; WILLOW-SHAPE CORSET, No. 500—$5.00

"Nemo Week" is an educational event, for it teaches women how to be shapely and stylish without transgressing the laws of health and hygiene. It demonstrates that, though the first great Nemo success was the famous "Self-Reducing" Corset, the new Nemo models for slender figures are superlatively chic and dainty as well as hygienic.

A Year and Teeth

Anniversaries are milestones in a business as well as in the life of an individual. We have reached our first milestone, and as we pause to consider the progress we have made [illegible] we shall take the public into our confidence and tell it of our success in the establishment of a scientific method of dentistry in the New England field.

Before the Alveolar system was introduced into New England it had already been successfully demonstrated in the great centres of America. We were told that Boston was very conservative, too conservative for a new method of dentistry—conducted by those who do not believe that any professional etiquette against advertising should prevent making known the merit of their work.

We opened our suite of offices in the Berkeley Building just a year ago. We were sure that even conservative Boston would not be prejudiced against anything so meritorious as our Alveolar Method of Treatment. We knew that the wonderful success of the work in other great centres could be duplicated in Boston, and the past year has shown that our judgment was correct.

Beginning with no patients, we have treated successfully more than twelve hundred patients in the past year, and now we are treating over two hundred patients a month, who come to us from all over New England.

Far away Nova Scotia has sent us patients as well as the extreme west of New England. Our patients have made known, better than we could through our advertising, what we have done for them, and the number has greatly increased. Many patients have come to us because of what other patients have told them of our work, and in many cases we have successfully treated those who have failed to get relief from other dentists.

Prejudice and conservatism have been overcome, as we have proved beyond doubt that we could do all we claim. Our treatment is based upon the results of years of scientific investigation and is carried out by experts in every branch of dentistry. We have eliminated the painful side of dental work and succeeded in doing away with the ordinary bridge and plate work.

Our Alveolar process entails no cutting, boring or surgical operation, nor do we have to remove loose teeth. On the contrary we make them firm and, with the support of two or more teeth in either jaw, can replace your missing teeth. In the treatment of decayed teeth, our work is unexcelled.

Thorough chewing of food is necessary to your well being, and this is impossible without sound teeth. Every woman appreciates what handsome teeth mean to her. Most business men overlook how potent a pleasing personality is in securing business.

Our Alveolar treatment will absolutely give you a set of teeth that will improve your appearance. One should never neglect the teeth. Our booklet on Alveolar Dentistry tells you facts you should know. We will be glad to send it free of charge to any one who cares to know about their teeth. We examine teeth free of charge and would be glad to tell you what we can do for you and the probable cost.

In conclusion we wish to express to the public our appreciation of the splendid way in which they have given us their patronage.

MUSIC FESTIVAL FINANCIAL FAILURE

Springfield, May 2.—About $400 was lost on the annual music festival held at Court Square Theatre this week, and the scores of people who have agreed to act as guarantors for a period of five years must make up the deficit. The festival was a great success artistically, musically and socially, but was a failure financially.

"What's that? What's that?" Judge McDonough fairly roared [illegible]

McCombe told the story over again.

Judge McDonough remained a moment apparently in deep thought [illegible] said calmly:

"If this is so, there is [illegible] sending this [illegible] Should the District Attorney however see fit to prosecute [illegible] Discharged! Call the next case."

Mrs. McCombe was [illegible] she knew the kidnapper. She swore out a complaint against her former husband and Inspector Medley of Fall River brought McCombe back from Holyoke.

District Attorney Swift declines to take the McCombe matter seriously.

"Never saw the man," Swift said to-night to a reporter for the Boston Sunday American. "Never heard of him, and know nothing about his case except what you have told m[illegible]"

Former Mayor Grime, in the same [illegible] said:

"McCombe came to me six months ago," said Grime, "to say how much he wanted his boy back and how unjust he considered the judgment of the divorce court. I instructed him to proceed with a petition to have the decree of custody altered in his favor. This was a civil matter. Nobody has a right to criticize my action in such a proceeding.

"I heard no more of the man until yesterday, when he sent to me from prison. I went over and he told me about the new developments.

"'I can't advise you McCombe,' I said, 'because this is a criminal case, now, and I am with the District Attorney. You'll have to get some other lawyer.'

"'Send me one,' he pleaded, but I told him that I ought not to do even that. I didn't see him again.

"On my way out of the station, however, I met Jim Morris in the assembly room, told him about McCombe and his case and suggested that he go in. Morris went in, and, apparently took the case."

FIND WELL DRESSED MAN DEAD IN RIVER

Police Seek to Establish Identity of Unknown Unfortunate at Haverhill.

Haverhill, May 2.—To-night the police are seeking to establish the identity of a well dressed, apparently prosperous man, whose body was found floating in the water at Riverside today by Charles Bly. When Bly pulled the corpse ashore he found sticking from the man's trousers pocket a wallet containing $4[illegible]. Search of the dead man's clothes by the medical examiner revealed a 17 jewelled gold watch in a Keystone case of Illinois make. On the left finger of the right hand was a heavy gold band ring, on the inside of which was engraved "Mrs. Sullivan." He was about 40 years old, 5 feet 7 inches in height, had a sandy mustache and his head was bald in front.

DAUGHTER OF RICH MERCHANT WHO IS TO WED YOUNG LAWYER

MISS LILLIAN KORNFELD

FINNISH WOMEN WOULD RAISE WEDDING LIMIT

Bill Provides Wife Must Be Eighteen and Husband Twenty-One.

Hellingsfors, Finland, May 2.—The women deputies in the Finnish Parliament are backing a bill providing that girls shall not marry in Finland until they have reached the age of eighteen. At present the age limit is fifteen years, or less if permission of the State authorities can be procured.

The bill also provides that a male Finlander must be twenty-one years of age before he can enter the holy bonds of matrimony.

PROMINENT LAWYER WINS RICH BRIDE

Romance of Young Couple Interests Jewish Society Folk of Boston.

Jewish society folks of Brookline, Dorchester and Roxbury are eagerly discussing the interesting romance which led up to the engagement of pretty Miss Lillian Kornfeld, daughter of Felix Kornfeld, the wealthy Summer street millinery and artificial plant merchant, to Leon R. Eyges, the well-known attorney, politician and former newspaper man.

Just seven years ago the young couple met, when attractive Miss Kornfeld made her debut at the Purim ball, the most fashionable and exclusive affair of the Jewish social season. They were introduced by a prominent society woman and became mutually attracted. At that time young Eyges had just started with his law practice and Miss Kornfeld became interested in him and his work. Then both young people resided in the Elm Hill district of Roxbury and Eyges often was a caller at the Kornfeld residence on Howland street.

Then three years ago the young couple met more frequently. Leon Eyges was then, as he is now, an ardent worker for Democracy and Democrats; very often he appeared on the stump and public platform.

And very often did Miss Kornfeld, interested in him and his ideals, go to hear him debate the topics of the day.

The couple will be married on June 17, and friends and relatives from this country and Europe are planning to be present at the nuptial ceremony.

MIKADO THANKS THE PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, May 2.—President Roosevelt to-day received, in answer to his message of condolence over the recent accident to the cruiser Matsushima, the following cablegram from the Emperor of Japan:

(Signed) "MUTSUHITO."

FRIENDS SAY MRS. DAVIS SEEKS DIVORCE IN DAKOTA

Wife of Milton Millionaire Whose Mysterious Disappearance Stirred Society in West.

Mrs. Charles E. Davis, who disappeared from the home of her millionaire husband in East Milton three months ago, is believed by her friends to be in South Dakota for the purpose of acquiring a residence. A close friend of the Davis family informed the Sunday American yesterday that Mrs. Davis is now in that State and intends to divorce her husband. Mrs. Davis is forty-two years old. Her husband, who is a retired banker and broker, is sixty years old.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis have five beautiful children, four of whom are now living with the father at his magnificent East Milton mansion. There are two daughters, Suzette, twenty, and P[illegible], eighteen. The two boys living at home are Winthrop, aged seventeen and Reginald, twelve. [illegible], twenty-two, is studying in Paris. The two girls go to a private school in [illegible] Mass. [illegible] Boston. Winthrop goes to a private Boston school, while young "Reggie," as he is known to his intimates, attends the swell Milton Academy.

Prominent in Milton Church.

Mrs. Davis was a prominent member of the [illegible] Milton Unitarian Church, of which [illegible] is pastor. She was one of the [illegible] charity workers in the [illegible] took an active part in all the church festivities. When asked [illegible] Mrs. Davis's disappearance, Rev. Mr. [illegible] "It is a private family affair and does not concern the public. Therefore I do not care to discuss the matter in any way."

Mrs. Davis left [illegible] early one morning about February [illegible] was driven to the East Milton station by the family coachman, Richard W[illegible]. Neither her husband nor any of the children accompanied her. So far as known there were no farewell demonstrations at the house before she left. Mrs. Davis took a large quantity of baggage. She has not been home since.

Mr. Davis admits that his wife has left home but will not say where she is.

Mrs. B. F. Harding of Russell street, sister of Mrs. Davis, was asked if she knew the present whereabouts of her sister. She replied, "I have nothing to say, I refuse to discuss the matter." Mr. [illegible] is a professor in the Milton Academy. "It's a private family affair," he said. "I do not feel called upon to make any statement. The one to make a statement, if any is to be made, is Mr. Davis."

Mrs. Charlotte Parker of Hollis street, who is a friend of the Davis family, told an American reporter that she believes Mrs. Davis is in one of the Dakotas. "I do not know what she went there for," said Mrs. Parker.

Live in Beautiful Mansion.

The Davis family occupy what was formerly the D. O. Clark estate. It is located on Pleasant street, East Milton, and comprises many acres. There are hundreds of trees on the estate, mostly elms and pines, and a miniature lake is situated in front of the mansion.

Mr. Davis rented the estate when he came to East Milton from New York eight years ago. When the lease expired he bought the place. There is a fine stable connected with the place, containing many blooded horses. Mrs. Davis was an ardent horsewoman. Her two daughters can be seen almost every morning riding their thoroughbreds. All the Davis children are members of the Wollaston Golf Club.

Before marriage Mrs. Davis was Miss Ida P. Williams. She was a famous beauty and still retains her good looks. Mr. Davis is a member of the Country Club, Riverside Club and the University Club. He comes to Boston nearly every day on private business.

SLASHED BY RAZOR IN UNKNOWN'S HAND

While John Foley, fifty-four years old, of No. 89 B street, South Boston was walking along Dover street in the South End last night a rough looking man whom he had never seen before, came up to him and drew a razor and slashed Foley across the face with it.

Neither spoke a word, and no warning of the assault had been given by the thug.

Foley was picked up by policemen from the East Dedham street station and hurried to the City Hospital. The man with the knife escaped.

The surgeons sewed up a very deep cut five inches long, extending from the forehead to chin.

—T. B. FITZPATRICK.

"Blood Is Not so Thin, Nor Memory so Faithless," He Declares.

MUST HEED CRY OF JUSTICE

National Treasurer of Irish League Tells of United Action In America.

IRISH people in the United States will stand by their countrymen in Ireland till the Old Country has obtained Home Rule, says Treasurer Thomas B. Fitzpatrick of the United Irish League. The Irish-Americans will not forget the wrongs of Ireland nor remain passive under their recital. To quote Mr. Fitzpatrick's words:

"Blood is not so thin, nor memory so faithless."

Mr. Fitzpatrick was the principal speaker at yesterday's meeting of the Twentieth Century Club. The Rev. Walter Walsh of Dundee, Scotland, spoke on social conditions and housing problems in Scotland. Secretary H. F. Cope of the Religious Educational Association outlined the purposes of that organization.

Homes More Like Graves.

"We have in Scotland even now houses more like graves," declared the Rev. Mr. Walsh, after telling of the abodes which had been dug in the earth as homes by the Picts hundreds of years ago. "Some of the people live away from the sunlight, and all that makes the home lovable and under conditions that are most deplorable. They are living under social and housing conditions that are unparalleled in all Europe.

"There is plenty of land in Scotland, but the English squires and American millionaires have driven the people off that they may shoot deer and grouse and maintain large sheep farms. Last year over 10,000 immigrants from Scotland came to America, and the amount of immigration is fast approaching the birth rate."

Irish Self-Government.

Mr. Fitzpatrick said in part:

"I am asked to make a few remarks to-day upon the 'Irish National Movement.' What is the Irish National Movement? Nothing more nor less than an organized purpose on the part of the Irish people to obtain Home Rule, or in other words, local self-government for Ireland.

"This would be a form of government subject to the jurisdiction of Great Britain in national affairs, but empowered through its home parliament, or domestic legislature, to make and administer laws which relate solely to Ireland.

"It will be seen, therefore, that Home Rule for Ireland means substantially a government of the Irish people, by the Irish people, for the Irish people. This is Home Rule as its advocates understand it. It has been granted to Canada, to Australia, to the Transvaal, and to other British dependencies. Why not Ireland?

"Here in America we live in an atmosphere of Home Rule; home rule in the town, in the city, in the state and in the nation. Every state has its legislature to govern its own affairs, and the mandate of independence thus incouraged on the part of the people is never at variance with their fealty to the national government. On the contrary, it strengthens the bond of union, and is a vital source of protection to the sovereignty of the nation. It encourages confidence in the general government and promotes loyalty to central authority.

Would Help Great Britain.

"This is what Mr. Redmond meant, in his great speech before Parliament a few weeks ago, when he said that 'the reform of the Irish government is a matter vital to the interests of Ireland, and calculated to promote the well-being of the people of Great Britain.' Mr. Redmond is right in contending that a satisfactory form of government in Ireland will 'promote the well being of the people of Great Britain' as well as serve the interests of Ireland. This is the statesman's view. He recognizes that the administration of justice by any government benefits, not alone a part of the people, but the whole people.

"For centuries Ireland has not shared in this boon of justice by the British government. I need not rehearse the story of her wrongs. It would take much more time to relate a single chapter than could be afforded at this time. I will not therefore attempt it.

"It is to remedy an evil system of government and to give to Ireland a brighter and happier future that her people have demanded the right to govern themselves. Some of the ablest British statesmen have recognized this right, and to their credit, be it said, spared no effort to secure it for Ireland.

Quotes Campbell-Bannerman.

The late Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, in a speech at the opening of Parliament in February, 1907, stated as follows: 'My view has been made as clear as day, again and again, in and out of the House. The whole point is this. Are you prepared to deny that the Irish people are entitled to manage their own domestic affairs so long as they do not interfere with ours and so long as nothing is done to infringe the supremacy of Parliament and therefore, the solidity of the connection between the three countries? It does not make any difference whatever

SLEUTH, FIRED, SUES BINGHAM FOR $50,000

New York, May 2.—Theodore A. Bingham, police commissioner, was served with the summons and complaint to-day at headquarters in the suit for $50,000 damages brought by William F. Peabody, better known as "Frank." He was recently removed as lieutenant-detective of police for undue activity in the Gould case, in which his superior, Inspector William W. McLaughlin, was also implicated, and who resigned when the pressure became too great.

50,000 CATHOLICS MARCH IN GOTHAM CENTENARY PARADE.

Mighty Host Witnesses Great Demonstration by Societies at New York.

CHEERS ALL ALONG LINE

Ideal Day for Marchers, Who Present Most Brilliant Spectacle.

NEW YORK, May 2.—More splendid processions in point of trappings and pomp and ceremony have passed up Fifth avenue than to-day's parade of the Catholic laity, closing the week's celebration of the centennial of the establishment of the diocese of New York, but none more impressive.

As hour after hour passed and still the ranks of the organized bodies streamed onward to the north, the vast strength of the church was borne in on the hundreds of thousands who lined the avenue from Washington square to Fifty-eighth street and watched the fifty thousand men in line. Of these only three, the grand marshal and two aides, were mounted.

With the exception of a few organizations not numerous in membership, there was no display of uniforms or other regalia. A badge pinned on the breast, the guides on the side lines that indicated the identity of the organization, here and there a banner, and always the American flag, these alone gave color to the long line of marchers.

Ideal Day for Parade.

The parade was excellently managed. Once started, and the hour was promptly observed, there was never a halt until the last rank had filed past the reviewing stand in front of St. Patrick's Cathedral.

It was an ideal day for parading. At 2 o'clock the grand marshal, General Thomas H. Barry, saluted the grand stand from his charger. In the centre section of the stand, just before the main portal of the cathedral, were seated the high dignitaries of the church, Cardinals Logue and Gibbons, Archbishop Farley, Lord Bishop Browne, of Cloyne; Monsignor

If there was a lack of costuming and regalia, there was no dearth of music. At regular and short intervals throughout the long line there were bands and the grand stand was never beyond earshot of their playing. One organization of this character that elicited much attention was the Boys' band of the Mission of the Immaculate Virgin. They were from ninety to one hundred strong and were heartily cheered all along the line of march.

The police arrangements were such as to provide a clear route for the parade, though frequently at the expense of the feelings of the spectators. There were some minor incidents, too, but the day was not marred by anything of a serious character. One of these happened directly opposite the Cathedral, where the stone fence of the D. O. Mills residence gave way before the pressure of the crowd and a score of people found themselves suddenly thrown into the four foot pit beneath.

Cardinal Logue will officiate to-morrow in the Church of St. John the Baptist, Lewis and Willoughby avenues, Brooklyn, at the annual celebration of services commemorating the transition of the body of St. Vincent de Paul, founder of the Congregation of the Mission and of the Sisters of Charity. The Bishop of Buffalo will also be present.

No Dearth of Music.

The Cardinal, instead of returning to Ireland in two weeks, will remain six weeks, he likes the country so well. Monday he and his travelling companion, Lord Bishop Browne of Cloyne, will go to Baltimore as guests of Cardinal Gibbons.

Tuesday they will accompany him to Washington and be guests of the Catholic University of America, and without doubt the primate of all Ireland will pay his respects some time during the day to President Roosevelt. It is likely that before his return Cardinal Logue will visit Boston and some of the larger Western cities.

Sunday Cardinal Gibbons, in the cathedral at Baltimore, will consecrate as Titular Bishop of one of the dormant Oriental sees Mgr. Dennis J. O'Connell, recently elevated to the episcopal rank as a reward for his labors, first as rector of the American College at Rome and later as rector of the Catholic University at Washington. Aversa, the apostolic delegate to Cuba, and a host of monsignori and priests. They were flanked on either side by more than three thousand of the wives and daughters of representative laymen of the diocese, whose gowns gave a brilliant effect, making a mass of color against the gray walls of the basilica.

There were a few organizations in line that attracted exceptional interest, and of these easily the first was the small body of negro Roman Catholics who represented the Holy Name Society of the church of St. Benedict the Moor. All along the line they were cheered, and nowhere more lustily than by the throng at the cathedral.

The Catholic Club, which formed the escort to the grand marshal, came in for the plaudits of the multitude, and the color guards of the Knights of Columbus attracted keen attention.

In the Catholic Club escort were Supreme Justices Davis, Dayton, O'Gorman, Goff, former Justice M. J. O'Brien, Eugene Philbin, E. J. McGuire, W. B. Cockran, John D. Crimmins, Thomas F. Ryan and others.

The Holy Name societies of the diocese, comprising the first division of the parade and representing scores of parishes, astonished all by the extraordinary strength of its showing. It is perhaps underestimating the number to say there were 10,000 members of this organization in line. The Knights of Columbus likewise made an impressive showing, with 4,000 men in line, and the Hibernians made the next most numerous turnout, with perhaps half that number.

The close of the centenary celebration of the establishment of the archdiocese of New York was marked by the receipt of a congratulatory telegram from President Roosevelt by Archbishop Farley.

In his message the President said:

"My Dear Archbishop: Now that the celebration of the anniversary is over I want in the first place to congratulate you on its great success. In the next place I want to congratulate all our people on the impulse to higher patriotism given by the way in which the celebration was conducted. Finally, and what is much the least important, I want to thank you personally for your very kind and courteous allusion to myself on last Tuesday."

M'LAUGHLIN SLATED FOR SHAW'S PLACE

Will Be Appointed to Election Board by Mayor Hibbard Next Week.

Edward A. McLaughlin of No. 86 Walnut avenue, Roxbury, former clerk of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, will be named by Mayor Hibbard to succeed Davis B. Shaw of Charlestown as a member of the Board of Election Commissioners. The appointment will be sent to the Board of Aldermen a week from to-morrow.

Commissioner Shaw's term of four years expired on May 1. Mr. McLaughlin has never been a candidate for the place, but is willing to accept. The active seekers for the position have been Mr. Shaw and Malachi L. Jennings of Ward 16. It was urged in behalf of Mr. Jennings that he had supported Mayor Hibbard for election, but as the board is by law a bi-partisan one, the Mayor decided that a man should be selected whose Democracy could not be questioned. It was semi-officially announced from the Mayor's office on Saturday of last week that Mr. Shaw would be reappointed on the following Monday. Hence the announcement that Mr. McLaughlin is to have the place, forecasted in these columns several weeks ago, comes as a surprise.

The Mayor leaves for Richmond, Va., to-morrow to attend the Associated Charities convention, and will not name any one to the health board until his return. There is one vacancy now, caused by the removal of W[illegible] H. Hayes of Charlestown. This will be filled by the appointment of Frederic O. North, former schoolhouse commissioner under the administration of his uncle, Mayor Thomas N. Hart. For the other place, now held by Michael W. Norris, whose resignation is in the hands of the Mayor, the names of Dr. Arthur H. Davison of No. 337 Talbot avenue, Dorchester, and Walter A. Webster of Ward 22, are being considered.

Dr. Davison is a son of Dr. Archibald T. Davison, chairman of the Ward 20 Republican committee and delegate to the Republican national convention from the Tenth District. Walter A. Webster is a lawyer, a former member of the Legislature, and was the Republican candidate for District Attorney against John B. Moran last November. It is now practically assured that the Board of Aldermen will confirm the Mayor's reappointment to the board of Dr. Samuel H. Durgin.

Schumann-Heink Nails Divorce Rumor by Calling "Billy"

He Comes in With Six Little Rapps and Picture of Domestic Joy Is Complete.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, May 2.—The "Villa Fides," home of Mme. Schumann-Heink, on Cauldwell mountain, Singap, N. J., was the most tranquil as well as beautiful spot in the state to-day. The reporter, who had been sent to verify a report that Mme. Schumann-Heink was about to sue for divorce, bravely knocked at the door.

Mme. Schumann-Heink, in apron and with her sleeves rolled up, was busily kneeding the dough for the evening baking.

"Is it true that you are going to get a divorce?" asked the reporter.

Mme. Schumann-Heink's hands came out of the dough. Her laugh echoed throughout the house. She ran to the door.

"Billy, come here," she called.

William Rapp, the husband, trooped in followed by six of their children. He had been busy in the barnyard.

"Billy, is it true that we are to be divorced?" asked Mme. Schumann-Heink, putting her arm about his neck so that the dough covered part would not touch him.

Billy laughed and the six little Rapps laughed also.

"It is absurd and false. It would be cruel if it were not so absurd," said Mme. Schumann-Heink.

"It's part of a plan of slander against me that has been going on ever since I became a citizen of America." And she laughed again.

PICTURE'S REMOVAL STARTS LIVELY WAR

Irish County Clubs Demand Gov Sullivan's Portrait Be Restored at State House.

There is agitation among the members of the Irish County Clubs of Boston because the portrait of ex-Governor James Sullivan no longer adorns the gallery of former Governors at the State House. It was removed some time ago to the office of Frank I. Dean, private secretary to the Governor.

The custodians of the State House say the removal was because of a lack of room in the gallery.

Governor in 1807-1808.

James Sullivan was Governor of the Commonwealth from 1807 to 1808. He was a loyal Irishman with hosts of friends. He was the seventh Governor, John Hancock being the first, and members of the County Clubs say that if any former Governor was to be slighted, it should not, at least by virtue of his rank, have been Sullivan.

"Lack of room," they say, is no excuse. There are two pictures of Mr. Sullivan in Mr. Dean's office. One is a large painting, the other a small print. They hang among the portraits of other later Governors, but two pictures in the back room do not, according to the club members and friends of Mr. Sullivan, offset the fact that there is no picture in the front room, where they say it belongs.

Resolutions of Protest.

At a meeting of the Central Council of the organization, to be held at Paine Hall Tuesday evening, the following resolutions will be introduced:

"Whereas, the portrait of Governor James Sullivan has been removed from the hall wherein hangs the portraits of Governors of Massachusetts, therefore,

"Be it resolved, That we call upon His Excellency, the Governor of the State, to place in position, side by side with the other portraits of former Governors, the portrait of Governor James Sullivan. Be it further

"Resolved, That we call upon all Irish organizations to adopt similar resolutions and see to it that the request is complied with."

CITY WITHOUT MORALITY MUST SOON CRUMBLE

—Cardinal Logue.

Primate of Ireland Sees Bright Future for Church in America; Warns Against Divorce.

New York, May 2. The following message from Cardinal Logue to the Sunday American readers was given out to-day:

"I am glad to see that the spirit and faith of St. Patrick are so vital in this city, and I congratulate the people upon it. Next to Ireland, I love America best of all other countries. There is no doubt but what the brightest future of the church is in America.

"Looking into the future, I see New York a city of many more millions than you have even now. Her power for good and evil will be unlimited. And with the growth of the city the church will grow; this very fact will be the salvation of the city. In fact, it will be the uplifting influence of the church that will make a vastly increased population possible. Without morality a nation or a city, when it reaches a certain point, degenerates and declines in population faster than it can grow.

"The mission of the Catholic church here in New York should be, and will be, to assist in the growth of the city's population and maintain its moral tone against all the influences tending to degeneration.

"With your growing population, the city will be in need of every possible agency for morality which she can avail herself of. And the Catholic church will not be lacking in her loyalty to the city and State. Every priest in this archdiocese should feel himself a specially delegated agent of St. Patrick to fight against the powers of evil, to preach and minister to all human needs in this great field. A body of consecrated men such as these, above the lure of money and sensuality, must be a potent influence in an age of gilded vice.

"The sacredness of the family relation is at the root of society. We shall preserve the purity of this fountain of life. Marriage will be upheld as a sacred relation. Divorce, that foul forerunner of degeneracy, will be fought at every turn as if it were a wild beast preying upon the fairest of humanity.

"The church's mission also will be identical with that important purpose of this nation to take the millions of people coming to this port and help to amalgamate them into American society. Your civic and national government is doing all it can to this end. But the Catholic church is the mother faith of most of these aliens. They speak [illegible] which you Americans do not understand, and the new arrival [illegible] finds few [illegible] at first. [illegible] tongue whether he be French, German, Italian, Russian, Arabian or any other [illegible].

"By reason of this the church has the influence of divine authority over him, which at the outset can be wielded by no other institution, not even the government. This places an obligation upon the church that it cannot throw off. With these ever increasing [illegible] to the occasion and discharge the duty, cost what it will in treasure and human effort."

ENRAGED, FIGHTS OFFICERS WITH AXE

After a fierce battle with two Melrose policemen, in which he fought [illegible] a big axe and repeatedly threatened their lives, Charles F. Henderson, twenty-eight, single, who boards with J. F. Scherer, No. 34 South Avenue, Melrose Highlands, and has been acting peculiarly of late, was arrested at 9:30 last night and held for safe keeping.

It took the two officers, Reardon and Pierce, nearly fifteen minutes to overcome and disarm him. They were called to the house after Henderson had chased all the people out with the axe, threatening to end all their lives.

He stationed himself at the head of the stairway when the officers came, and threatened to "massacre" them if they approached.

The officers dashed up and he retreated, keeping them at a distance by his vicious axe-swinging. Officer Reardon tripped and fell during the melee and Henderson was about to swing upon Reardon's head when Officer Pierce knocked it aside. They finally grappled with Henderson. He put up a furious fight before he was subdued.

FIREBUGS AGAIN TRY TO BURN CHELSEA.

TWO ATTEMPTS MADE

Police on Trail of Gang Evidently Bent on Destroying Rest of City.

TWO incendiary attempts were made last night to burn what is left of Chelsea's thickly-settled tenement district. Kerosene oil, paper and matches were used each time, with every evidence of careful and deliberate attempt to set dangerous fires. Both attempts are thought to be the work of three men who were espied running away from the second scene of action. The police are trying hard to locate the firebugs.

The police learned of the first attempt in investigating the second. The first was at 6 o'clock, when a long shed in the rear of Mrs. Rose Milk's place at No. 108 Williams street was set afire.

Seen by Woman.

A lot of paper was placed on the roof of the shed, and the roof and papers were soaked with kerosene. Whoever set the fire escaped without being noticed. The fire was seen by Mrs. Milk, who called neighbors. The flames were extinguished before much damage was done.

At 7 o'clock, when the excitement from the first attempt had hardly subsided, the second was made. Mrs. Minnie Decker of No. 106 Williams street, next door neighbor of Mrs. Milk, saw from a rear window two boys or men standing at the rear of the house No. 27 Pine street. Pine street is parallel to Williams street and the two houses back up against each other.

Mrs. Decker saw one of the shadowy figures strike a match and drop it into a pail which was placed at the corner of the piazza in the rear of No. 27 Pine street. She shouted to them and they ran out of the Pine street gate and away in the dim light. They were joined at the gate by a third person, evidently waiting there to keep watch.

Oil-Fed Flames.

Investigation showed that the firebugs had filled a pail with kerosene-soaked paper and had thrown kerosene over barrels left under the high piazza. With a good start the oil fed flames would surely have ignited the wooden dwelling. But when the firebugs were scared away the match which had been dropped in the pail of paper expired.

The Pine street house is owned by Moses Rosenberg, who occupies the first floor with his wife and four children. On the second floor live Louis Simon and his brother, Abraham Simon, with their wives and families of two children each. Fourteen people live in the house. The two Simons families were burned out in the big Chelsea fire and moved into the Rosenberg tenement only yesterday morning.

The police were notified of the second fire and, when they investigated, learned about the first one. State Detective Silas P. Smith went to the scene with the Chelsea officers and joined in the investigation.

'40 THIEVES' GANG BEAT MAN HELPLESS

John J. Smith Waylaid After Quarrel in Poolroom and Lands in Hospital.

As a result of a fight which began last night in a Compton street pool room in the South End and ended early this morning in Appleton street, not far away, John J. Smith, 35 years old, of No. 3 Cortes street, is helpless at the City Hospital, his body a mass of bruises from head to foot.

Smith is six feet tall and weighs 200 pounds. He had an argument in the pool room with others of the players and for a time it looked as if a fist fight could hardly be averted. A truce was declared, however, and just before the closing hour [illegible] left the room. [illegible] lay in wait for Smith at the darkest spot in Appleton street, at the rear of the Castle Square [illegible].

When Smith came along, the crowd pounced upon him from the darkness. The [illegible] outnumbered, finally fell under a perfect rain of stones. He was beaten over the head and face with clubs and finally fell prostrate [illegible] of his own blood.

Day, who is known throughout the country for his criticism of President Roosevelt, reinstated the three [illegible] who were under suspension and announced that the fourteen "sympathetic strikers" would not be punished. The students declare they have gained a complete victory.

CHEER DR. MUCK AT FAREWELL CONCERT

[illegible] large and cultured audience which paid homage to Dr. Muck as the last of the season's Symphony concerts in Symphony Hall last night. By 8 o'clock every seat was filled, and when Dr. Muck appeared he was greeted by storms of applause from the orchestra and audience, both of which, not satisfied with mere hand clapping, rose to their feet and remained standing and applauding until he had taken his place at the conductor's stand, from which hung a large laurel wreath, a tribute from his many admirers.

It was Dr. Muck's last appearance with the Symphony orchestra, and it certainly must have been gratifying to him to see his conservative Boston [illegible] forget itself as to become demonstrative. He can no longer be in doubt as to his popularity. His farewell program was the same as the one he gave on his first Boston appearance, and in his conducting he, as usual, showed musicianly qualities of the highest order, governed at all times by a deep sincerity and love for his art.

Beethoven's Symphony No. 5, in C minor, opened the programme, the other numbers of which were Wagner's "A Faust Overture," Wagner's "A Siegfried Idyl" and Wagner's prelude to "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg."

In his Symphony in C minor, Beethoven develops his own intimate thought; his secret sorrows, his concentrated rage, his worries charged with dejection, his visions [illegible] night, his bursts of enthusiasm—they furnish him the subject; and the forms of melody, harmony, rythm and orchestration are displayed as essentially individual and new as they are powerful and noble.

The first movement is devoted to the [illegible] of disordered sentiments which [illegible] a quiet soul and the performance [illegible] was full of significance, the [illegible] of the work being unfolded by artists who understood the great composer [illegible] and so with each succeeding movement.

JAPANESE BELL BOY POET, WHO LAUDS DEAD HEROES OF SUNKEN MATSUSHIMA

FRANK. OBATA.

SOUNDS REQUIEM OF LOST BATTLESHIP

Japanese Poet Sings Praises of Sunken Matsushima and Its Dead Heroes.

Believing that the calamity which has befallen his native land can be best told in poetry, Frank Obata, one of the Japanese bell boys at the American House, has written the following interesting and characteristic letter to the editor of the Boston Sunday American, in which he describes the recent sinking of the Japanese battleship Matsushima off the coast of Japan near the Pescadores Islands.

Boston American Editor:

Sir: Enclosed is my sentimental layout on the explosion of the unfortunate Matsushima, which I place in your hand, merciful or unmerciful, free of any charge, to be rough handled in any unkind manner you may please or displease, except wastebasket before perusal.

Your truly,
F. OBATA.

Explosion of the Matsushima.

(By F. Obata).

Lo! the Eastern sky red aflame are the morning sun
Scarce crimsons that fair isles of the Pescadores,
Hark! a deep sound like that of roaring gun,
Splash! down goes the noble craft, nearby the shore.
You can yet perceive the flag of the flowery land of East
Thru the thick smokes of the darkest hue,
Still bravely waving on the gallant mast
To thee, and to thy unfortunate crew, adieu!

Oh Matsushima, brave warrior of the Mikado's,
Whose proud foes twice engaged in desperate fight,
And true to the spirit of Japan and her heroes,
Th[illegible] armadas under sea forever [illegible] sight.
But, whoever thought, such a fate, thou should meet,
Oh, Matsushima, why must thy noble existence thus immemorably cease,
Twere better by far, while fighting with hostile fleet,
A gallant death earn thee glorious repose in peace.

And ye, 2nd sturdy sons of Nippon,
The pride of the fair Eastern nation, ye!
Whoe'er dreamed your slumber should thus ungently broken,
And an early morn find yourselves under sea.
Yet patriotism and loyalty, the martial spirit of Japan born,
Shall o'er the Rising Sun of the doomed ship ever shine,
That waves in the cool breeze on that fatal morn.

JUDGE MOVED BY GIRL'S SAD STORY

Bessie M. Lincoln, seventeen years old, and one of the prettiest girls of the brunette type ever seen in a municipal court in Boston, told Judge Michael J. Murray a story yesterday, when arraigned on the charge of shoplifting, which touched his heart and instead of sentencing her to one month in the House of Correction, which was the fate meted out to William L. Parkhill, her companion, he placed her on probation. She will go to the Welcome Home in Dorchester.

Bessie said that her home was in Leominster, and that she was on a train going to relatives in New Hampshire three months ago when she met Parkhill, who is the scion of a wealthy Fitchburg family, but, the police say, an incorrigible young man.

Bessie says he induced her to give up her New Hampshire trip and go to the Columbus avenue house, where he has been living. The police think that Parkhill induced her to go to a department store, and they were arrested on the street on complaint of a woman store detective. In the man's room was found a letter from his wealthy grandmother. She said that she would send him no more money because he had disregarded all her entreaties.

NEWTON SUICIDE EXPERT AUDITOR

During a temporary fit of insanity, Henry F. Fowle, thirty-six, of New York city, killed himself by shooting a bullet in his temple on the grounds adjoining the B. A. A. boathouse at Newton, early yesterday morning.

Fowle was expert accountant, auditor and cashier for the Warren Brothers Company [illegible] New York and Boston. He had [illegible] New York and Boston [illegible] was located for a [illegible] office in New Haven. [illegible] worked for the firm for [illegible] years. His financial connection with the firm was all right.

The suicide was committed during a temporary fit of insanity," declared Mrs. Charles H. Sadler, his sister, yesterday. "He has been despondent and in ill health for three years, and suffered from terrible headaches."

WOMAN IN RAGE ROUTS FIREMEN

Royersford, Pa., May 2.—Denouncing the members of Friendship Hook, Ladder and Hose Company as devils, aged Mrs. Mary Driesbach knocked at the door of the engine house and, on entering, proceeded to clean out the place, using a club which she hurled at the occupants.

LOOK INTO WORK OF UTILITIES BOARD

Senator Tom Mitchell's Committee Makes up a "Seeing New York" Party.

New York, May 2.—Impressed by a two hours' visit to the offices of the Public Service Commission, Massachusetts legislators making a three days' visit to New York, admitted to-night at the Hotel Victoria the existence of a sentiment among them in favor of the bill for the establishment of a Public Service Commission in Massachusetts. None of them would go farther.

The visitors are the Public Service Committee on Beacon Hill. They came over in charge of House Doorkeeper Tom Pedrick. They include Senator Tom Williams of Attleboro, Senator Edward A. Cowee of Worcester, Senator John J. Mitchell of Marlboro and Representatives George H. Newhall of Lynn, William H. Smith of Somerville, Michael J. Kearney of Taunton, John H. Thompson of Worcester, George L. Lovett of Boston, and Charles F. McCarthy of Marlboro. Senator Mitchell and Representatives Thompson and McCarthy are Democrats.

Would Control Railways.

The Massachusetts bill abolishes the Board of Railroad Commissioners, the Commission of Gas and Electric Lighting, the offices of Inspector and Deputy Inspectors of Gas Meters and the Boston Transit Commission.

It gives the proposed Commission supervision or control of the railroads, street railways, common carriers, telephone companies and gas and electric corporations.

Senate Chairman Williams declared unreservedly to New York reporters to-day that the idea is gaining ground in Massachusetts.

Senator John J. Mitchell of Marlboro was almost as enthusiastic, but careful not to take the attitude of talking for the committee.

"No action has yet been taken by the Committee on the bill," Senator Mitchell said, "and there has been nothing like a vote. I am, however, frank to say that to-day's visit to the Public Utilities Commission was a revelation to every man of us."

14 Inspectors on Call.

"The New York Commissioners appear to be honest, independent men, who recognize the most trivial complaint from the most humble individuals. When a complaint comes to them one of the fourteen inspectors is immediately turned loose upon it. Railroads, railways, gas or electric companies, they all have to toe the mark. Already they have looked into between 2,000 and 3,000 complaints. Their office is open at 8 o'clock in the morning. It isn't closed until 11 o'clock at night. Sundays and holidays [illegible] all alike.

"We got considerable information from the commissioners, one and all. They answered offhand every question that we pumped at them bearing on their organization, their work, their plans, their hopes and their successes or failures.

"On Monday morning at Albany we shall talk with the second district commissioners in their office at Albany. Then we'll hurry back to be on hand at the Monday afternoon session."

TECH MEN TO FILL CITY STREET JOBS

Civil Service Board Will Give Non-Competitive Exams for Department Vacancies.

The Civil Service Commission has relented in its previous decision that all of Mayor Hibbard's deputy superintendents of the Street Department must be chosen from the civil service list and have agreed to give any man whom Superintendent of Streets Emerson may select a non-competitive examination for the positions, provided that in the opinion of the commission the selections are eminently qualified." With this decision in mind Superintendent Emerson has made tentative offers of positions to several Technology graduates. The salary attached to the position of deputy is $3,000 to $3,500.

Superintendent Emerson is anxious [illegible] secure a superintendent of the paving division, a superintendent of the sanitary division and a superintendent of sewers. As stated in the Boston American yesterday, Superintendent of Sewers Charles R. Cutter and Superintendent of Sanitary Department Daniel H. Gillespie are slated to go. James H. Sullivan, acting superintendent of paving, will resume his former duties as chief engineer of the paving division as soon as a superintendent is selected.

Deputy Superintendent Edward C. Wade of the lamp division and Thomas H. Sexton of the bridge division will, it is believed, be considered by the Civil Service Commission as eminently qualified," and be allowed to take a non-competitive examination for the places which they now hold provisionally. Superintendent Emerson's selection of T. Barton Pratt as superintendent of street cleaning and watering has been certified by the commission, Mr. Pratt having a rating as a district superintendent in the Metropolitan Park Department. The other deputy, Henry C. Christerlein of the ferry division, was appointed from the civil service list by Mayor Fitzgerald.

The leading candidates for superintendent of the sanitary division are Benjamin A. Ham of Ward 20, a contractor, and father of former Assistant United States District Attorney Guy A. Ham, and James J. Sullivan, for twelve years a foreman in the department. Mr. Sullivan was removed by Superintendent of Streets James Donovan. He had a foreman's rating of ninety-nine per cent, the highest ever given by the Civil Service Commission. Mr. Ham had practically been decided upon for the place, but it now appears that there is some hitch over his appointment and that Superintendent Emerson personally prefers Mr. Sullivan.

AUTO CRASHES INTO CYCLIST

Two Cambridge boys of prominent families, Howard Bright, thirteen years old, living at No. 165 Brattle street, and Arthur Nash, fifteen, of No. 132 Brattle street, had hairbreadth escapes from death late yesterday afternoon.

The two boys were riding on their bicycles on Brattle street, near Channing street. Directly ahead of them was a large touring car, which turned out to the right. Directly behind the boys was another automobile driven by J. J. Tracey, a Harvard student, in company with William W. Perrin, also a Harvard man.

The car in front turned out to the right and the boys were about to follow when the automobile behind collided with the bicycle of young Bright, throwing him to the ground. Nash escaped without a scratch. Bright sustained severe bruises.

STOCK WATERING LEGALIZED BY BILL

House Bill 1,458 Gives Lighting Board Full Power in Limiting Capitalization.

Never since [illegible] J. Edward Addicks of Delaware [illegible] his army of bold lobbyists, [illegible] the Massachusetts Legislature to pass gas bills favorable to particular interests, has there been such an attempt on [illegible] to secure legislation for the [illegible] and electric light companies [illegible] public interest as there is [illegible] when lighting corporations, aided by a powerful lobby, seek the enactment of a law allowing the lighting board to pass upon requests for increases in capital stock. This would virtually legalize stock watering.

Under the present law, capitalization of gas companies is fixed in the maximum at $1,400,000.

Permission of the Legislature must be secured before gas companies can increase their capital above that amount. But House Bill No. 1458, which has passed the House and has gone to its third reading in the Senate, transfers the powers of the Legislature to the Board of Gas Commissioners, obliterates entirely a limit on capitalization and allows the gas commissioners to permit an increased capitalization to any figure they may see fit.

The bill was reported by the Committee on Public Lighting with Senator Dennis E. Hailey of Lawrence dissenting. It slid easily through the House, aided by a lobby representing every lighting company in the cities and towns of the State.

On Friday the bill passed to its third reading in the Senate. Senator Hailey has presented an amendment, however, intended to conserve the public interest, and the amendment comes before the Senate on Wednesday. This, if adopted, will compel the gas commissioners, in allowing increases of capital stock, to heed the recently enacted anti-stock watering, anti-merger and debt watering laws.

The proposed act, so strongly supported by the gas and electric lighting companies, would allow without limit an increase in capital stock by every gas and electric lighting company in the State upon simple say so of the Gas Commission.

Improvements and additions, instead of being made from earnings, even though many gas companies in the State, notably those in Fall River and Lynn, have been paying 10 per cent dividends, would be made by increases in the capital stock as the gas commissioners should without limitation see fit.

"Not since J. Edward Addicks came to Massachusetts and secured laws in the interests of the Bay State Gas Company," says Senator Hailey, "have the people of the State been confronted with such vicious legislation as that proposed in this new gas-electric capitalization bill. The bill removes every safeguard of over-capitalization. It takes from the Legislature the right to pass upon a matter most important to the people and vests this power in a State board far removed from the people. It lets down the bars for stock watering and practically repeals so far as gas and electric lighting companies are concerned, the stock watering laws of 1894."

FESTIVAL TO AID ST. MARY'S ASYLUM

May Party Brilliant Success With "Half Hour in Fairyland" a Big Feature.

The May festival in the Mechanics building yesterday afternoon in aid of St. Mary's Infant Asylum was attended by a large crowd, and all the booths were well patronized. There were thirty-two booths in the hall, all appropriately decorated, and during the afternoon dancing was enjoyed by the children.

Music was furnished by Boston College orchestra under leadership of James S. Fitzgerald. A pleasing programme was given during the afternoon and evening. "A Half Hour in Fairyland," arranged by Miss Mary O'Connell, was given, and the following young ladies took part:

Misses [illegible] O'Callaghan, fairy [illegible], Mary Walsh, Josephine [illegible], Mary [illegible], Mary Gray, Frances Fitz[illegible], Lillian Devine, Gertrude Campbell, [illegible], Margaret Desmond, [illegible], Margaret Fitzgerald, Bertha Lynch, [illegible] Josephine Goldsmith, [illegible] Hagerty, Isabelle Sullivan, Madeline Coges, Madeleine Mullins, Mildred F. Gales, [illegible], Adeline Cox, May Connors, Annie Mc[illegible] Catherine McFarland, [illegible]; Mary McFarland, Ruth Gill, Gertrude Goldsmith, Catherine Sullivan, Annie Stoddard, Mary [illegible], Lucy McCarthy, Annie [illegible], [illegible] Agnes T. Hagerty, color [illegible], Marion Clark, Anna Lynch, Mary [illegible], Susan McAuliffe and Gertrude [illegible] "[illegible] of the golden West."

The [illegible] dance was under the direction of Katharine Donovan. Miss [illegible], [illegible] Connors, Margaret [illegible], [illegible] O'Donnell, Anna Kiley and [illegible], the participants, were dressed in Wilhelmina costumes and wore wooden shoes.

The Gold Dust Twins, impersonated by Grace Jones and Marion Reardon did some fancy dancing in grotesque costume.

HOUDINI PUZZLES PRESS MEMBERS

Harry Houdini, handcuff king, succeeded in mystifying 200 or more members of the Boston Press Club last night. He went to the club early in the evening, previous to his nightly appearance at Keith's theatre, accompanied by Mr. Larsen, press representative of Keith's.

Because of the limited quarters Mr. Houdini was obliged to content himself with [illegible] and a needle swallowing [illegible]. His [illegible] in picking out specific cards [illegible] was marvelous. He shuffled cards with one hand, brought them seemingly from space or made them disappear [illegible] similar manner.

As a wind up Houdini placed an entire package of needles on his tongue and apparently swallowed them and then followed them with a long piece of silk. A few moments later he drew the silk from his mouth with the needles strung upon it at regular intervals.

After the entertainment there was an informal reception and the club members crowded [illegible] Mr. Houdini to shake his hand. At the suggestion of President [illegible] Boyd Porter a unanimous vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Houdini and to Keith's theatre.

LOVING CUP FOR RETIRING MANAGER

Frank Abbott, superintendent of the Boston [illegible], retired last evening to assume a [illegible] position at Keith's and Proctor's [illegible] and Twenty-fifth street Theatre, New York city. After the performance [illegible] afternoon Mr. Abbott was [illegible] a splendid loving cup by [illegible] and members of the Boston [illegible] company. Mr. Abbott will [illegible] by Herbert M. WILLIAMS PLEDGES 6 SLATES TO BRYAN

George Fred Williams is quoted in a dispatch from Washington, where he is now in conference with Bryan leaders, with having promised to Bryan for the Denver convention not only the thirty-two delegates from Massachusetts, but also the delegates from the other five New England States. George Fred had hard work in his efforts to see the three Democratic Congressmen. Peters was ill, O'Connell away and Keliher too busy to see even the care taker of the Bryan boom in New England.

BOYS LEARN SHOE MAKING AT SCHOOL

MEND THEIR OWN BOOTS

Varnum School Has the Only Shoemakers' Department in the Country.

Lowell, May 2.—Miss Rose Dowd, one of the prettiest and most popular school teachers in Lowell, [illegible] claims to be the champion woman cobbler in this State at least. She is the proud instructor of the class of boy cobblers at the Varnum grammar school here, the only public school in the United States which has a cobbling class in its manual training department.

Miss Dowd is not only a cobbler of marked ability as her own dainty feet [illegible] attest, but she is a dressmaker and a milliner of some ability. "I do all my own work [illegible] just because I like it.

"I really can't remember when I didn't try to mend shoes," she said to the Boston Sunday American reporter who saw her instructing her cobbling class.

"Cobblers must be born, not made, I guess. At any rate I have for years tinkered dilapidated shoes. I never learned the trade, just picked it up. It sort of came naturally to me. When I got Superintendent Whitcomb interested and secured his consent to [illegible] of the manual training of [illegible] I visited other institutions where [illegible] to get to perfect myself for the work.

Helps Poor Children.

"I try to make this cobbling class practical. It was real need that started me to think of the idea. Last Winter the teachers in the public schools were making special efforts to secure clothing for the hundreds of poor children who were actually unable to attend school just because they lacked the proper clothing.

"I happened to [illegible] the committee on distribution of clothing and I at once saw that one of the things the poor [illegible] most [illegible] of all was good, sound, warm shoes. Large quantities of shoes until [illegible] good to be thrown away were [illegible] for the poor.

"These shoes were hardly worth the expense of paying [illegible] their being mended by the regular cobblers, so I just thought of how I could get up a class of our boys here, teach them to cobble them and make the shoes fit to wear. This started the cobbling [illegible].

Superintendent Whitcomb encouraged me, and the boys [illegible] their warm hearts went [illegible] with a will. Some of them sawed [illegible] of tools, and they all liked the work. Mr. Whitcomb helped me to get everything we needed to make our workshop complete, and we started in.

"The result was that we not only mended shoes for all the poor children, but we were able to mend their parents' shoes, and some had plenty to assist in the work of charity.

Work Very Fascinating.

"I like the work. It is really fascinating to me, and then it does so much good, you know. I enjoy it every bit as much as the boys do. We have a whole lot of really good amateur cobblers here in this school. I have visited many manual training departments, but this is the first cobbling class I know of."

Miss Dowd is a handsome young woman. She is very pretty and very clever. She is busy all of the time, for she is an indefatigable charitable worker and is popular in society as well. She is a member of several clubs and of the Ladies' Society which works for St. John's Hospital.

Superintendent Whitcomb of the Lowell public schools is so well pleased with the work of the Varnum cobbling class that he has proposed to [illegible] shops room in the basement of the school for the work, and it is [illegible] probable that the work will be introduced in the grammar schools in Lowell.

The work done by the young workers [illegible] the boy cobblers is really [illegible]. It is substantial and while not so perfect as [illegible] turned out by expert shoe workers, [illegible] for the wear it gives [illegible] beyond [illegible] "worth while" stage.

HIBBARD CUTS OFF PUBLICITY BUREAU

Thomas F. Anderson, manager for the late lamented municipal publicity bureau abolished yesterday by order of Mayor George A. Hibbard on the ground of economy, gave out a statement late in the day in which he said the end of the bureau as a municipal institution was inevitable for political and other reasons; that the reorganized Merchants' Association will soon take up the work, and that no one [illegible] politicians have criticized the work of the bureau, so far.

Speaking of the prospect of the Merchants' Association taking up the work, Mr. Anderson said:

"Since the plans for the new business organization took definite shape, a number of the influential merchants interested in the movement have expressed themselves as strongly in favor of having the publicity bureau merged with that body, and this proposition has already been officially made to the organization."

COMEDIAN SURE HE CAN PICK WINNERS

He's Such a "Fan" That Mrs. Carle Has to "Root" Too to Keep Peace in Family.

HAS DOPE SHEET POSTED

Here, you baseball fans!

Take a peek at "Carle's Best Bets" and see how you like 'em.

Richard Carle, playwright, producer, comedian and baseball fan, has hopefully doped out his baseball list for 1908. He has lost on it against Charlie Marks, his manager, for the past five years. But Carle isn't discouraged. For the original Little Bright-Eyes on the "Hope springs eternal, etc.," proposition is Richard Carle, P. P. C & B. B. F.

Carle is dippy on baseball. He is always studying averages and percentages. It has ever been his pet "ambish" to decorate the baseball diamond and make double plays at that critical time when the other team had one to tie and two to win, one man out and the bases full and the heaviest batter had just cracked out a hot one and Dick Carle, the Peerless Player from Playerville was there with the goods and, with that marvelous agility which is the envy of his friends and the despair of his rivals, he lined the ball to second base and pulled off a double play while the circumambient atmosphere was rent with the delerious howls of "Carle, Hurrah for Carle" and the impetuous mob broke through all barriers and fourteen cops and bore the blushing hero in triumph from the field.

But It Is Not to Be. No, No.

It should read something like that in the morning papers if Carle could realize his fondest dream, but such is not to be and he has to be content with being simply Richard Carle, P. P. C. & B. B. F.

As the next best thing to being a Diamond Daisy, Carle is a fan. He has the fan habit so bad that he makes out a dope-sheet every Spring on how the teams will finish at the end of the season and then goes around looking for real money. He generally finds it.

He frames up his list, calls in "Carle's Best Bets" and posts it up in whatever theatre he is playing. Just now the list is posted up in the Colonial Theatre, where Carle and his company are bleating in "Mary's Lamb."

Carle bets with members of his company only and is very fierce about the settlement when he wins. For the last five seasons, when he has lost to Marks there has been a large atmosphere of gloom about the Carle presence at the end of the season.

Sure Thing This Time.

But Richard is himself again, now, and says that his 1908 dope is so sure that it's a shame for him to take the money.

Carle goes to ball games as often as he can and drags Mrs. Carle along, too. Sometimes he takes members of the company and once in a while invites the whole crowd. A sample of this was last week when he chartered a "rubberneck" wagon and took the "Mary's Lamb" Company to see the Doves trim the Giants.

Most of his company are New York rooters, but they didn't have anything on Carle at this game. Carle is for Boston of course, being a native of Somerville. He hasn't picked Boston for winners in either league this year, but he does like to see the Hub team climb.

BRIDESMAID TAKEN ILL IN RELIEF WORK

Marian Venn Sick With Scarlet Fever, Church Wedding Has to Be Postoned.

Because Marian Venn, a sister of the bride-to-be, is seriously ill of scarlet fever in the isolation hospital at Malden, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Venn of Clement street in that city, have reluctantly recalled invitations to what was to have been the church wedding and reception of their older daughter, L. Mabelle, and Mr. G. Warren Butler, and the ceremony will be performed at home.

Marian Venn was to have been her sister's maid of honor on Wednesday next at the First Baptist Church. Always interested in charity, she recently gave her time to the Chelsea relief work, in the rooms of the Associated Charities, and, it is believed, contracted scarlet fever in handling vast quantities of clothing.

"I could not be wedded in public," her devoted sister said last night, "with fuss and feathers, music and congratulations, flowers and crowds, while Marian lies ill there in the hospital. Mr. Butler fully agrees with me and we shall arrange to receive our friends later."

The devotion of the Venn girls to each other has always been the admiration of the family friends. Mabelle, the bride-to-be, was for many years clerk to the Superintendent of Schools. Mr. Butler is employed by a firm of bankers in Boston.

FITZPATRICK URGES HOME RULE CAUSE

in the solidity of the Empire that the Irish people should have what every self-governing colony has—the power of managing their own affairs.'

Plea From Australia.

"This remarkable pronouncement in favor of local self government for Ireland by the head of the British government is in keeping with the resolution of the Commonwealth Parliament of Australia, in their petition to the King: 'The sad history of Ireland since the act of union shows that no British Parliament can understand or effectively deal with the economic and social conditions of that country. Enjoying as we do the blessings of home rule, we would humbly express the hope that a just measure of home rule may be granted to the people of Ireland.'

"The resolutions of the Australian Parliament and the active co-operation of the Australian people in generously aiding Ireland's cause are substantial evidences that Ireland's grievances are felt in that far-off land. Equally so in Canada. The Canadian Parliament, like that of Australia, has placed itself on record in favor of Home Rule for Ireland. And the Canadian people have been most generous in their aid.

Spirit of Fair Play.

"What shall I say of the manner in which Ireland's grievances are felt here in the United States? Millions of the Irish race in this country have felt the sting of these grievances, have protested against them, and will continue to protest against the muntil the wrong will be righted. Blood is not so thin, nor memory so faithless as to be passive under the recital of such wrongs as Ireland has endured and continues to endure.

"Thanks to the spirit of justice and fair play in this glorious land of ours, the protest against a continuance of injustice to Ireland comes from others than those of the Irish race. No man is better fitted to sound this protest than the free American, whose forefathers fought and died for the glorious privilege of representative government. To the credit of the average American be it said that he is fearless in the expression of his sympathy with Ireland's aims."

Pittsburg, Pa., May 2.—R. A. Just how much money was recovered the official refused to say. Despite reports to the contrary, the detectives have found no clew that would lead to the identity of the robbers.

MRS. ALFRED GWYNNE SNUBS VANDERBILTS AT $5,000 BALL

None of Husband's Relatives Invited to Entertainment in Honor of Niece, Pauline French.

Newport, R. I., May 2.—Mrs. Alfred G Vanderbilt has cut loose from all social affiliation with the family of the man from whom she expects to be freed by divorce this coming week.

Though she had been on friendly terms, apparently, with her mother-in-law, Mrs. Cornelius, Sr., the last ties between them were sundered when the young woman spurned the mother's pleas for a reconciliation with Alfred and the withdrawal of her divorce suit.

In the invitations Mrs. Vanderbilt issued for the $5,000 dinner and ball she gave to-night at Harbour View Villa in honor of her niece, Pauline Leroy French, who is to be married Tuesday, none of the Vanderbilts were favored, and the social set see in Mrs. Vanderbilt's action a deliberate snub to the millionaire family of the man she still calls her husband.

War of Vanderbilt Women.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., has won many laurels as a leader of the New York Four Hundred and in the Newport Summer colony, even outshining her mother-in-law as a social light during the long years of rivalry between them. But Elsie French Vanderbilt, as though cast down by her domestic troubles, which she long nursed in the secrecy of her boudoir, has never been a conspicuous figure in society.

Now, like the rosebud bursting forth in the June sunlight after the Winter's chill the young woman, already practically released from matrimonial ties that proved unhappy, has emerged from her comparative seclusion and has appeared on the social horizon as a leading figure in the life of both Newport and New York.

She is making elaborate plans for her residence at this fashionable watering place, and scores of workmen are hurrying preparations for her occupancy of her "farm" out on the island. The Summer colonists predict a bitter three-cornered society warfare for honors between Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Sr., the wife of young Cornelius and Elsie French Vanderbilt.

To-night saw the first of the elaborate entertainments given by the latter. Miss French, her niece, entertained [illegible] of bridesmaids, most of whom [illegible] either yesterday or early to-day. Harbour View villa presented a scene of splendor, lighted throughout with clusters of electric bulbs in varied colors and with hundreds of gorgeous Japanese lanterns. [illegible] fifty invitations were issued to the Newport colonists.

First Big Wedding of Year.

The bridesmaids included: Edith Kane of Tuxedo Park, maid of honor at Tuesday's nuptials; Irene Sherman of Newport, Caroline Grosvenor of Newport, Gladys Pell, Margaret and Lisa Catting of New York.

Mrs. Vanderbilt has the arrangements for the wedding well under way. Miss French will espouse Samuel James Wagstaff, Harvard, '02. The ceremony will be solemnized by the Rev. Charles F. Beattie in the Zabriskie Memorial Church Tuesday at 3 30 o'clock, and will be one of the chief social events of the year, as well as the first wedding of the Summer season.

The decree divorcing the Alfred G. Vanderbilts is daily expected. The case was heard by Justice McClure in New York.

Following the decree of the court and the wedding of her niece, Mrs. Vanderbilt, who arrived only last Monday with her son, William Henry, will sail for England, to spend the Summer with her mother, Mrs. Frances Ormond French, and her sister, Lady Cheylesmore.

To Join Noted Farm Colony.

In the Autumn she returns to Newport to take posession of a "farm" on which she will make her permanent residence and which will be out "on the island," in the aristocratic farming zone where now resides the Reggie Vanderbilts, the Willie Mayers, the Rockford Normans, the Reginald Normans and the Henry A. C. Taylors. This property is now being improved and modernized.

Mrs. Vanderbilt has just bought three new turnouts for use at Newport, one of which is a handsome open omnibus of natural wood, with horses and harnesses of a color to match.

Mrs. Vanderbilt's head coachman recently gave testimony in her behalf before the divorce hearing in New York. Mrs. V[illegible], who is in mourning for her [illegible] Mrs. Frye, appears much paler and [illegible] than usual.

BURY DR. DIX NEAR GRAVES OF PARENTS

New York, May 2.—In the churchyard cemetery of old Trinity, which he had served so long as rector, the body of Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix was buried to-day in the lot with his father and mother.

Throughout the burial services as well as the ceremonies in the church immediately preceding, the bells in the steeple that looks out over Wall street tolled [illegible].

In every Trinity chapel the bells were also tolled during the time of the burial.

Owing to the illness of Bishop Potter, which prevented his attendance, the Right Rev. D. H. Greer, coadjutor bishop of New York, conducted the funeral services. He was assisted by the Rev. W. T. Manning, assistant rector of Trinity, who is expected to succeed Dr. Dix.

The capacity of the church was tested to the limit to accommodate the crowd. Throughout the night the body had laid in State in the chancel, and it was only removed to be conveyed to the grave.

"DRY" SABBATH IN 3 LARGE CITIES

Police Zealously on Watch in Drought Belt to Bar Liquor Selling.

Three important cities in the State have today their first Sabbath under no license, [illegible] a greater or less period of "wetness." They are Worcester, Lynn and Haverhill. Of the three, Worcester is receiving the most attention on account of its size and the fact that it has been in the wet column for sixteen years.

The first Saturday night in Lynn under the new no-license law passed with no arrests for drunkenness. Patrolmen Callahan and Brazell overhauled a team, however, with two men who were about to deliver a case of beer at a Polish residence on River street.

These men were Charles Coutts and John Shuman, and, when they saw the officers coming, they whipped up the horse and tried to escape.

The arrest was made about 10 p. m. and the men were taken to the station house and locked up. The Poles wanted the beer to celebrate a wedding to-morrow. This is the first instance of the enforcement of the new no license law.

Despatches from Worcester last night said that practically every clergyman in the city who had announced any Sunday sermon topic would speak on the no license situation. Some of these sermons are:

Rev. O. L. Mallory of Dewey Street Baptist—"Is the Rum Power Gone?"

Rev. Frank Hare of Adams Street Baptist—"The Church and the No License Year in Worcester."

Rev. Frederick A. Gould, D. D. of Grace Methodist—"The Saloon in Cartoon."

Such are sample sermons which Worcester pulpits will offer today in dealing with one of the pertinent topics of the day. Some of the preachers will extoll the blessings of having the saloons closed. Others will carry warning that the no license law must be strictly enforced. In every church, the fact will be emphasized that the temperance people have won a tremendous victory and mean to hold it.

Arrests Lessen in Worcester.

The police record for the first two days of "dry" Worcester shows less drunkenness. Only two arrests for intoxication were made yesterday, against ten for the same offense on the corresponding day of last year when the city was license. Today not a single arrest was made for intoxication.

Police Chief David A. Matthews of Worcester has detailed Lieutenant George H. Hill and eight patrolmen to enforce the no-license laws. The liquor squad became active at the start. Yesterday it raided the place of Mrs. Florence J. Moynahan at No. 10 Franklin street. The officers say they seized sixty-two quarts of whiskey. The raid was made after Patrolman William McDowell of the liquor squad had gone into the place disguised in overalls and had, so he says, bought a drink.

The squad also descended on the place of Mrs. Bridget Daly at No. 116 Mechanic street where was found, it is alleged, three cases of stuff that tasted like ale, though it was labelled something else. The police bit on this place "on suspicion," as Fra Fibertus of East Aurora has it. Chief Matthews says "We will show no mercy."

Sell "One Per Cent."

At the famous cafe of Julius Zaeder on Mechanic street, Worcester, "one percent" is being drawn over the bar. "One per cent" is the legal preparation put out by Bowler Brothers and the Worcester Brewing Corporation. Zaeder opened his restaurant and bar as usual yesterday, only "one percent," apollinaris and ginger-ale are the liquid limit now. The Worcester drug stores threaten to add "one percent" to their soda stock to hold their summer trade away from the indefatigable Julius.

One may buy liquor, by "signing the book" of course, at any of the Worcester drug stores granted a sixth-class druggists' license. The forty-eight disappointed applicants out of the fifty who sought the sixth-class privileges are now red hot against the license board and are howling "partiality."

In Haverhill, the "dry" period has begun quietly, with Mayor Wood and the police looking actively for any illegal keeping or selling.

CHELSEA UNEMPLOYED FAST SECURING WORK

Relief Work Nearly at End and Supplies Still Remain at Headquarters.

On this the third Sunday since the devastating Chelsea fire, the stricken city finds itself merging from the pressure of relief work and entering more and more at the thousand and one details of reconstruction. No more clothing or supplies of any kind are wanted at the big relief station at Keany square.

The Chelsea relief stations closed last night. No more free meals will be served at Lincoln Hall, and the only food issued will be the rations for home consumption given at the high school for people properly identified as needy.

Work For Unemployed.

Miss Katharine Loring, superintendent of the Keany Square relief station, requests that the public be notified that no more bedding or clothing is needed at any of the relief stations. They are over-supplied now. For the first time since the fire headquarters of the Massachusetts committee, the Rehabilitation committee and the Special Needs committee will be closed for today, giving those in charge a much needed rest.

Arrangements have been made by the relief committee to provide for the unemployed of Chelsea. The State Gypsy Moth commission will take on seventy-five men at Montserrat station in Beverly. President Tuttle of the Boston & Maine will have a special car on the train leaving Boston at 7 on to-morrow morning, and [illegible] at 7.[illegible] Kennedy of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company will give work to 100 [illegible] to be laid [illegible] to East Boston. The Boston Elevated will take on twenty [illegible] unemployed Tuesday at the Medford Fellsway track work.

The latest statement from Lee, Higginson & Co. puts the Chelsea relief fund at $319,490.59. In connection with the latest statement of money raised by the State Committee comes a statement [illegible] committee that about one half the money raised so far has been expended. So far 1,881 families, representing about 9,000 people, have been supplied with food and goods. Practically all the larger needs of the thousands burned out still remain.

Give Benefits.

Benefit enterprises continue. The Dorothy Dix Hall Association will put on the new operetta, "The May Queen," by Miss Abbie Farwell Brown in Jordan Hall, [illegible] evening, May 14.

Charles [illegible] will lecture on Newfoundland and its Scenery in the Meridian Street Temple, East Boston, to-night, under the auspices of the Lyman School teachers.

The young people of St. Mary's parish, North End, will give a minstrel show and operetta to-morrow night in the parochial school hall, No. 8 Cooper street.

A riding exhibition and gymkhana games took place at the Park Riding School last night for Chelsea's benefit.

$250,000 HUB LOSS BY M'INTYRE CRASH

J. M. Hudson, Resident Partner, Sank $100,000 in Sensational Failure.

Boston customers of the suspended brokerage firm of T. A. McIntyre & Co. of New York were "stung" to the amount of a quarter of a million dollars, according to the statements of men influential in State street.

Even James M. Hudson, resident partner of the concern at No. 1a Congress street, admitted to a reporter for the Boston American last night that Boston and New England clients of the house would lose fully $100,000 by the failure, which astonished Wall Street.

The seven partners whom Mr. McIntyre took into the firm and into his confidence, [illegible] meanwhile depleting their fortunes, are the heaviest losers by the suspension. Mr. Hudson is the largest Boston creditor. He is the son of a wealthy Syracuse business man, and his family backed him to the extent of nearly $100,000.

"Yes, it is true," said Mr. Hudson to the Sunday American last night, "that I am a large loser. I had about $70,000 in the firm, mostly in notes given by my mother, who lives in Syracuse."

Will Continue in Business.

Mr. Hudson is said by his friends to have invested his own funds, as well as those of his relatives, in the business. He stated late last night that he was in no way discouraged by the failure, and that he would recoup his losses by embarking in business anew. The New York house of C. & E. Randolph has arranged to take over the offices conducted by the McIntyre firm outside the street, including those in the Waldorf Hotel, in Syracuse and Boston. Mr. Hudson will open the latter of fice at No. 1a Congress street on Tuesday, as [illegible].

The suspension of T. A. McIntyre's firm is of particular interest to Bostonians because of the fact that his step-daughter, formerly Mrs. Herbert Barnum Seeley, married Arnold Lawson, son of Thomas W. Lawson. Mrs. Lawson is now seeking the recovery of jewels bequeathed to her by her late mother, Mrs. Mitchell McIntyre, worth over $10,000. It is hinted that there are other complications in the settlement of her estate, which was executed by the New York broker.

A fact hitherto undisclosed in connection with McIntyre's affairs is that Daniel Sully, the exploded "Cotton King," is a large creditor of the firm. A member of the firm of Towle & Fitzgerald said last night that Sully owed McIntyre's concern probably $50,000. The failed brokerage house made a specialty of dealings in cotton and grain, and Sully in the days of his prime had large transactions with the house. Sully was ever a resourceful man, and has paid off the most of his indebtedness since his sensational failure several years ago, when he essayed to "corner" cotton.

Business Good Past Year.

The Boston office of T. A. McIntyre & Company had a large business here in the past year, the customers numbering some 3,000, it is stated. The local office was established three years ago, but only in the past twelve months has it prospered.

The only large brokerage house with which it had transactions in this city was that of Towle & Fitzgerald, of No. 18 Postoffice square, and a member of the firm says that the house was so well protected that its loss will be nothing.

McIntyre is blamed by all the brokers in Wall street and State street for the failure. Those in position to know conditions say that he was absolute dictator in the partnership and that he inveigled men into signing one year agreements of partnership, they placing large sums in the business in which they had practically no say. Mr. Hudson, of the Boston office admits this.

A dispatch to the Sunday American from New York quotes Maurice Leon, counsel for McIntyre, as saying:

"Mr. McIntyre is sure his friends will not believe unjustly derogatory statements regarding his part in the management of his firm.

"He asks the public to suspend judgment until he gathers strength enough in a few days to present his side to the receiver.

"It is particularly painful to him to realize that associates who have grown up under him and owe him a great deal have spoken of him in the way they have."

AERONAUTS PLAN TO AID INVENTORS

Notable Gathering at Aero Club's First Annual Dinner Last Evening.

The first annual dinner of the Aero Club of New England was held last evening at the Boston City Club on Beacon street with about sixty members present. Prof. A. Lawrence Rotch, President of the club was toastmaster. Among those present were Henry H. Cummings of this city, Prof. W. H. Pickering of Harvard, William P. Harris, Henry Howard, H. H. Clayton of the Blue Hill Observatory, Emil Camus, S. P. Ferguson of Hyde Park, Charles E. Hellier, Prof. John E. Wolf of Harvard, Samuel Barbar, J. H. Means and Secretary J. H. Shrigley.

Mr. Means said in part:

"The policy of the club should be along scientific lines. The men of inventive genius are mostly found in Massachusetts and adjacent New England States. The club's policy should be to get in touch with these men of ability to encourage them not only by moral but financial support to perfect ideas and mechanical devices which otherwise would not be known except for such help."

FIRE LOSS

Piano Bargains

IT'S AN ILL WIND THAT BLOWS NO GOOD

Ready cash is what the losers want now—and they want it quick, and if you have any of it you can get a wonderful bargain.

A slight blistering of the cases by the heat is quickly remedied—a thorough scraping and rubbing down and revarnishing in our repair dept. makes the piano as good as new—a thorough inspection of all the parts and then our expert tuner completes the job—then the beautiful piano is sent to our sacrifice floor and the economical buyer gets a fine instrument for almost nothing. All makes have been coming in—the best pianos in the world—and are sacrificed at once.

FIRE

No commission or expense will be charged by us on the sale of pianos coming in from the fire.

$5 Down—$1 a Week

The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

'PEACEMAKER' NEARLY READY TO FLY OVER HUB

Struggling Inventors Battled Against Great Odds, Now About to Realize Life Dreams.

Under the glimmering rays of arc lamps and with the adjacent neighborhood buried in profound slumber, Loveland M. Francis and Edward W. McGregor worked heroically all last night at the Huntington avenue baseball grounds, pumping twelve thousand feet of gas into the mammoth gas bag of their giant airship, "Peacemaker," which is nearly completed and will be in [illegible] another day or two for a flight over Boston.

The P[illegible] from that [illegible] have [illegible] cause [illegible] kind [illegible] most [illegible] Its equipment [illegible] and original. It will start [illegible] Boston.

Realize Life Dreams.

The young inventors had hoped to have their creation in readiness for a private trial trip skyward to-day, but delays with a few minor details prevented this and they do not expect now that it will be ready [illegible]. With it [illegible] near at hand, the life dreams of Mr. McGregor and his astute partner, Mr. Francis, are nearly realized.

There is a touch of genuine human interest in the struggle these two men have experienced [illegible] their plans to fulfillment. Mr. McGregor, the [illegible] of the two, came [illegible] from Cleveland. He is [illegible] at the "L" power station on Albany street. He is an experienced machinist. His work begins at midnight and ends at eight. His days he gives to the airship.

Mr. Francis came from Watertown, N. Y. He has built airships before. They have been successful, too, but in no manner, he says, equal to the present one. His previous creations having been mostly for experimental purposes, Francis—with McGregor's aid—this time set out to show the world what the right kind of an airship really might be able to do.

It was when Francis was in a hospital in the west, suffering from a broken collar bone, the result of a tumble from an airship, that the "Peacemaker" was originated. In the same hospital Francis and his partner first met. McGregor was a visitor at the institution. Both had often dreamed about a modern airship. Each had ideas.

In Struggle for Funds.

By a strange coincidence they became acquainted. Their conversation drifted to airships and they exchanged their ideas. But plans without capital, both said, amounted to little. And each man being a workingman, with a family to support, it was an easy matter for them to count their cash. It was perseverance and pluck that put them on the right track after years of waiting.

It required months for the two young men to perfect the details of the "Peacemaker," and then, certain they would be able to revolutionize the airship standards of to-day by their improvements and invention, they set to work. All the money they had to start with was what they had saved from their earnings. They stinted themselves of clothing. They gave up all pleasure. They worked. McGregor finishing his trick at the power station at 8 A. M. each day hustled out to the Huntington avenue baseball grounds and [illegible] o'clock found him busy nailing and assembling the different parts of the bag [illegible] and stitching together the hundreds of yards of fine cured cambric that makes up the gas bag.

Occasionally he was compelled by sheer exhaustion to give up and rest a few hours. Francis, while McGregor was at the ball grounds, labored quite as persistently and with similar determination at his workshop on the modern sixteen horse power ninety pound engine.

To Make War Impossible.

Francis built the engine himself. Every bolt and screw is the work of his own [illegible]. He asked no advice or assistance.

The result of this dogged determination of the two young men is now in concrete form. The "Peacemaker" is nearly ready for its maiden flight. The hopes and ambition of the young inventors are about to be fulfilled. Their invention will make war so terrible as to be impossible, they say. Hence the name of the craft.

In [illegible] respects will the "Peacemaker" differ from airships of previous construction that the friends of the young inventors, particularly those who know a thing or two about airships construction, are confident the machine will do all that is claimed for it.

In the first place the "Peacemaker" will be equipped with universal joints at each end of the cigar-shaped craft. This will permit its course to be reversed in a twinkling while it is ascending at a rate of sixteen miles an hour. It will go upward or downward, or will glide sideways at the turn of the operator's steering gear.

It will run in the air or on the ground. It will even run in water. Therefore, should the "Peacemaker" drop over water, all the operator will have to do will be to turn on his water propellers, and the big [illegible] will glide through the water like a [illegible].

Three Day's Gas Supply.

This week "Peacemaker" will make a voyage over Boston just to show the public what she is capable of doing.

Francis will descend probably upon the Common, then go skyward again. He will go from one end of Boston to the other and then cross wise, touching the suburban ends of the city.

The "Peacemaker" is seventy feet long and eighteen and one-half inches in diameter. It will carry 475 pounds, including the operator. One supply of gas, with the machine in constant use, will last three days. Completed and standing in mid air, the machine will represent about $3,000.

19 DOUKHOBORS SENT TO CANADIAN PRISON

Fort William, Ont., May 2.—Nineteen Doukhobors, nine women and ten men, have been sentenced to six months in the Central prison at Toronto for holding a parade, unclad, here. Clothed in blankets, the Doukhobors were escorted in closed carriages to the county jail at Port Arthur, awaiting shipment to Toronto. There are fifty-three Doukhobors remaining in a house at Fort William, and they have been warned that they will meet the same fate if they persist in refusing to wear clothing.

HUSH NOISY FIRE BELL NEAR CHURCH

The old bell on the house of engine 17, Meeting House Hill, Dorchester, which for many years has sounded fire alarms, is silenced, and while the parishioners of the First Parish Church are pleased because their services are no longer interrupted by the pealing of the bell, local residents cannot get accustomed to the change and want the big bell to ring again.

The ringing of the bell was stopped through the influence of Rev. Roger Forbes, pastor of the First Parish Church. The clergyman recently accepted a call to this pulpit and could not get accustomed to having some solemn part of his service interrupted by the clanging of the bell on the engine house, directly adjoining the church property.

Not until the bell had been silent for several days and the residents were beginning to comment on the dearth of fires was it realized that under the new order of things a tapper in the houses in the vicinity would be necessary to get fire alarms at first hand.

There are many of the so-called "buffs" or fire cranks residing in the vicinity. They like to attend fires and they like to know where alarms come from, and they say the silencing of the bell is unnecessary and greatly inconveniences them. They propose to urge upon Fire Commissioner Parker the necessity of having it ring forth again.

WAVES REVOLVER IN CROWDED TROLLEY

Waving a thirty-eight calibre revolver and wildly yelling, John L. Clark, seventeen years, late last night created excitement on a Union Square, Somerville car. Young Clark got on the car at the Sullivan square station. Suddenly he jumped out of his seat and backing towards the door, pointed the revolver at each of the passengers, most of whom were women, creating consternation among them. At Union square Officer Sherry was summoned and placed Clark under arrest.

When searched at the station house it was found that the revolver was empty. He was booked on the charge of disturbing the peace.

SOCIALISTS IN MAY DAY CELEBRATION

FLAYS ABUSE OF WORKERS

Condemning capital, capitalists, President Theodore Roosevelt, men who gave pensions and divided their profits with their employes and men who tried to defeat the ends and aims of Socialism, Franklin H. Wentworth, the Socialist author and lecturer, in the course of his address on "Sign Land," enthused his audience last night at the May Day celebration of the Socialists of Greater Boston in Faneuil Hall.

Two thousand Socialists, nearly half of them women, filled the historic old hall and cheered Wentworth and the other speakers of the evening as they told off point after point of their favorite doctrines. Entire good order prevailed and there was nothing for the squad of blue coated policemen, who had been detailed to insure order, to do.

Among Wentworth's striking phrases and those which caught the ears of his hearers most readily were the following:

Wage Workers Forward.

"There is no power on earth that can prevent the working class from getting anything, when the working class knows what it wants."

"A working class government would make the old age of every person secure."

"The brutal actions of the New York police in the Union square excitement has been condemned by fair-minded persons in all parts of the country. I am glad that there is not a ruffian on the Boston police force."

Denounces Rich Idlers.

Rich idlers and spendthrifts were flayed in sensational terms. He said that there were enough children in the world and that it was quality, not quantity that should be sought by the people of to-day.

Mrs. Marion Craig Wentworth, his wife, read the "March of the Workers," a socialistic poem. John Zubas, of the Lithuanian Workingmen's Society and John Schepte of the Lettish Social Democratic Party addressed the meeting in their respective tongues. Master William M. Koulkow recited two poems, written by Socialists, and music was furnished by the German Workingmen's Singing Society of Roxbury, The German Workingmen's Association and the Finnish Socialist Band of Quincy.

FIND 6-INCH WOUND IN DEAD MAN'S HEAD

Medical Examiner McDonald is to perform an autopsy on the body of Richard Flannigan, who died in the City Hospital after being removed from a cell at East Dedham street police station yesterday, to determine the exact cause of death. A wound six inches long in the back of Flannigan's head needs investigation, in the mind of the medical examiner.

Flannigan lived at No. 180 Shawmut avenue. He was arrested Friday night and taken to the police station on a charge of drunkenness. At five o'clock yesterday morning he was found groaning in his cell, and was removed to the hospital on order of Dr. Mulden. He died in the afternoon. Death was first said to be due to heart failure, but the examination made by the medical examiner disclosed the wound in the head.

STRANGE POISONING OF FAMED BEAUTY BAFFLING TO DOCTORS.

"MORPHINE," DOCTOR SAID

SECRET ROMANCE HINTED

Mysterious Telephone Call and Special Delivery Letter Figure in Case.

THE mystery surrounding the death of Miss Martha Soul, one of the most beautiful girls in Boston, hourly deepens.

Dr. William B. Cross, the family physician, who was called to attend her when she was found dying early yesterday morning by her parents in their home at No. 315 West Third street, South Boston, diagnosed her sufferings to be probably morphine poisoning.

Medical Examiner William G. MacDonald, after performing an autopsy, still is undecided as to the exact cause of her death, and even is in doubt that she took a drug with suicidal intent.

"Worth Investigating."

Nothing has been established which shows a motive for self destruction.

It appears that Dr. Cross had ample reason for remarking when he left the Soul home to a Boston Sunday American reporter, "It is a case worth investigating!"

When Medical Examiner MacDonald was asked last evening to state whether or not the girl, whose charm was so great that a year ago she was awarded the palm in a beauty contest, was a suicide, he replied:

"I do not yet know whether Miss Soul's death was due to suicide or not. I have performed an [illegible] on her body, but have not concluded my investigations in connection with the autopsy. Therefore, I cannot [illegible] official report as to the exact [illegible].

"Chemical tests [illegible] I have made do not show that death was due to morphine poisoning. I have not yet been able to determine [illegible] the pills that were found [illegible], under her pillow and scattered [illegible]. I have tried practically every [illegible] test and they do not answer to the tests.

Find Strange Pills

I performed the autopsy on her body this afternoon in the City Hospital morgue. I shall make an analysis of the pills to determine what they are composed of. I cannot say now whether or not the pills caused her death."

Another statement made by Medical Examiner MacDonald stated that her character was beyond reproach. He added:

"I am positively at a loss to know what cause the young woman could have for committing suicide. I have examined all her effects and found nothing that would throw any light whatever on the case and we, apparently, are as far away as ever from discovering a cause for her wishing to die."

It was thought by some of her friends and some who were concerned in investigating the case that a sweetheart's quarrel or some disappointment of the heart might have led her to seek in the grave a [illegible] that had passed from her in life. Facts that led to this conclusion were a call to a telephone in a drug store near her home on Sunday evening last, and her despondency after an interview over the wire with, it was presumed, a young man.

Seemed Depressed.

It is said that she refused to tell her mother what depressed her and was sad for several days. But before the day of death she was light at heart, if her manner had meaning, and took enough interest in life to buy a new dress, and to visit a department store where she had formerly worked and to chat gaily with friends.

It was known that late last Thursday she received a special delivery letter, and its contents, it was surmised, might have had a strong influence in determining her fate. But that is all conjecture. Her parents and others knew of this letter, but nothing regarding its purport have been made public.

The story of her last hours shed no light on the question.

She was cheerful at supper on Friday night, and after meal told her mother she was going out for a few minutes. It is said that she went to a drug store and had a long talk over the telephone. Then she went to another drug store.

Those who are investigating the case would like to know where she bought the mysterious tablets which were supposed to be morphine, but which have baffled Medical Examiner MacDonald.

Visited Drug Store.

Miss Soul was the girl who called at the drug store of Henry C. Bispham at No. 472 Broadway, Friday evening and asked for something [illegible] refused to sell her.

Mr. Bispham, who is one of the best known and most highly esteemed business men in South Boston, said:

"Miss Soul came into my store about 8:15 o'clock Friday evening and asked me to sell her fifteen cents worth of [illegible]. [illegible] and said 'No, little girl, if you start to take that stuff you['ll] go to [illegible]' [illegible] said 'Oh well, that wouldn't make much difference.' She insisted that she wanted the stuff for her mother. But I told her there was a law which forbids us to sell poison, and she didn't get it from me."

Engagement Denied.

It was stated yesterday that Miss Soul's engagement to Conrad Ralph Smith, a young traveling salesman who lives with his parents at No. 25 Virginia street, Dorchester, had been announced a short time ago, but Bryant G. Smith, his father, said yesterday that he did not believe that his son was affianced to the young woman.

Young Mr. Smith is in the employ of

'Evelyn Thaw' in Box at Races With Thomas Almost Causes Riot

Hundreds Crowd Around Grandstand, Deserting Horses to Watch Mysterious Figure

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, May 2.—The horses were long shots at the Jamaica race track to-day. The prohibitive favorite in the attraction stakes was one of the most prominent boxes in the grand stand. First entry in the box was E. R. Thomas, the former horseman, banker and millionaire. Second entry in the box was "Boots" Durnell. Third entry was "Bud" Hauser, the famous turfmen. Then the real [illegible] came. She was slight and pretty. Her dark hair was massed about a pale and soulful face. She was dressed modestly and girlishly in a black frock, and [illegible] [illegible] her eyes [illegible] was set off by a black sailor bow. Her head was crowned by a great black mushroom hat set off only with a white and black [illegible] ed [illegible].

Quicker than the word can be [illegible] from [illegible] to the betting ring that a favorite is gone, the wireless [illegible] [illegible] the news that Evelyn Thaw was in a box in the grand stand with E. R. Thomas.

Every glass among the thousand pairs was turned on the box. Men and women left the grandstand to parade for [illegible] in front [illegible] a glimpse of the [illegible] figure of the Thaw trial. Bookmakers [illegible] the betting [illegible] closed and the fence separating the [illegible] [illegible] men and women with glasses. Then [illegible] [illegible] that Mr. Thomas [illegible] [illegible] was Lodan Lorraine [illegible] [illegible] Mrs. Thaw declared was [illegible] double and who had been taken for her [illegible] several occasions. The excitement continued until after the last race of the day. It was positively proven by those who know Mrs. Thaw personally that the young woman was not Mrs. Thaw and others who should know declared positively that it was Mrs. Loraine. Many hundreds left the racetrack still unconvinced, however.

Jacob Deceitful, Too Smooth and Clever, Says Rabbi Fleischer

Has Far Greater Admiration for Esau, He Declares in Address at Temple Israel.

"I am not proud of the patriarch, Jacob, later surnamed Israel, the father of the Israelites, from whom is traced the history of the Jews, for he was too clever, too canny, too shrewd and too smooth in every sense," declared Rabbi Charles Fleischer while discussing the story of Jacob and Esau in Temple Israel, Commonwealth avenue yesterday.

Rabbi Fleischer said in part:

"It is to Jacob that the Jews specifically trace their origin. While Abraham was the founder of the faith and may symbolize [illegible] faith, it is to Jacob that the Jews look as their father. The stories of Jacob's early life are anything but edifying. Jacob in my mind, is the symbol of deceit. Jacob was gradually improved by suffering, but never was he blessed with an attractive personality that the father of [illegible] should have had.

"In the birthright story of Isaac [illegible] plays a very unpleasant part. I wonder that the early Israelitish writer, who [illegible] this story of Isaac's giving the birthright to Jacob, did not depict him in a better manner morally and spiritually. He is portrayed as the man who is always designing to get the better of his brother, Esau. Jacob is surely not a strong character. Of the two brothers, Jacob and Esau, Esau is surely the [illegible] or and if not the nobler, sure not the ignobler."

To-day Rabbi Fleischer will give an address at the regular Sunday morning services in the Temple at 11:15 o'clock.

All Because His Imperial Highness Is Careless While Smoking.

Corfu, May 2.—The Kaiser has abandoned the tip-tilted pattern of moustache he had to. A [illegible] old one burned off. So he made a [illegible] change. The Kaiser liked the new [illegible] than the old. The Kaiser is sticking to it to please her.

Wilhelm started the conflagration on his upper lip while lighting a cigarette. A dozen devoted attendants rushed to his aid.

But the damage was done. One end of the moustache was about a half an inch longer than the other. Court Barber Haby had to chop the long end down to match the short one. When both ends grew out long, [illegible] they don't stick up the way they used to.

MULLINS WITNESS STRANGELY LOST WHILE IN DORY FAR AT SEA.

FEARED TO HAVE PERISHED

POLICE WAITED HIS RETURN.

Wanted to Question Him to Learn Names of Her Friends and Acquaintances.

ABANDONED in the dense fog off Newfoundland and given up as lost, John McKillip, a fisherman from this port, might have been able to clear the seemingly impenetrable mystery that hangs over the murder of pretty Annie Mullins at Arlington had he returned.

McKillip was a playmate of Annie Mullins and knew her well as she grew into comely womanhood. His home was within a mile of that of the Mullins family. His father worked in a rope factory and John, during his younger days, was also employed in the same place.

Strangely Lost in Fog.

The fisherman was in Boston at the time of the Arlington crime, it is said, sailing from here four weeks ago yesterday on the schooner, Conqueror. McKillip discussed the Mullins case as he departed for the fishing grounds.

The strange feature of the case, and one that has caused much comment among his friends is that McKillip and a companion were lost in the fog and the schooner came back without them. Detectives, who have not yet abandoned hope of finding the perpetrator of the foul deed, watched for the return of the fisherman so that they might have a chance to question McKillip as a possible witness in the case. [illegible] elimination of Peter Dow [illegible] when the inquest term[illegible] [illegible] lay with another fruit [illegible] has caused investi[gation] [illegible] circumference of their [illegible] [bel]ieved that McKillip could [illegible] detectives a great deal of [illegible] as to any old acquaintance of [illegible] would have a reason for [illegible].

McKillip may have had facts within his possession [illegible] would have led to the dis[covery] [illegible] visitor to the Von [illegible] on the Wednesday be[fore] [illegible].

The Conqueror reached T wharf last Friday [illegible] was in command [illegible] McKillip and his companion. [illegible] by a reporter of the Boston Sunday American Captain Giffin said:

"I am pretty certain that McKillip and his dory mate are victims of the dense fog of last [illegible]. We were then about sixty miles [illegible] east of Newfoundland. It was in the forenoon when the fog settled over us so thickly that one could not see an object a foot in front of his face. Fog [illegible] were sounded to guide the men back to the schooner.

Fear Both Have Perished.

"The last couple to return reached the vessel about 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The men reported having run across McKillip and his companion but they seemed to [illegible] going in another direction.

"It is [illegible] in a fog like that for men to mistake the direction from which the sound of the fog horn comes. It is my opinion that McKillip and the other man in the dory were trying to get back and failed.

"I [talk]ed with McKillip on the way out about Annie Mullins. There was a good deal of conversation on the vessel about the case, because we sailed shortly after the crime was committed and the excitement was at its height in Boston as we [illegible]. McKillip [illegible] and others that [illegible] the Mullins family, had [illegible] a playmate of Annie and that he knew her [illegible]. But he declared he had not seen her since she was a girl.

"We made every effort to find the missing fisherman, but were unable to do so. It is possible that they might have drifted ashore, as they had a sail in the dory, but we are all afraid that the poor fellows are lost.

Prince De Sagan To Turn Protestant To Wed Mme. Gould

Said to Be Convinced That Consent of the Pope Can Never Be Secured.

Rome, May 2.—Satisfied that the Pope will never sanction an annulment of Mme. Goldu's marriage to Count Boni de Castellane, it is reported to-day that Prince de Sagan will turn Protestant to enable him to wed Mme. Gould by both civil and religious ceremonies.

Mme. Gould is determined to become the bride of De Sagan, and at the same time is not disposed to forfeit any share of her father's estate, notwithstanding the opposition of the present head of the family, George Gould.

Mme. Gould makes the suggestion that the prohibitory clause in her father's [will] cannot be construed to apply to [illegible] marriages the Gould children may [illegible] make, in other words that if it applied to her first marriage with Count Boni de Castellane it should not be made to apply to any succeeding marriage.

The income from Mme. Gould's fortune is considerably over $750,000. At present she is receiving less than $300,000. Practically two-thirds of the original income goes to pay De Castellane's debts and [illegible] for four years. She claims that she should have at least $250,000 each year, instead of less than $200,000.

GROVER CLEVELAND BETTER, SAYS WIFE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, May 2.—Mrs. Grover Cleveland left Lakewood, N. J., early to-day and went to her home in Princeton. When she arrived there the following message was sent by her to her friends, who have inquired as to the reported serious illness of the former President.

"All the reports printed in the last few days to the effect that changes for the worse had taken place in Mr. Cleveland's condition are absolutely without foundation in fact.

Mr. Cleveland is slowly but surely recovering from his recent attack of digestive trouble, and has suffered no check in his progress toward recovery. His friends and family are at a loss to understand how such rumors have originated."

Mrs. Cleveland stated she felt very deeply grieved over the circulation of the report that Mr. Cleveland has cancer of the stomach. This rumor, she insisted, was an absolute untruth.

JOHNSON MANAGERS INVADE WASHINGTON

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Washington, May 2.—Governor Johnson's campaign managers have engaged press agents in Washington and are preparing to inaugurate a more vigorous opposition to William Jennings Bryan.

Young Prize Beauty Victim In Strange Poison Mystery

'EXTRAVAGANT? ABSURD,' SAYS WIFE, IN TEARS

Mrs. Legg of Warwick and Worcester Amazed When Helpmeet "Posted" Her in Newspaper.

Warwick, R. I., May 2.—Making a brave attempt to control her emotion, but unable to keep tears from coming to her eyes, Mrs. Emma Duke Legg of this town and of Worcester, Mass., proceeded to a [illegible] why her husband John Francis Legg of Worcester had "posted" her in the papers, alleging that she had [illegible] home and that he would not pay bills contracted by her.

The advertisement was published last Tuesday. Mrs. Legg says the first she knew of it was when a friend brought it to her [illegible] the Legg [illegible] husband [illegible] resident [illegible] the son of [illegible] Worcester and [illegible] most prominent men in the Trinity Methodist church of the [illegible]. It was supposed here that Mrs. Legg was perfectly happy with her husband, [illegible] and her baby boy.

Here is the wife's statement of the [illegible]:

By Mrs. Emma Duke Legg.

I cannot undertsand it at all. So far as I knew there was not the slightest trouble between me and my husband. The action he has taken is a terrible surprise. I know nothing whatever about it until a friend of my father's showed him a paper containing the advertisement.

"It is true that I left home. I did so as I supposed with Mr. Legg's full knowledge and consent. I was in poor health. My husband agreed with me that a change might do me good. So I came here with baby last December and have been here ever since. It was not a separation and there was no trouble between us.

"It is also true that he has sent me [illegible] I have been away from [illegible] that he considered [illegible] allowance which released him from all further claims on my account. I used it to provide necessities for the baby and myself.

Denies Stories of Extravagance.

"As for my having run up a lot of bills at stores in Worcester and Providence that is most positively untrue. I never bought a dollar's worth of goods on credit in Providence. I [illegible] extravagant [illegible] Worcester. I bought [illegible] necessary or more convenient to do so. The idea of my husband complaining on this score is absurd.

"Will there be a divorce? I have no idea what his plans are. As for my own course of action I have not yet had time to consider that.

"This whole thing has come upon me like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky."

Mrs. Legg is the daughter of Charles Duke, a wealthy Warwick merchant and president of the [illegible] Savings Bank. Mr. Duke stands by his daughter, saying:

"It's all a mystery to me. I believe my daughter. When she came here for her health the arrangement was only temporary. There was no thought of a separation. I always supposed Legg to be a man of good sense. This action of his would [illegible] I was wrong in my judgment of him or that his mind has [illegible] undergone a sudden change."

Are Old Schoolmates.

Emma Duke and John Francis Legg were boy and girl playmates. They lived in neighboring villages. They attended school together. They went sailing along Narragansett Bay in the Summer seasons. When the marriage took place in Centreville seven years ago there was approval as hearty as the surprise is now great.

Miss Filley and her sister Nancy of the Vincent club being two of the most prominent girls in the younger sporting set. Miss Filley with her sister and mother sailed for Europe early last month to make ready for the ceremony.

FASHIONABLY MOULDS YOUR FIGURE

ROYAL WORCESTER ADJUSTO CORSET

PRICE $3

The ADJUSTO is equally adapted to medium or average figures. It is skillfully designed to fashionably mould and shape the form into graceful lines.

The ADJUSTO bands, when tightened, lift the abdomen, hold it firmly, and support it comfortably. Gradually the excess flesh of hips and back is reduced and distributed equally, giving the straight back and new flat hip effect.

For all women obliged to stand a great deal, the ADJUSTO is absolutely without an equal. A wearer, who is of medium figure, said recently:—

"My duties require my standing most of the time, and until I wore the ADJUSTO it was difficult to finish my day's work without becoming exhausted. I can now do more work with less exertion and feel much better. It supports my figure perfectly, and is the strongest and most serviceable corset I have ever worn."

Another remarked—"Since wearing the ADJUSTO my hips, abdomen and waist have become noticeably smaller, and my figure is greatly improved. In all other corsets I require size 27, but I wear a size 25 ADJUSTO with perfect ease."

All genuine ADJUSTO corsets have trade mark "ADJUSTO" stamped on inside. This ADJUSTO trade mark is your protection against imitations.

BIG BOOM ALONG SHORE

By the Investigator.

What will become of the burned district of Chelsea? This is being discussed by not a few real estate men. Many think that many of the owners of land in Chelsea will not rebuild and that property there will generally change hands. Already many of the former residents of the burned district have gone elsewhere and made definite arrangements for a new home in other sections. Some who can afford it have settled in the Newtons, others have gone to Dorchester, South Boston, Everett, Charlestown, Cambridge and Somerville.

Boom on at Mattapan.

On Oakland street, within a short distance of Mattapan square, is a new territory which, on account of its easy accessibility to the city and five-cent fare, is destined to become a very popular residential centre. As one looks at it to-day and notices the different lines of car service, as well as the growth of this section within the last few years, one sees here an unusual opportunity to get building lots within eight minutes of the Forest Hills terminal at remarkably low prices. This is the last large tract of land in the city of Boston where the prices run as low as sixty-nine dollars up to two hundred and seventy-nine dollars.

The property is called Homeward Terrace by its promoters, H. S. Moody Land Company, who are large dealers in realty throughout New England. The land is elevated, commanding a sightly view of the surrounding country with the Blue Hills in the distance, and may be purchased by monthly payments with every advantage given the customer.

Building at Winthrop.

Not far from the Dorchester station the Investigator had pointed out forty-five lots where former owners were charging thirty-five cents a foot that are now selling at eighteen cents. There is a neighborhood on Norfolk street in the vicinity of Bernard, where many new houses are in course of erection. There is no assessment for the sewer to the purchasers of lots in this district. This is a matter which must not be overlooked in the purchase of lots in city limits.

Winthrop shows a steady advance and is a good instance of how a real estate firm can bring about the growth and prosperity of a neighborhood.

The conservative firm of Edward T. Harrington Company have sold many lots at the centre and Court Park territory and have materially advanced the building of many houses. Besides this, their energy and business judgment are displayed in the manner in which they have kept active the demand for some high-priced estates in this section.

Housebuilding in Revere.

Revere is becoming more than ever a residential section. Revere Heights, Revere Beach, Beachmont, Ocean Grove, Crescent Beach and North Revere all provide desirable shore locations. The train service is unexcelled either to Boston or Lynn. Its population is over 15,000, and with its well managed school system, its attractive public buildings and the boulevards, making it a popular resort for thousands in Summer, values have increased rapidly. Seashore lots are selling from $300 to $1,000.

Houses are bringing good prices, and there is a great demand for them. Only a few are on the market. Some on Bellingham avenue are specially attractive.

Point Shirley, a boot shaped peninsula of about fifty acres of hill and shore land, extending from Cottage Hill at the southerly end of Winthrop Beach, into Boston Harbor, is only five miles from the State House, with excellent train service. It is somewhat secluded and yet has every advantage of a first-class Summer resort. The lots are cheap there, with a stretch of the ocean on one side and the harbor on the other, and may be had on very favorable terms.

Money in Apartments.

It will not be many years before this point will be occupied by people who will live there all the year round as the temperature is somewhat warmer in Winter than in Boston.

Apartment houses in Roxbury yield over $2,500 net income on an investment of $50,000. Many of these have eighteen suites, five rooms and bath, with every modern convenience, including steam heat, and rent from $25 to $35 a month. Much money is going into this type of investment.

A good class of three-family houses are being built on South Huntington avenue, overlooking the Jamaica Parkway. The suites contain five or six rooms and bath, and rent at twenty-five and thirty dollars a month. After paying taxes, water rate and interest on this type of investment property, the net income is about 30 per cent. They are all modern, up-to-date structures and in a select neighborhood, where the Trinity Church corporation of Boston will build the Rachel Allen Home and Vincent Hospital.

To Bar Wooden Tenements.

The Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange has introduced a bill into the Legislature endeavoring to prevent the erection of three-family wooden houses within the limits of Boston. There may be good reason to object to such houses in certain congested parts of Boston, but as a rule such a law as this bill calls for would work hardships to the tenants, the landlords and real estate men generally. Many of the real estate men feel that the three-family wooden house is the only kind with which to develop certain outlying districts of Boston. As an investment, this type of house has always been popular. It may be argued against in certain localities, where the one family house or two-family house is rigidly maintained, but there are other sections of land in the limits of Boston where the building of the three-family is absolutely necessary to make a paying proposition.

This bill is likely to be very unpopular among certain promoters who cannot help but feel they are discriminated against, and will do all in their power to prevent its passage.

Urges Conservatism.

The Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange is only a recent organization, but has already championed many excellent projects for improving the conditions of the real estate market in New England. The organization must not, however, be too ambitious in plans of reform.

What it can do was well expressed by Robert S. Peabody at the dinner of the exchange this week at Young's, to get the co-operation of the citizens of Boston in making some necessary improvements in transportation and advocate many changes for making Boston a radial centre of active commercial interests.

People can be taught to invest their money in real estate. It should be made plain to them that there is no other class of investment to-day, so steady and sure of [illegible] return. By a systematic [illegible] campaign of effort, the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange can make itself a potent influence in Boston to awaken the indifferent, careless citizen to his opportunities in real estate. The exchange has already done an admirable work in this direction and its representative members will doubtless continue to advocate reform measures along these important lines.

Activity in Melrose.

Property north of Boston continues to mark increased demands upon the agents. Melrose has a few houses from six to nine rooms each, selling all the way from $1,500 to $3,000. These houses are well finished and are good specimens of what are being offered for these figures. This town is splendidly situated near the Middlesex Fells Park, bordering on Spot pond, surrounded with new ventures in the boulevard system, and has altogether a splendid outlook for it.

Brighton has unusual access through attractive avenues to the city proper and is receiving a boom here and may be purchased from thirty-two to fifty cents a foot.

VESUVIUS AND MT. AETNA IN ERUPTION

Catania, May 2.—Tourists are flocking into Catania to witness the awe-inspiring sight of Mt. Aetna in eruption. Although the aspect of the burning mountain is threatening, it has not yet spread a serious degree of danger. Many residents of towns upon the mountain side have fled in terror and others who remained daily invoke the saints to spare them from harm.

With the widening of the crater the volume of smoke which pours from the apex is getting thicker and darker. But stones and ashes are falling upon the villages, although in small quantities.

Naples, May 2.—Mount Vesuvius, the famous old volcano which has wrought so much death and destruction to the surrounding country, is waking up. Clouds of dense, black smoke have begun to pour from the crater and the peasants in the neighborhood have begun to view the sight with alarm. There are continuous rumblings from the bowels of the mountain and slight shocks are terrifying the inhabitants of the villages. It is feared that an explosion of great harm is about to befall.

THE BUBONIC PLAGUE

ROUGH ON RATS

TRADE MARK

DON'T DIE IN THE HOUSE

Unbeatable Exterminator

EXTERMINATOR OF THE

BUBONIC PLAGUE

The Plague is a disease of the rat, and fleas living on the infected rat become themselves infected and carry the disease to other rats, and to the people.

ROUGH ON RATS, THE OLD RELIABLE THAT NEVER FAILS

Rats are too cunning to be caught by stereotype, ready-prepared-for-use doses. Rats are smart, but ROUGH ON RATS beats them.

REASONS WHY

Because of the fact that ROUGH ON RATS is ALL (95%) poison and has to be mixed is the reason why it is the most effective, and so reliable, as an exterminator of Roaches, Ants and Bed Bugs as well as Rats and Mice.

There is enough poison in one 15c. box of ROUGH ON RATS to kill 500 to 1000 Rats and Mice.

Fools the Rats, Mice and Bugs, but never fools the buyer.

WHY? Because Rats instinctively avoid the familiar forms of ready-prepared-for-use doses. ROUGH ON RATS, being unmixed and all poison, can be disguised in many ways, thus completely outwitting them; and you are not paying 15c. for flour, paste and grease (that can be had for 6 cents a pound), that must necessarily form the bulk of ready-prepared-for use catch-penny devices.

Being all poison, one 15c. box of ROUGH ON RATS, when mixed with something they will eat, will spread 50 to 100 little breads or cakes, that will kill five hundred or more Rats and Mice, and thousands of Roaches, Ants and Bed Bugs.

STATE CONVENTIONS OF NATIONALS NOW BEGIN AS THE OLD PARTY BOSSES WATCH

LEADERS READY FOR INDEPENDENT FIGHT

Newspapers See Greatest Opportunity for Independent Voters This Year Because of the Disruption of Republican and Democratic Organizations.

STRONG CAMPAIGN IN SOUTH NOW UNDER WAY

Massachusetts Expects Much Larger National Party Vote Than Last Year, and California, New York and Illinois Leaders Believe Results in South and Middle West Will Amaze the Country.

TAKING impetus in new directions every day, the National Independence Party doctrine is now spreading into sections of the country where it was believed to have little chance by reason of the firm intrenchment of the old parties.

The dinner of the new party in this city last Monday did much to bring into the open independent voters all over the country who up to that time did not feel like giving up their lifelong political affiliations for the new party which they did not altogether understand. The fact, though, that American principles that can make only for the betterment of the whole nation were enunciated by William Randolph Hearst, Thomas L. Hisgen, of Massachusetts; Charles A. Walsh, of Illinois; Gessner Williams, of California; R. M. Isherwood, of Indiana; John Temple Graves, the noted Georgian, and other well-known men of the East and West, was apparently convincing enough for all doubtful voters. The organizers throughout the country have reported that since the publication of the dinner speeches their organizations have increased in numbers almost as rapidly as might be expected if the election were but a few weeks away.

Newspapers throughout the country have been expressing their belief that at the dinner the Presidential boom of some new party man would be launched, and the opposition press was convinced that the only result of the dinner would be the avowed candidacy of Mr. Hearst. Because no such programme was carried out and because all of the speakers, instead of wasting words on candidates, devoted all of their time to the discussion of the National Party and what it stands for and what it intends to do, the newspapers are as much mystified now as they were immediately after the Chicago conference.

They continue, however, to point out that the Mayoralty recount in New York is doing a great deal to hold Mr. Hearst before the nation most prominently.

An active new party campaign has now started in Florida, and the Southern leaders will announce the National committeemen for most of the Southern States during the coming fortnight. The New York State convention yesterday is the beginning of the National Party State conventions, and in rapid succession Massachusetts, California and Illinois will hold theirs.

‘PREDICT ASTONISHING LEAGUE VOTE’

(From the Washington Post.)

It is manifest that Mr. William R. Hearst and those who think as he does do not see the necessity for the Democratic party to lag superfluous on the stage after November next, and it is equally clear that it is the design of Mr. Hearst to appropriate the vestments of the old party after its departure and annex its following to the Independence party.

It is the amalgamation of a dozen different sorts of Democrats and will compass the death of the old party if the sheep and the goats are not separated.

We predict that the vote of the Independence party this year will astonish all parties, even the League itself.

THE MASSACHUSETTS SITUATION

(From the Tacoma, Wash., Ledger.)

Evidence of the activity of the Independence party and of the position it occupies in Massachusetts to the Democratic party is found. * * *

It may be seen on what a doubtful basis rested the claim of the Democratic party that it is one of the two leading parties in Massachusetts. The Independence party will have a ticket in the field again next Fall and expects then to establish itself as one of the two leading parties.

These facts are noteworthy in view of the announcement that the new party will have a candidate for President this year, and in view of the intention of William R. Hearst to oppose Bryan.

“HEARST HOPES TO UNITE ALL RADICALS”

(From the Nashua, N. H., Telegraph.)

It is probable that Colonel John Temple Graves speaks with full authority in his positive announcement at Norfolk that Mr. Hearst will not be the Presidential candidate of the Independence League, and that the League would not support the nominee of either of the two old political parties. Mr. Hearst was impatient four years ago in his demand for the Democratic nomination, and he has never forgiven Mr. Bryan for his unwillingness to advance his candidacy. It seems now very unlikely that Bryan can secure his adherence by any appeal or concession. Governor Johnson can expect no more from Hearst than Mr. Bryan, for the determination to build up a new party for the service of this campaign at least is a fixed conclusion.

There is more probability of a fusion or political deal of some kind between the Populist party and the new Independence party. Hearst is on good terms with Watson, the Populist nominee, and the effort will probably be made to reconcile the points of difference.

Hearst is hoping to unseat Mayor McClellan and make the Mayoralty of New York a stepping stone to the Presidency. That is shrewd calculation, if it can be effected, for Hearst hopes to unite by that time the radicals whom he is now intentionally splitting.

The man who seems to be the most favored to-day in his mind for the nomination of the new party is Thomas L. Hisgen of West Springfield, who ran so strongly as the League candidate for Governor of Massachusetts.

Thinks Nationals Would Back Hughes

(From the Rochester Times.)

In all the talk of Presidential candidates the New York State gubernatorial contest is not by any means forgotten by Democrats and Republicans. The Democrats are far more concerned over it than the Republicans, because there is a dearth of timber among the Democrats from which to select candidates with even a ghost of a show of winning. The Democratic leaders are afraid that if they do not nominate some man who will assure the indorsement of the Independence League, that the League will nominate Hughes and make an embarrassing three-cornered fight.

The row in the Democratic State convention has encouraged the Independence Leaguers all over the State, as it enhances the League's chance of being an important factor in the naming of candidates. The League claims to have polled 181,900 votes for its State ticket in 1906, and is, therefore, entitled to voluntary consideration from opponents.

“SLIM CLAIM OF BAY STATE DEMOCRATS”

(From the Tacoma, Wash., Ledger.)

Evidence of the activity of the Independence League and of the position it occupies in Massachusetts relative to the Democratic party is found in the recent attempt of the league to force appointment of its members where the law provides that bi-partisan boards shall be made up of the two leading political parties. In this suit the league lost in the Supreme Court. The Democratic party is still one of the two leading political parties, but it had a narrow escape. The Independence League candidate for Governor received more votes at the last election than the Democratic candidate received under the designation of "Democratic." It happened, however, that Henry M. Whitney, the Democratic candidate, was also on the ticket as "Democratic citizen." This was because of a factional fight and a split in the Democratic State convention. The Supreme Court holds that the "Democratic citizen" votes should be added to the "Democratic," and thus it finds the Democratic is still one of the two leading political parties.

If in the future there should be "Democratic Citizen" candidates and the name should become a recognized party designation, the Supreme Court admits a new question would be presented. Whitney was also on the ticket as an "Independent Citizen" candidate, and as a candidate without any designation whatever. The votes he received in this way, the Supreme Court holds, should not be added to the "Democratic" votes. It may be seen from this on what a doubtful basis rested the claim of the Democratic party that it is one of the two leading parties in Massachusetts. The Independence League will have a ticket in the field again next Fall and expects then to establish itself as one of the two leading political parties. These facts are noteworthy in view of the announcement that the league will have a candidate for President this year and in view of the intention of William R. Hearst to oppose Bryan.

‘INDEPENDENTS ARE STRONGEST IN N. Y.’

(From the Wilmington, N. C., Dispatch.)

Judging by the manner in which New York has lined up against Colonel Bryan that distinguished gentleman, if nominated, is going to find it hard to carry the State. It is true that opposition should not extend that far, but there is too much grumbling, too much plainly apparent dissatisfaction for a person to think otherwise. Of course, there could be a change, and we trust there will be for the sake of Democracy, because no matter what the division at present the party should stand solid and united after the convention. And with New York this is especially so, because not only will the Republican forces have to be reckoned with, but there is where Hearst's Independence League is strongest. But just at present New York is making a big noise against Colonel Bryan, and it has a right to do so.

Organization Is Now On in Washington

(From the Spokane, Wash., Chronicle.)

Before the end of this month the national committeemen for the Independence League in the State of Washington may be announced. The following announcement is made:

"National committeemen for the State where they have not yet been chosen will be selected, it is expected, within the next few weeks, and work or organization for the national convention [illegible] begun at once. It is the desire of the leaders of the party to place in the office of national committeeman in all the States the most representative man of that State who is in sympathy with the principles and purposes of the Independence party."

‘MAYOR'S COUNSEL DELAYS RECOUNT’

(From the New York Press.)

Taking advantage of every opportunity the evidence offered and hanging hard to technicalities, counsel for Mayor McClellan yesterday sought industriously for points that might possibly throw doubt on the validity of the ballots cast in the city election of 1905 in the continuation of the ouster proceedings before Justice Lambert in the Supreme Court. The preponderance of evidence thus far adduced is regarded as tending to show that the ballots have been properly preserved and that they are admissable as evidence in the contention that Hearst and not McClellan was elected mayor.

There is still a mass of evidence to be introduced to prove [illegible] boxes have been kept inviolate, and it is probable that it will be well into next month before any of the boxes are [illegible] into court for a recount of the ballots. Counsel for the Mayor are determined to drag the recount along by insisting upon cross-examining every witness on the most technical points.

The extent to which the counsel for the defence are bent on going in the examination of the witnesses was shown yesterday when they followed up the point as to Hearst having paid for the coffee and sandwiches supplied to the police and civilian guards placed over the boxes for several months in the latter part of 1905 and early in 1906. The purpose of this testimony was to indicate that the Hearst watchers and the police guards were on friendly terms and that it was possible that there might have been a conspiracy to tamper with the ballot boxes in the interest of Hearst. Justice Lambert permitted the utmost freedom in the examination of the witnesses in order that the proof that the boxes have been sacredly guarded or that they have not might be firmly established.

Activity Now Seen in Ohio Districts

(From the Youngstown, O., Telegraph.)

The Independence League, William Randolph Hearst's third great political party, will effect an organization in Mahoning County.

John A. Mulholland of Toledo, attorney and politician, has written to a number of Youngstown men, both Democrats and Republicans, seeking information regarding the possible strength of an Independence League movement in this county. A leader for the new party is also sought here.

The League purposes to organize in every county in the State of Ohio before the November election and will nominate a candidate for Congress in the Eighteenth District.

“What Peg Left for Democratic Party If—?”

(From the Washington Post.)

The panic of 1907 came at a most inauspicious time, just before "Presidential year." If the Democratic party were the old party of Tilden, Thurman, Hendricks and Morrison, the Republicans would go to the slaughter this year without a doubt, but it is another, a new, a latitudinarian Democracy, and if the expected comes to pass it will go to the slaughter in November.

Then, if the Republicans should make a revision of the tariff half way acceptable to business, what peg will be left for the Democratic party to stand on?

Mr. William R. Hearst sees none; but he is busy driving pegs for the successor of the Democratic party as a formidable force in politics to stand on.

WORK GOING ON IN NEW YORK STATE

(From the Rochester Democrat.)

State Organizers F. E. Cronin and W. J. Smith of the New York Independence League were in the city yesterday looking over the political situation. They held conferences with prominent members of the local branch of the League regarding the feeling among the Leaguers as to the nomination of a full State ticket.

Organizer Cronin said that he found in all parts of the State a demand that the Independence League place a full ticket in the field this Fall, and go before the people on its own issues, instead of combining with either of the old parties. He said he believed that the State convention of the League would see fit to name a full ticket, and that in view of the factional strife among the Democrats in all parts of the State it would receive a very heavy vote. He thought that a ticket composed of representative Leaguers would have a fair chance of carrying the State, or at least run second to the Republican ticket.

In New York city, Mr. Cronin believed the League would poll a very heavy vote, much heavier than it did two years ago, because of the feeling against Tammany Hall and its chieftain, Boss Murphy. He said that in many of the up-State counties there was dissatisfaction with the Murphy-Conners regime and that many of the dissatisfied Democrats would vote the League ticket while Republicans who would willingly support Hughes if nominated for Governor and who will refuse to stand by the machine in case another man is nominated would join with the Leaguers this Fall.

‘M'CLELLAN SHOWED ANXIETY TO DELAY’

(From the Brooklyn Times.)

The confidence of the friends of Mayor McClellan in the validity of his election has endured a severe strain by the desperate fight his lawyers have made in the courts and elsewhere during the past two years to prevent a recount of the ballots. It will not gain much strength by the plea put forth by his counsel yesterday that in all probability the contents of the ballot boxes have been changed during the two years and a half which have passed since they were first sealed up. To assume that such a thing is possible is to assume that his own friends and appointees have engaged in a criminal conspiracy to deprive him of his seat. The ballot boxes have been in their charge and under the watch of the police during all of that long period, and the friends of Mr. Hearst have much more apparent ground to make such a charge. The members of the Board of Elections, who have been the custodians of the ballot boxes, owe nothing to Mr. Hearst, and have not been suspected of undue friendliness to him, yet they declare that such criminal tampering with the ballot boxes as the Mayor's counsel affect to fear would be impossible without detection.

It would be a great relief to the friends of the Mayor and to the public in general if our Chief Magistrate and his lawyers showed the same anxiety to facilitate the recount that they have persistently taken to obstruct and defeat it.

“NEW PARTY WILL ASTONISH EVERYONE”

(From the Washington Post.)

It is manifest that Mr. William R. Hearst and those who think as he does do not see the necessity for the Democratic party to lag superfluous on the stage after November next, and it is equally clear that it is the design of Mr. Hearst to appropriate the vestments of the old party after its departure and annex its following to the Independence League.

[illegible] of Mr. Bryan and his [illegible] the defeat of last Fall's [illegible] Mr. Bryan's election [illegible] so far as Colonel [illegible] Mr. Hearst [illegible], who sees a [illegible], Mr. Hearst will [illegible] 80 per cent.

[illegible] the Democratic [illegible] the great conservative [illegible] country, and their [illegible], holding as they do [illegible] balance of power in those commonwealths that either party must carry [illegible] victory.

The Whig party died in 1852 because [illegible] dozen years there had been too [illegible] sorts of Whigs. Alexander H. Stephens and Abraham Lincoln were Whigs [illegible] were William H. Seward [illegible] Henry A. Wise [illegible] John [illegible] was another [illegible] was that the [illegible] its assets [illegible] the Republicans of the North.

To-day there are more sorts of Democrats than there were different orders of Whigs when Taylor was elected President. [illegible] are Democrats who would reestablish the supremacy of the Constitution. Governor Johnson is one. Judge Gray is another. Senator Culberson is yet another. But there are Democrats who advocate the worst sort of paternalism—such as prescribing by act of Congress how much product a factory may turn out. Cyrus [illegible] is as galling [illegible] would be. Yet Mr. Bryan wrote it in the platform of the Nebraska Democrats this very year, and he insists that it shall be incorporated in the national platform at Denver.

It is this amalgamation of a dozen different sorts of Democrats that will compass the death of the old party if the sheep and the goats are not separated.

We predict that the vote of the Independence League this year will astonish all parties—even the League itself.

(From the Wilmington, Del., News.)

Now it seems as if the merits of the contest of William R. Hearst for a recount of the ballots cast at the election for Mayor in New York City would be settled. A jury has been selected in that city to hear the case, and incidentally to open the disputed ballot boxes with the idea of counting the votes. The case has been fought hard by both Hearst and McClellan, and after a variety of judicial decisions the action sought has been secured. And it must be conceded that Hearst has made a persistent fight. It is also to be conceded that Mayor McClellan has not shown any desire to have the facts brought out.

“Party Matters Are Getting Complicated”

(From Marionette, Wis., Eagle Star.)

When the Hearst Independence League make their nomination another seceder from the Bryan camp will line up against him. Party matters are becoming more and more complicated and the campaign promises to be the most exciting that has taken place in the last generation, except that of 1896.

FARMERS RUN TRAIN AT 20-POLE POWER

Mattoon, Ill., May 2.—Farmers between Shumway and Effingham have a railroad which cost them nothing, and which they operate by pushing a large handcar with long poles.

Six miles of track between the two towns was abandoned eight months ago by the Wabash Railroad because it did not pay.

Farmers built a handcar upon which twenty can ride. They call it the "daylight limited," and make regular trips from end to end of the line on market day.

BULLS ARE PUT TO ROUT AS MARKET CLOSES; STOCKS TAKE SUDDEN DROP

PROFIT-TAKING BRINGS DECLINE

Trading Heavy With Union Pacific Leading Until Bears Triumph; Prices Tumble.

After showing a very "bullish" sentiment for the better part of two hours, the New York stock market ran into a reaction near the close yesterday and the "bull" manipulators lost their hold. In the closing minutes the gains which had been made were lost.

All during the week the market has been giving the "shorts" a lively time of it and with sentiment toward higher prices the course upward has been consistent. The reaction at the close yesterday, however, looked as though it had good backing and the declines registered were in those stocks which were most prominent in the movement toward higher levels. Profit taking was responsible for some of the declines and many who had bought stock at low levels sold out at the high prices reached yesterday, thereby helping the reaction.

Union Pacific has been the recipient of considerable manipulation lately and yesterday was no exception. There was not another stock on the entire list which showed anywhere near the total which was shown in this stock and during the two hours over 198,000 shares were sold.

Union Pacific Trading Heavy.

The coming bond sale of this railroad is causing a great deal of comment in financial circles and the general consensus of opinion is that it will meet with as great success as did that of the Pennsylvania road. The starting price for Union Pacific yesterday was 137⅞ and soon after 138⅛ was recorded. There was a momentary reaction near the start which caused the price to slip back to 137½, but this loss was soon recovered and 138½ was quoted at the close.

Reading was also fairly busy, although the sales did not reach anywhere near the totals of Union Pacific, and at the close 109½, off ⅛ from the previous close, was recorded. The metal stocks were dull, very few sales being recorded.

Outside of the decrease in loans, which amounted to $563,000, the New York bank statement was favorable. Deposits increased $6,853,400 and the cash holdings increased over $5,000,000. The total surplus of the banks was larger by $3,368,150 than that of the previous week.

The Boston market was content to follow the course which was mapped out by Wall Street, and prices during yesterday rose and fell in company with the larger market. The trading after a few minutes at the start proved dull and the major part of the business transacted was a few specialties.

Prices started at a level that was slightly higher than that of the previous close. Then the "bulls" began to use their influence and, aided by the advance in prices in the New York market, gains, fractional as they were, were registered against the local issues. This movement continued up to the closing minutes, with only one or two interruptions and then pressure was brought to bear on the larger market and from a buying affair the market was turned into a selling market and prices slid off rapidly.

Conservative market followers hold to the belief that the reaction yesterday was only momentary, caused by profit taking on the part of those who had bought stocks at low prices and were satisfied with the profits that would come to them on the sale of their holdings at the present time. Others declare that the present movement in the coppers has been against the conditions that are prevailing and that there is no reason for the advance.

Amalgamated Leads Rise.

In the first hour everything pointed to buoyancy. The advances were small, rarely exceeding a point, but the movement was so general and the sentiment seemed to be so wholly toward higher prices that it was thought the market was in for a decided rise. Amalgamated led the list during the early trading, but in the last half hour this position was relinquished and Shoe Machinery jumped to the fore.

In Amalgamated there is heard talk of New York buying, and during the week a great many orders were attributed to this source. The starting price yesterday was 60⅞, up ⅛ from the previous close, and after a short pause 61 was reached. In the last half hour, however, the stock suffered, and under the selling pressure which cropped out the price declined to 60½, with new stock making its appearance on every loss in price. There were one or two feeble attempts at rallies made when the decline started, but they were unavailing, and at the end 60⅝, up only ⅛ from the low price, was quoted. There were 3,571 shares of this stock sold.

For many days State street has been hearing rumors of an exceptionally good "plum" being in store for the holders of Shoe Machinery and as a result of these rumors the stock has been making some advances. There has also been some activity in the shares. Yesterday the culmination of this movement came when, after running through the early hour with something over 1,400 shares to its credit, a movement was started in the last half hour which forced the price up to 55½, and resulted in 1,976 shares being sold in the last thirty minutes of trading. The total shares sold during the day were 3,600.

Reports are still current that North Butte and Butte Coalition may be taken into the Amalgamated group. This rumor was used to good effect yesterday and these two stocks came after Amalgamated and Shoe Machinery in the way of activity.

Decline in Butte Coalition.

Butte Coalition, while active, was one of the stocks which reflected the decline which occurred at the close, and after opening at 23 and touching 23⅛ the slump at the end sent the price down to 22. Over 1800 shares were sold. North Butte, the other "nearly" active stock was a bit better off as far as price changes went and advanced to 59¼ from an opening of 58¼, but the closing minutes showed that this stock was susceptible and at the close 58⅜ was quoted. Approximately 1200 shares were sold. Steel common was firm and active at 36.

Bankers throughout the country agree that the supply of money now on hand far exceeds the demand and some go so far as to say that it is likely that this condition will continue for some time. It will need more than one Pennsylvania loan flotation to restore confidence completely, and just at present banks are paying particular attention to the names of borrowers despite the fact that their vaults contain an extremely large supply of cash. Rates are extremely low and money can be obtained at very low figures.

NEW HIGH RECORDS BY LEADING STOCKS

By Thomas C. Shotwell.

NEW YORK, May 2.—New high records were made in Wall street to-day by the leading stocks in a strong and fairly active market. Union Pacific, St. Louis and St. Paul and Southern Pacific and the Steel shares were kept [illegible] the Smelters also forged upward. The covering is due entirely to the desperate situation of brokers who have sold their customers' stocks. It was believed on Friday that all trouble of this kind was over but yesterday four more firms suddenly began frantic buying, and the end is apparently not yet.

Just before the close a profit-taking movement set in that wiped out a large part of the advance. London was fairly steady. Wheat was about a cent a bushel higher, and cotton was not materially changed at the close although at one time it was materially lower.

'LEGALIZE MERGER,' MELLEN'S CRY NOW

The merger bill favored and desired by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad is in the hands of the Legislative Committee on Railroads.

The New Haven has stopped talking about a "properly safeguarded" merger. The bill favored by the Morgan-Astor-Vanderbilt interests goes straight to the meat of the argument in its first word and first section.

This is the first section of the bill that Charles F. Choate, Jr., Josiah H. Benton, Jr., and other Mellen lawyers will ask the Faxon Committee to report to the Massachusetts Legislature with the recommendation that it "ought to pass."

Section 1. The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company may take and hold the shares of stock in the Boston & Maine Railroad now held by it for its interest and may have and exercise all the rights and powers of a stockholder therein.

Copies of the New Haven bill, drafted by Mr. Choate, whose family holds nearly 1,000 shares of New Haven, have been placed in the hands of committeemen, who will this week continue their hearings on the merger proposition.

The Choate Bill.

The Choate merger bill differs in many respects from that proposed by Theophilus Parsons and his Mellen Business Men's Merger League. Here it is in its entirety, as submitted by the attorney for the railroad to the Committee on Railroads.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled by authority of the same as follows:

Section 1. The New York New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company may take and hold the shares of stock in the Boston & Maine Railroad now held by it or for its interest and may have and exercise all the rights and powers of a stockholder therein.

Section 2. The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company may subscribe for, acquire, take and hold shares of stock in and evidences of indebtedness of the Boston & Maine Railroad and of any railroad company whose railroad is leased or operated by the said Boston & Maine Railroad and may have and exercise all the rights and powers of a stockholder in any such shares of stock.

Section 3. A majority of the directors of the Boston & Maine Railroad shall always be bona fide residents of the States in which said corporation is incorporated.

Sop to Massachusetts.

Section 4. Not less than four directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company shall be bona fide residents of Massachusetts.

Section 5. The Boston & Maine Railroad and the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company shall each maintain a headquarters in the City of Boston.

Section 6. The passenger fares and freight rates, facilities and accommodations, upon both said railroads in this Commonwealth shall be subject to revision by the Board of Railroad Commissioners.

Section 7. All shares of stock hereafter issued by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, the proceeds of which are to be used for the acquisition of any property within this Commonwealth, or for making any alterations, additions, extensions or improvements of its railroad within this Commonwealth, shall be issued under and according to the laws of this Commonwealth.

Section 8. The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company shall at all times be subject to the laws of this State, as to that portion of its road in this State.

DREAD GERMS IN SWIMMING POOL

Residents in the vicinity of the Orchard Park swimming pool in Roxbury, aroused over the danger of typhoid fever and malaria affecting their children from bathing, intend to have their representatives in the city government appeal to the Board of Health to condemn the plate and not allow it to be opened in June.

It is claimed that the swimming pool is dangerous to the community, for the simple reason that the water which fills the pool is from a hydrant and, there being no regular outlet, cholera and other germs flourish in the water.

Former Representative Jeremiah J. Good of Ward 17 is strongly opposed to the swimming pool. To a reporter for the Sunday American he said, "The Orchard Park swimming pool is a menace to the children of the district. There is no running water, and as a consequence all forms of disease germs are pr[illegible] I am in favor of shower baths being installed there."

Charles J. Kidney, a prominent citizen of the ward and owner of considerable real estate in the locality, feels that the city should remove the swimming pool and install a system of shower baths.

Beautiful Wife Wins Stage Glory; Appeals For Divorce

Mrs. Robinson, who has adopted the stage name of Dorothy Davies, is now leading woman in a company playing "Strongheart."

Manchester, N. H., May 2.—An infatuation for the stage is believed to be the underlying cause of the separation of Dorothy Davies, a beautiful actress, and her husband, De Lafayette Robinson, assistant postmaster of this city, which has culminated in her suit for divorce.

Although Mr. Robinson is devotedly attached to his talented wife, it is understood that her suit will not be contested by him. His friends believe that he will chivalrously give her the freedom which she seeks. But they say it is a sad ending to a romance which began more than sixteen years ago. Then they loved each other fondly and all who knew them predicted a happy married life for "the belle of Manchester," as she was called, and the big sixfooter.

But the wife had a fondness for the stage which grew and grew. Finally she went to Boston to study elocution in one of the best known institutions in the country. Occasionally she came home to visit her family, and sometimes Mr. Robinson went to Boston to see her.

Now Leading Woman.

She never returned to a domestic life, however. She finally gained her footlight opportunity and made a success. She is now leading woman of the "Strongheart" company, and this week is playing in Kansas City.

The grounds upon which she has sued for a divorce are a mystery. Her friends will not reveal the secret, and Mr. Robinson keeps his mouth firmly closed when the subject is broached to him. Court officials decline to show the papers that relate why the beautiful, talented woman seeks to be released from the vow she made "to love, honor and obey" before the Rev. Henry C. Cooke, rector of Grace Church, here, on September 28, 1892. She was then twenty years old, and the groom was twenty-nine. Her maiden name was Elizabeth D. Davis, but when she became an actress she took a stage name.

The fact that she had sued for divorce did not become known until the case was listed in the court docket. There the information ended.

When City Solicitor George A. Wagner, her attorney, was questioned he said:

"Don't ask me anything about it for I shall not tell you one word."

Has Appeared in Boston.

Mrs. Dorothy Davies, as she is professionally known, has played in several Boston theatres. She is talented and very ambitious. She is determined to make a dramatic success. She was born in Canada and is the daughter of George Davis.

While Mr. Robinson faces the situation bravely his friends believe that he is deeply grieved.

The Boston American sent a telegram to Dorothy Davies to Kansas City, asking her why she had brought suit for divorce. But her answer reveals nothing about the grounds upon which her legal action is based. She telegraphed in reply:—

Kansas City, April 30, 1908.
Boston American, Boston, Mass.:

Telegram received. Am much surprised at publishment of such. Do not care to make any statement.

DOROTHY DAVIES,
Strongheart Company.

While in Boston she was a student at the Emerson School of Oratory.

Barbecue, Parade, Trip to Mexico and Numerous Lesser Fetes Being Arranged.

The annual reunion of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks to be held in Dallas, Tex., from July 12 to 18 inclusive, will be attended by a large delegation from the Bay State.

While the delegates will have the usual work to do in the convention extensive plans have been made for the entertainment of the visitors.

The programme includes, among other things, the entertainment and luncheon for members of the grand lodge and their ladies from 12 to 3 on Monday, July 13, at State Fair Grounds. Tuesday the biggest barbecue ever held in the world will take place, to which will be added the attractiveness of a Mexican luncheon, vaudeville and athletic exhibition. Wednesday will be set apart for the dinner in honor of the Governor, the massed band parade, the drill corps and marching club contest. On Thursday will be held the big parade, beginning at 9 o'clock in the morning.

Everything is being done by Dallas and Texas to make the reunion one of the greatest the order has ever held. Side trips to the Gulf and the Republic of Mexico are arranged.

Plan Big Parade.

Many prizes are to be awarded during the grand lodge session, a partial list of which is as follows:

To the lodge having the largest number in line on day of parade, such lodge to be more than seventy-five miles from Dallas, and all the members thereof to be registered at headquarters: First prize $300, second prize $150, third prize $100.

To the lodge having the largest number of men in line on the day of parade, such lodge located within seventy-five miles of Dallas: First prize $200, second prize $100, third prize $50.

To the lodge having the largest aggregate mileage, the mileage to be computed by the registration committee from the number of members registered, the most direct route to Dallas from the competing city being the basis of computation, and no lodge within seventy-five miles of Dallas to be allowed in the contest: First prize $250, second prize $100, third prize $50.

To the lodge accompanied by the largest number of ladies, the ladies to be registered at the bureau, lodges within a radius of seventy-five miles to be barred from the contest. First prize $250, second prize $100, third prize $50.

Prize for Smallest Elk.

For the best drill or marching club or corps, to participate in the marching contest: First prize $500, second prize $150, third prize $100.

For the most attractive lodge in line of parade, uniqueness, originality and general appearance to be considered: first prize $500, second prize $150, third prize $100.

A special prize of $100 will be given to every lodge accompanied by a band of twenty-five or more pieces, provided the band participates in the massed band parade and in the grand parade Thursday.

STEEL MEN ALARMED, TALK OF LOWER RATES

Drop in Trade Brings Trust Heads to Terms; Crop Prospects Encouraging for Big Yield.

By Thomas C. Shotwell.

New York, May 2.—Alarmed at the renewed collapse of business that has come as a direct result of agitation for an increase of freight rates, the steel men have reconsidered and will discuss once more the wisdom of making steel products a basis of money, with rails the standard at a ratio of twenty-eight to one. In the first two weeks of April the number of idle cars increased 70,000 because business men who had contemplated a renewal of operations decided to wait until the railroads quit trying to repeal the law of supply and demand.

Business men seem to believe that there is no justification for an increase of freight rates until dividends have been reduced and wages liquidated.

It is safe to say that at the conference of steel men, which is called to meet in New York in the near future, the logic of the situation will be recognized and a sharp cut will be made in prices of all steel products, thereby demonetizing steel and taking a long step toward a recovery of business.

Government Running Behind.

Another development of the week is the discovery that the government is running behind very heavily in receipts, the deficit for April amounting to $16,000,000. This is at the rate of $192,000,000 a year and while it probably will not amount to that much for the whole year it will be very large.

Financing of the Pennsylvania checked gold exports and the call of Secretary Cortelyou on the banks for $45,000,000 also helped. A still further check should be encountered in about two weeks, by which time [illegible] hopes to ca[illegible] work and get back from the [illegible] $50,000,000 of gold [illegible] treasury through the [illegible] redemption.

Good Prospects for Crops.

Crops started off with the best prospects of many years, not only in weather but in the amount of labor available for the farmers. Bumper crops the last few years have been produced with a minimum of labor and could have been much greater with proper handling. This year there are millions of men looking for employment, and it is presumed that they will not refuse to work on the farms.

Given good weather, all records should be broken in every department of agriculture. The last few days there has been a frost scare, and it has done material damage but the season is still young enough to make up all the loss.

Cotton has touched new low record prices the last week.

The stock market has been very erratic the past week. The reasons, however, were disclosed in the collapse of two [illegible] of a broker who covered his short contracts in Steel and Union Pacific with a pistol. It developed that several very large and apparently reputable firms have sold their customers' stocks and have been compelled to buy them back with severe losses.

The fact that these sales made the brokers very anxious to get under cover before exposure came bankers discovered their plight gan buying to force the covering result of this covering, it is believed the technical condition has been very much weakened by elimination of shorts and the building up of a weak long account.

"QUEER" HALVES ARE EASILY BROKEN

Dorchester Flooded With Bad Coins That Fail on the Ringing Test.

It is easier to have a half dollar broken in Dorchester than it is in any other section of the city at the present time.

If you ask a Dorchester merchant to break a half dollar for you he is liable to ask you which way you mean. For besides dividing up the money into coins of smaller denominations there are many coins of the half dollar variety which can be literally broken up into many small pieces.

The district is flooded with counterfeit half dollars. They are perfect in many respects and can readily be passed. The principal defect is in the weight and in the engraving of the stars. But the spurious coins can be readily detected if dropped on a hard sidewalk or thrown against any solid substance. They will break into a number of pieces instead of ringing clear and true like the genuine coins.

Many Dorchester residents have been "stung" with these coins the past week. Arthur F. O'Kane of No. 40 Blakeville street received one in change. A few hours later he offered it for a purchase at the Bowdoin Pharmacy. The clerk dropped the coin on the marble floor of the store. Immediately it broke into a number of small pieces to the surprise of both the clerk and the purchaser.

Walter H. Lane of Richfield street had a similar experience. He offered a coin in a street car, was surprised to be told that it was a counterfeit. Dropping it on the sidewalk later to find out whether or not it rang true, the coin was found to be broken into a number of small pieces.

George C. Sanford of No. 200 Bowdoin street has refused a number of the counterfeits and many other merchants of Meeting House Hill report similar experiences. The secret service agents have been apprised of the existence of the spurious money and a force of inspectors will be sent out to endeavor to trace the source of the queer coin.

BLUE TICKET TO BAR CONVENTION RIOTS

To prevent any more "pink ticket" conventions credentials were issued yesterday for the Democratic State Convention in Faneuil Hall, Thursday, so arranged that no trouble may result from the vouchers entitling the delegates to admission. The credentials this time are blue in color and have a coupon attachment.

It will not be necessary for a waiting line of delegates Thursday next to exchange their credentials for a pink ticket of admission to the convention hall. At the door of Faneuil Hall, Thursday, the delegate will be allowed to retain the coupon attached to his credential. This coupon will entitle him to cast his vote at the convention. Both the credential and coupon is signed in facsimile by Chairman James W. Synan and Secretary Thomas J. Coffey.

Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, on the eve of the convention, the Democratic State Committee will meet in the Quincy House. Details will be perfected for the convention and George Fred Williams will present the resolutions, which he is preparing, to the committee on resolutions. A strong plank, not only endorsing Bryan for the Democratic Presidential nomination, but pledging the Massachusetts delegates-at-large to vote for the Nebraskan in the Denver convention, will be the main feature of the platform which the committee on resolutions will present to Thursday's gathering.

FORD ACQUITTED OF BRIBERY IN FRISCO

San Francisco, Cal., May 2.—Tirey L. Ford, chief counsel for the United Railways, to-day was acquitted of the charge of bribery in connection with the passage of overhead trolley franchises. The jury was out only six minutes. This is the third time the case has been tried.

CONDEMNED SLAYER SHOT IN JAIL BREAK.

Wheeling, W. Va., May 2.—Jesse Briggs, a prisoner in the State Penitentiary at Moundsville, condemned to be hanged for murder, was shot and killed by Captain James W. Dawson, acting warden. Briggs had escaped from his cell and thrown stones at the guards that tried to catch him.

POLICE HUNTING KING AS FUGITIVE

The thousands of New England investors who intrusted their money to Cardenio F. King, the missing financial agent, were keenly interested in a proclamation scattered broadcast by Police Superintendent Pierce of this city yesterday that King is officially "Wanted" by the Boston authorities. Accompanying the circulars sent out by Superintendent Pierce was an excellent picture of King, wearing one of his luxurious fur-trimmed overcoats. These circulars have been sent all over the civilized world.

Though a warrant for King was issued some weeks ago, charging him with larceny of $25,338 in thirty-one counts, this is the first time that his picture has been published as that of a fugitive from justice.

The circular describes King in detail, says he is wanted for larceny, that he received money to buy stocks which he failed to buy, and that if he is seen anywhere he is to be arrested and the Boston police notified.

The office furniture in the luxurious business suite maintained by King was sold at auction yesterday. It brought about $1,500, many articles going at bargain prices.

DODGERS PUT A CRIMP IN DOVES' WINNING STREAK

Featureless Game Goes to Visitors 2 to 1, Both Pitchers Doing Good Work.

BY. A. H. C. MITCHELL.

There were no bright buttons on yesterday's game at the South End Grounds and Brooklyn walked away with it 2 to 1. It was really a light-hitting contest although the two teams knocked out 15 safeties between them.

If there [illegible] to enthuse about it [illegible] Sev[illegible] [illegible] any [illegible] away [illegible] against the right field fence where it stuck, instead of bouncing off as Browne expected it would do.

Old Boss Kelley set Little Cy Young back at the Dodgers in spite of the fact that he was knocked out of the box in the first inning on Friday. Little Cy did well, but the visitors earned a run off him in the first inning and his wildness cost the wining tally in the sixth. On the other hand the Southpaw drove in the only run made by the Doves.

Wilhelm, the old Boston pitcher, looked easy, but the locals could do little with him. Of the six hits made off his delivery only two were bunched in one round. Kelley's men had [illegible] but two players were thrown out at the plate.

Dodgers Get Excited.

The Brooklyns got excited in the last half of the ninth, as they were afraid the locals would make one of those Garrison finishes, but their fears were groundless, as the home talent went out in one two three order.

Pattee struck out in the first inning, but Sheehan came along with a safe liner to centre and stole second cleanly. Lumley, the slugger, struck out, and then Jordan hit a hot one which glanced off Kelley's chest and rolled to the fence, while Sheehan scored.

Boston had a chance to tie in the last half. Browne lined to Lumley. Beaumont cracked a single to centre, but was forced by Bates. Johnny stole second and moved to third on [illegible] drew a pass and attempted to steal, but the ball was relayed back to Lewis and Johnny was nipped at the plate.

It was [illegible] the second [illegible]

Wilhelm led off with a scratch hit in the third and Pattee sacrificed him to second, but he was left [illegible] the next two men were easy. In Boston's half [illegible] Young struck out [illegible] third strike and [illegible] allowing Little Cy to reach first. Two force-outs put an end to the inning.

In the fourth Hummel singled, with two down and then [illegible] out on pop flies. Bates led off with a single in Boston's half, but Kelley hit into a double play, while Ritchey flied to Maloney.

Young's Single Scores a Run.

With one down in the fifth, Wilhelm singled and took second on Pattee's out at first. Sheehan walked but Lumley was easy for [illegible] its only [illegible] base on balls, Sweeney [illegible] Bowerman's out [illegible]

Jordan was [illegible] Hummel. A pass [illegible] second [illegible] to centre [illegible]

The Doves had another good chance in the last half [illegible] single and [illegible] Kelley [illegible] Beaumont [illegible] straight [illegible]

In the ninth [illegible] fanned and Pattee singled. Sheehan flied to Bates and Lumley forced to Kelley. Boston went out in order. Score:

GAMES YESTERDAY.

Brooklyn, 2; Boston, 1.
Philadelphia, 2; New York, 1.
Chicago, 3; St. Louis, 2.
Pittsburg-Cincinnati, wet grounds.

Notes of the Game.

Chubby Charlie Pruiett of the Red Sox with his crutches was a spectator. His foot is in bad shape and he will not be able to pitch for quite a while.

Frank Donahue, the little infielder the Red Sox had with them on the Southern trip, was able to leave the hospital yesterday and went to Providence on an afternoon train to join Duffy's team.

If that grounder from Jordan's bat hadn't taken a bad bound when it reached Kelley, the Dodgers would not have [illegible] in the first inning.

CUBS, 3; CARDINALS, 2.

Special to the Sunday American.

Chicago, May 2.—The World's Champion Cubs to-day defeated the St. Louis Cardinals by the score of 3 to 2 in a desperate pitchers' battle between Overall of the Cubs and Lush of St. Louis. Overall allowed but two hits and fanned seven men. The world's champs secured four hits off Lush, the southpaw.

Murray, the St. Louis outfielder, came near breaking up the game before it was fairly under way. He was the third man up in the first inning and smashed the ball to the right field bleachers for a home run, sending in one runner ahead of him.

The St. Louis team was subjected to a shaking up before the game. O'Rourke, who has been playing short, was taken [illegible] and Farry was pulled to [illegible] right garden. Score:

WILLIAMS TAKES AMHERST IN CAMP

Amherst, May 2.—Amherst was beaten by Williams [illegible] being 6 to 4. The game was marked by sharp fielding on both sides and the hitting of Williams, whose only poor judgment was shown trying to steal second.

Things looked [illegible] for Amherst with her one run in the first [illegible] in the third Templeton's two-bagger brought in Lamble, Wadsworth's [illegible] other with Danahey's error brought in Templeton and Wadsworth. Amherst succeeded in getting two more runs in the third and [illegible] the sixth started things going for Williams and a hit by [illegible] with another passed ball by Danahey saw three men safely over the plate.

Amherst succeeded in getting one more run in this inning, and although she pulled herself together and while the rooters were yelling themselves [illegible] in the face had a hard fight to score in the last two innings, the fielding of Williams kept them from scoring. The score:

DORCHESTER LOST AT WAKEFIELD

Wakefield, May 2.—The Wakefield semi-professional team gave the Dorchester [illegible] a bumping on the Railroad street grounds to-day by a score of 5 to 2. The home team fell on Crowley in the third inning and before the Dorchester twirler could catch his breath four runs had been scored and the game iced. Again in the fifth a couple of bumps were passed out and another run registered.

Dorchester played a fast game but could not connect with Maloney when hits meant runs. The score:

HAIR-RAISING VICTORY OPENS THE LAWRENCE SEASON

First New England League Games Also Played in Lowell, Fall River and New Bedford.

Lawrence, May 2.—The New England League season opened here to-day with Haverhill as the attraction, and one of the best games ever seen here resulted in a victory for Lawrence in a hair-raising finish by a score of 3 to 2.

The threatening weather kept the attendance down to 1887. Several hundred from Haverhill attended and rooted hard for the losers. Fullerton pitched a good game for Haverhill, but his ascension in the ninth was fatal, when four hits scored the necessary runs to win.

Flynn's sensational work saved the day for the home team. Whiting pitched in fine form, getting out of several tight places. E. S. Robinson, a stockholder in the Brooklyn team, threw the first ball over the plate. All Lawrence's runs were batted in by Cummings, the latter working a nice hit in the last inning with the bases full and one out. Score:

Lowell, May 2.—Lynn made it two straight from Lowell this afternoon by superior work in all departments. This was the opening game of the season in Lowell and it afforded very little encouragement to the Lowell fans, for the Lynn players didn't even give opportunity for an argument. O'Toole allowed only three hits, while Greenwell was touched up for eleven, with a total of nineteen. Gulhern and Miller made home runs. For Lowell, Howard was the star in field and at bat. The game was interrupted for fifteen minutes by a thunder shower. Score:

FALL RIVER'S GREAT DAY.

Special to the Sunday American.

Fall River, May 2.—Fall River won easily the first league game in this city this afternoon, beating Worcester 8 to 3. Mayor John T. Coughlin opened the game with a speech and pitched the first ball. The teams paraded, headed by St. Mary's band. The game was an interesting one. Sylvester's batting was a feature and Soisbras played a great game at first. Messenger made good with the crowd with a three bagger with two men on bases, which put the home team in the lead. Umpire Stockdale put Bradley of Worcester out of the game for kicking. Score:

NEW BEDFORD WEAKENS.

Special to the Sunday American.

New Bedford, May 2.—After having the game practically won, with the score 6 to 4 in their favor, New Bedford handed the game to Brockton in the eighth on errors. Delane weakened in this inning, but glaring errors by Miller and Hanifan, coupled with some good hitting, netted Brockton four runs. New Bedford had a great chance to win out in the eighth, but after scoring one run, a fast double play cut them off. The feature was the fine hitting of Adler. Waters was put out of the game in the sixth for abusive talk to the umpire. Score:

HARVARD BEATEN IN A CLOSE GAME

Special to the Sunday American.

Worcester, Mass., May 2.—Holy Cross defeated Harvard here to-day, in a very interesting contest 3 to 2. Harvard made a game fight for the win in the ninth, but could not secure the necessary run to tie. In the second, with Mansfield on second, Kemble made a circus catch of O'Rourke's hit, retiring the side. Harvard reached third in their half, but got no further.

Holy Cross started the scoring in the third. Shay led off with a single, was sacrificed to second, and scored on Barry's single. Carney fanned, Larkin singled and Barry scored as Larkin went to second. Mansfield flied to centre. In Harvard's half Lanigan singled but was doubled up on Carney's great catch of Harvey's screeching liner.

Check Run for Holy Cross.

In the fifth Shay reached first on Simons's error, went to second on Briggs' miss of a throw from Hicks, to third on a wild pitch and scored on Cashen's single to left.

Harvard scored in the sixth when McCall was hit by a pitched ball. Hartford, running for McCall, was sacrificed to second by Briggs and he scored on Harvey's single to centre. Simons ended the inning by a fly to Cashen.

Hicks fanned the Holy Cross side in the sixth. In Harvard's seventh, Hicks hit a hard drive which caromed from O'Rourke's foot to Barry, who shot it to first for an out. In Holy Cross' half of the eighth Larkin got a scratch single but was doubled up at first when Lanigan pulled down Mansfield's slashing drive to left and threw to Briggs.

Harvard Gets Dangerous.

Harvard started the ninth in game fashion and for a time things were very interesting. Harvey and Simons singled in succession. Dowd fielded Currier's bunt to first, but Carney couldn't get the ball to the plate before Harvey scored. Harvard's hopes were raised when Leonard was sent to bat for Kemble, but the hopes soon faded when Dowd fanned the Harvard captain. Pounds then went to bat for Dana, but a weak fly to Shay was the best he could do, and the game was over.

The game began in a shower of rain, but the weather soon cleared and the grounds were in excellent shape. The Worcester brass band entertained the spectators. Score:

RED SOX ERRORS GIVE ATHLETICS ANOTHER GAME

Winter Pitches Good Ball But His Mates Fail to Back Him Up in Proper Style.

Philadelphia, May 2.—In a most remarkable game here this afternoon the Boston Red Sox were shut out by the Athletics 2 to 0 before 9530 people. Three times was the game started and as many times interrupted owing to rain only to be started over again.

Jimmy Dygert was put in the box by Connie Mack to pitch against Winter. Manager McGuire realized that he was [illegible] against [illegible] Saturday crowd and [illegible] take any chances. The selection of pitchers proved to be an exceptionally pleasing one as the game proved to be a pitchers' battle all the way through.

Three hits were all the Boston batsmen could get off the little spit ball artist of this city, McConnell getting two of these and Carrigan the other.

Red Sox Errors Fatal.

It was a hard game for Winter to lose as the two runs scored by the Athletics were made in the third inning without a single hit. Three errors and a base on balls causing the trouble. In only four innings did Boston have any men left on bases and even then in no condition, time or place to score.

The Athletics did all the scoring in the third inning. Moran, who played right field for the White Elephants in place of Coombs was the first man up. He was safe on a hard chance to Wagner, the ball bounding up and hitting the Boston short stop in the chest. Dygert sacrificed and matters were made worse when Hartsel walked. On a fielders choice of Nicholls grounder Winter himself threw wild to head off Hartsel and McHale fumbled the ball in centre field allowing Moran and the fleet footed Hartsel to score. On another fielders choice of Collins grounder, Nicholls was nailed at the plate, thanks to a quick throw by Unglaub to Carrigan. McConnell fortunately ended the session by making a neat catch of a fly from Davis. It was truly a disasterous inning and the one which cost the Bostonians the game.

One hit in the fifth, two in the sixth, one in the seventh and another in the eighth were all killed off by some great fielding on the part of the visitors.

Murphy Made Double Play.

The nearest chances the Bostonians had to scoring were in the third, sixth and ninth. In the third inning a double play handled by Murphy—unassisted prevented further action. In the sixth, with two on bases, Dygert struck out the third man, the same thing occurring in the ninth.

In all nine Bostonians fell victims to Dygert's sponge ball. The day was perfect at the start of the game. Rain began to fall just after the Athletics had scored their two runs in the third inning. After about ten minutes interval play was continued, only to be stopped again with one out in the fourth. The last part of the game was played under a rainbow, sunshine taking the place of the shower. The score:

STAKE RACE ENDS IN A DEAD HEAT

Special to the Sunday American.

Jamaica Race Track, N. Y., May 2.—The Elmhurst stakes, over the five furlong course, in which some of the best two year olds shown so far this season went to the post, resulted in a dead heat between Fitzherbert and Trance—the first of the Eastern racing season. The purse was divided, as were all bets on the race. It was the most thrilling race of the year and the crowd in the grandstand were in a frenzy of excitement, cheering for their respective favorites.

Incidentally the time of the race, one minute flat, is a new track record. The previous record was 1:00 1-5, made by Tiro last year.

Musgrave, who rode Trance, made a claim of foul and exhibited his injured leg as a proof of interference. Musgrave was pinched off by Schilling on Fitzherbert at the head of the stretch, and it was on this that he based his claim. The Stewards, however, refused to allow it. Summary:

THRILLING UPSET SHOCKS CROWDS ON THE SPEEDWAY

BY ED. COGSWELL.

Thousands of persons lining the Franklin Field speedway yesterday afternoon while the Dorchester Driving Club matinee was in progress were shocked when the pacing mare Hazel D., 2:19¼, owned and driven by M. F. Maher, a leading Boston business man, tripped in her hopples when at full speed half way down the course and threw Mr. Maher high in the air and herself head first into the dirt.

So certain were all that Mr. Maher, who appeared to be pinned beneath his mare, was severely injured, that women screamed and men rushed to the spot. Soon the mare jumped to her feet, tangled herself in the hopples, fell once more, then again, and finally ran at top speed off the speedway. It was hours later when she was found in Milton, fully six miles from the accident. Mr. Maher escaped with his face scratched quite a little. The road cart was a wreck and the harness in ribbons, but Hazel D. was little the worse for her experience.

It was a general idea among spectators and horsemen that there should be a park rule passed forbidding hoppled pacers from the speedway. Should not this be done then the Dorchester Driving Club, in the interests of fair sport with danger lacking, ought to make it compulsory that all trotters and pacers race without the straps. Unless this is done it is only a question of time before there is an accident that may work great injury to speedway racing.

Miss Reggin in Seven Heats.

Not before in the history of the sport at Franklin Field has there been a more exciting race than the one yesterday between Miss Reggin, 2:14¼, Miss Ormond, 2:10¾, and Captain Hall, 2:20¼. It required seven of the toughest kind of heats before Miss Reggin captured the blue ribbon.

It was the victor's initial apearance on the course, and so much had been related about the gray mare that the crowd was immensely interested to see how she would perform.

She took the first couple of heats like the race was only play for her, but then S. Walter Wales, who had given up the starter's place to drive, succeeded in getting Miss Ormond to the front two trips. This made her look good, but A. S. Gushee was not to be denied with the veteran Captain Hall. In the stiffest kind of a drive he landed first to the wire, and then repeated the trick in the sixth. It was nip and tuck all the way in the seventh, but Miss Reggin just dropped in by a neck.

Axtelloid Is a Champion.

A new trotting champion showed up in Axtelloid, 2:15¼, which J. I. Brooks had pitted against Robert T. H. B. Ralston was elected to drive the former. He lost the opening heat by making a break, but the three following were taken with something to spare at the finish. His third heat in 31 seconds is the best time made by a trotter over the speedway since the racing has been the right of way of the course.

Percy Blaney had Mutineer in the shape of his life, getting the decision over Billy Bashford, and pacing his winning heats right in 31 seconds. Frew Bellows wore a string of smiles when his race with Helgamite was concluded, as the three magic ones were opposite to her name.

An attempt to beat 29½ seconds by B. S. Dillon, 2:14¼, proved too much for the pacing champion. Fred Eldredge gave him three trials, but the further he went the slower the time was. From conversation heard he is liable to have company in his future races in place of being compelled to tackle Father Time. Summary:

BY DYKE CLARK.

Worcester Academy won the annual outdoor interscholastic track championship in the Stadium yesterday, defeating Andover by one point in one of the most exciting competitions for the big trophy in years.

It was not until the last event, which was the hammer throw, that the Worcester boys could claim victory, as Andover was tied with them with 27 points each.

Worcester had one entry in the hammer throw and he was good enough to get the one point needed to decide the meet.

Three schools Exeter, Volkmanns and Providence Tech had a hot struggle for third position, with only one point separating each, and they finally finished in that order.

Two records were broken and one equalled in the athletic strife. E. E. Nelson won the 100 yard dash in 9 4-5 seconds, but as he had the wind at his back and it was a stiff breeze the new mark will probably not be allowed. The pole vault record was broken by R. H. Gardener.

He won the event and then in an exhibition vaulted 11 feet ¾ of an inch. Nelson eqralled the record of 21 8-5 seconds for the furlong dash, held by Bill Schick, Harvard's once great sprinter.

Worcester a Dark Horse.

The win of Worcester was somewhat of a surprise, as Andover and Exeter were supposed to make the big fight, but the New Hampshire boys failed to get in the running to any great extent.

Providence Tech made a very fine showing for a small school, winning thirteen points through the aid of a small entry list.

The sensational finish of the day came in the half mile run, when the three winners went over the line in a row. Warner of Worcester Academy started out in the lead and got a comfortable margin when the stretch loomed up. It was then that Captain Knox of Andover and Jones the Exeter crack, came out and challenged him. It was a hair raising brush going to the line, with Warner on the pole, who was just able to hold his advantage by inches as the other pair dashed by the judges almost on equal terms, but Warner got the decision by fractions of an inch.

The two stars who collected the most number of points individually were E. E. Nelson of Volkmann's and Bartlett of Worcester Academy. Both got ten apiece, the former two-thirds of his school's total.

But Barstlett did the greatest service for his school when he won the necessary points in the last event, thereby defeating Andover, who a year ago ran away with the meet.

There were close finishes in the field events, several ties resulting, which were decided by tossing or competing over

Tie in Pole Vault.

There was a tie in the pole vault between Holmes of Exeter and Finnessy of Andover. They jumped off as such rivals were not satisfied to chance it to a coin, and the Andover boy won out.

The high jump provided some more close fighting. Wheeler of Powder Point and Bartlett of Worcester were tied for first, and tossed, Wheeler winning, but the points were divided as in the other cases. Three were tied for third place, Chandler and Hann of Brookline and Chadbourne of Portland high, and they tossed, the Portland boy getting the medal.

Exeter was prevented getting points in the 220-yard hurdles by Radford falling on the last hurdle, and Estabrook of Volkmann's, who was third at half-way over the course, came strong and won. The summaries:

VERMONT WINS ON DARTMOUTH ERRORS

Captain Glaze's Boys Do All Right Until the Sixth Inning, Then They Go Up.

Hanover, N. H., May 2.—With a crowd of rooters three hundred strong and accompanied by the University band, the Vermont baseball team defeated Dartmouth by the score of three to nothing. Collins and Glaze the former having a little the best of it still if it had not been for an error on the part of Brady of Dartmouth the nine innings would have resulted in a tie.

The game went to no score until the sixth when with two men down Collinson singled and stole second. He was advanced to third on Glaze's wild pitch, Glaze then walked Gardner, Burrington hit to Hobart who made a pretty stop and threw to Brady who dropped the ball scoring Collison. A single by Collins tallied Gardner and Burrington. This ended the scoring for the day. The score:

DORCHESTER HIGH WON CLOSE GAME

Wakefield, May 2.—Dorchester High took a hard fought game from the Wakefield High team to-day by a score of 2 to 1. The game was won in the ninth inning when Buxon, the Wakefield catcher, let a fast out-shoot slip by him, allowing Connolly to score from third with the winning run.

The game was a pitchers' battle with Harrington having a shade the better of the argument. Fast fielding by both teams kept the score down. The score:

New Haven, May 2.—Yale lost to the University of Pennsylvania to-day, 3 to 2, in the first game of the season between nines representing the big four universities of the East. Parsons's poor pitching and fielding directly cost the game. In the first inning he passed Thayer and Londrigan's triple and Spring's single scored two. In the eighth Thayer singled, stole and raced home when Parsons threw wildly to third on his single, his steal followed by errors by Pauxtis and Simpson. Philbin's home run in the eighth yielded Yale's second run. The score:

TECH MEN SMOTHER MAINE TEAM IN DUAL MEET

Technology's track team walked away with the University of Maine in a dual meet at Technology Field, yesterday afternoon, winning from the Orono boys by a score of 87½ to 38½. The Technology team went into the meet crippled by the loss of some of its best men, and the overwhelming score reflects great credit on Coach Frank M. Kanaly. After the first few events the outcome was not in doubt, but each event saw excellent individual performances.

The winning of the half mile by B. L. Gimson of Tech was the feature. Two Maine men, Fortier and Bean, led up to the last hundred yards, with Gimson 30 yards behind. At the turn into the stretch Gimson hit up a terrific sprint and placed himself even with the leaders a few yards from the finish. In the last few strides he nosed ahead for first place, the three men crossing the tape almost abreast.

Gimson in Critical Condition.

Gimson was in a critical physicial condition after the finish, as he got up from a sick bed to run the race an hour before the meet, against the advice of his friends.

F. D. Knight of Maine captured both hurdle events, closely followed over the barriers by his team mate, N. E. Smith. Knight was the highest individual point winner of the day, adding ten to the score of his team. W. Morrison of Tech gave his side nine point, and won his "T."

Another spectacular race was the mile run, in which L. O. Mills of Tech got first place over a field of stars. He held last place up to the three-quarter mark, when he began to close up and fought out first place with Hicks of Maine, breaking the tape with a good lead over the latter.

Pole Vault Goes by Default.

The pole vault went to Tech by default. The two-mile was a walkover for the local team, which captured all three places. In the quarter, Blackburn of Tech made the fast time of fifty-three seconds, nearly equaling the track record.

The 220 yards was the closest event of the day. It appeared to the bystanders that Salisbury of Tech had won the race by a margin, but it was judged that his team mate, C. W. Gram, had first. Pond of Maine was a close third.

By the showing made against Maine, the Tech team should stand a good chance against Brown next Saturday.

ROGER WOLCOTT WON.

In a one-sided game at Franklin Field yesterday the Roger Walcotts of Dorchester defeated the crack Fairmount A. A. of Hyde Park, last year's champions of Norfolk county, by the score of 15 to 1. Taylor of Hyde Park H. S. twirled the first three innings for the losers and for a short time pitched good ball. Consecutive hits by the whole Roger Wolcott nine in the third drove him from the box and McFernan replaced him. Nelson connected for four safe hits, his batting being a feature. Perry pitched great ball throughout and but six scattered hits did his opponents get. The features of the game was the whole batting of the Roger Wolcott team and the playing of McFernan, and Broders, who at present is leading the contest being carried on by the Boston American. Lilley, son of the "Submarine boat scandal congressional investigation," won the 100-yard dash in the time of 10 1-5 seconds. In the pole vault, Nelson, a sophomore, and Gilbert cleared the bar at 12 feet 3 inches, which is close to world's figures. In the half-mile run Max Kirjasoff, a sleeper, came through a fierce field and won in the fast time of 2 minutes 1 second. Summary:

SOMERVILLE HIGH BEATS RINDGE

Losing Tea mTies Score in Ninth and Creates a Scare.

Somerville High won its first interscholastic championship diamond battle yesterday, beating Rindge Manuel in an exciting contest on the Broadway Grounds by the score of 9 to 8.

The home team nearly lost the victory in the latter innings, as the whole combination had a flight in the air, but they came down to earth in time and beat their Cambridge rivals.

The trouble came in the eighth inning, when Rindge drew a couple of runs and Mixer, who had been pitching good ball, had a nervous spell and Pike was substituted. Then in the ninth Rindge got busy as Somerville got decidedly unsteady, and Pitcher Pike was in a bad way. As a result Rindge got four runs and tied the score.

Somerville went in to win in its half of the ninth, and on a hit by Wiley got the lead and the decision. The score:

Somerville H. ...... 0 1 2 0 0 3 2 0 1—9
Rindge Manual.... 1 0 1 0 0 0 0 2 4—8

BAY STATE A. A. WILL HOLD RACES ON MAY 30

Interesting List of Events Arranged and Noted Drivers Will Compete.

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Boston is to enjoy her annual motor tournament on Memorial Day next.

The race committee of the Bay State Automobile Association has not only determined to hold a race, but has already gone ahead with the arrangements for the same in a manner which is demonstrative of success and the production of racing that will appeal to those who enjoy that branch of motoring.

This committee, consisting of Harry W. Knights, Charles E. Fay and John L. Snow, has scheduled six motor vehicles and two motor-cycle events, the latter for the first time being held in conjunction with the races of this association.

Readville has, of course, been selected as the theatre of action, and the committee feels satisfied that it will be enabled to present to the public some of the best and closest of stock car competition as well as a few match races, in at least one of which there should be a likelihood of a reduction in the track record, if not the world's competitive record.

Noted Cars May Race.

Negotiations are now pending for the apeparance here of at least two cars that competed in the recent Briarcliffe. Neither are among the first three prize winners, but their work in the Briarcliffe was such as to demonstrate that they were most evenly matched as to horsepower and actual performance.

The regular scheduled events are, with the exception of one, all for stock cars, that one being a twenty-mile stripped stock chassis in which all gasolene cars, irrespective of horsepower, are eligible for competition. The list of events is:

Twenty miles stripped chassis race.

Five-mile open to single cylinder motorcycles.

Five-mile open to all motorcycles.

There is a great deal of interest being manifested in the several events, and judging from what one hears along the motor rialto more than one couple will be found fighting the good fight on the race track that day. The American is just waiting for a chance to even things up with the Peerless, and it will be most surprising if the two cars do not come together in at least one of the events scheduled.

The handicap race is the first of its character to be attempted on the local track, and from what has been experienced in other cities it should prove to be one of the most interesting and closely contested of the lot. The handicapping of the cars will be done on the basis of what they may show in the other events, and with time reduced to distance some close handicapping should be possible.

Motorcycle Events.

The two motorcycle events will draw a field of riders, as both of the local clubs seem to be interested in the same, and will have representatives in the events.

The entry blanks and other data will be published and circulated during the coming week, when the committee anticipates making some definite announcement of particular interest to all.

S. L. Haynes of Springfield, one of the most prominent motorists of this State, has accepted an invitation to act as the referee, while the board of judges will consist of men who have ever been prominent in motoring affairs.

The latest edict from the office of the racing board is to the effect that a Vanderbilt Cup race will be held in the Fall. Chairman Thompson of the board recently made a positive statement to that effect. This is decidedly interesting, as it means that American manufacturers may continue their work to produce racing machines that may cope successfully with the foreign product, without fear of being left high and dry without a race. The course on which the contest shall be driven has not yet been selected, there being three candidates in the field, namely, Connecticut, Savannah and St. Louis.

It is generally believed that because of the distance from New York of St. Louis the choice of a Vanderbilt circuit rests between Georgia and Connecticut. Savannah offers a fast course and thorough military protection. State, county and city officials are united in the effort to obtain the cup contest and if obtained will co-operate with local automobilists to make the event a great success.

Conecticut so far offers nothing, but it is no secret that several members of the Vanderbilt Cup Commission favor a race in that State. The principal reason is because of its proximity to New York city. Another reason is a desire to favor a State that was the first to enact sensible automobile laws. There is said to be some question as to the employment of troops in that State in guarding the course. This is answered by the announcement that a hill-climbing contest at Bridgeport on Memorial Day is to be guarded by a detachment of the coast artillery, and that an international event like the Vanderbilt Cup would certainly fare as well.

Favors Connecticut.

A. L. Riker, a technical member of the cup commission, is particularly interested in the selection of a Connecticut course. He is said to have in view two circuits, one near Bridgeport and the other near Hartford. The latter is said to be the more favorable.

Ten entries are said to be assured for the Vanderbilt Cup race. These include two Thomas, two Locomobile and two Apperson cars. Foreign entires are more uncertain, the difference in eligibility conditions between the Vanderbilt and Grand Prix condition barring cars built for the latter. There may, however, be entries of foreign cars built for the last Vanderbilt race.

BOTH RAMBLERS WON.

Managers V. A. Charles of the local branch of Thomas B. Jeffery & Co., has received word that in the recent Norristown Auto Club endurance run, the Rambler thirty-four and roadster entered, both finished with perfect score.

Importers' Auto Salon Will Leave the Garden

Instead of exhibiting at Madison Square Garden, as they did last Winter, the members of the Importers' Automobile Salon will show their foreign cars next year at the Grand Central Palace show which will be conducted by the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association. The dates for the show are December 31 to January 7.

Arrangements for the exhibition of the foreign cars at the Grand Central Palace show were made yesterday at a meeting of the directors of the Importers' Automobile Salon, Inc., and the representatives of the A. M. C. M. A.

A section of the main floor has been set aside for the importers, who will allot the space to their own members. The cars to be exhibited, numbering eighteen, include the Fiat, Renault, Panhard, Maja, C. G. V., Isotta-Fraschini, Zust, Clement, Hotchkiss, Delaunay-Belleville, Bianchi, Mercedes, DeDietrich, Benz, Itala, Martine, Delahaye and Pilain.

Andre Massenat, president of the Importers' Automobile Salon, Inc., has appointed E. R. Hollander as representative of the association to serve on the A. M. C. M. A. show committee, which consists of H. O. Smith, chairman; S. H. Mora, R. M. Owen, Benjamin Briscoe and Alfred Reeves, general manager.

TIRES LIVE LONGER IF THEY'RE USED

J. D. Anderson, president of the Hartford Rubber Works Company, Hartford, Ct., says that one of the greatest evils the tire manufacturer has to contend with is lack of care of tires and carelessness in driving. One of the greatest enemies of rubber is its non-use.

A tire in use will last longer than one which is "laid up." Most touring cars are put up for the Winter, and while it is true in most cases they are jacked up off the tires, at the same time in most every case oil or some substance which is harmful to rubber comes in contact with it. It dries out and as soon as the Spring comes on and the car is put on the road the inevitable troubles commence.

ROBERTS TO GO ABROAD.

Montague Roberts will handle the American entrant in the New York to Paris race in its finishing days, weeks, or months, as the case may be. Roberts is authority for the statement that he will go to France at once to drive in the Grand Prix Race, and after that event travel via the Trans-Siberian Railroad to the nearest point and there take the Thomas Flyer in hand for the final dash to Paris.

NEW CLEANER FOR AUTO TOPS

There has always been one strong objection in using macintosh material for auto tops and that is the fact that in certain shades it is so easily soiled and so hard to clean, as it is impossible to use gasoline or anything of that nature without destroying the life of the rubber compound. But this objection can be overcome by the use of Ze-Nole, the new fluid cleaner, which can be used freely without any injurious effect upon the rubber compound, and which readily removes all spots occasioned by the dust, rain, or mud, as well as all ordinary grease spots. The new cleaner is manufactured by F. S. Carr.

ENTRY BLANKS FOR TOURS.

Entries for the A. A. A. reliability contest for the Glidden trophy can be made at any time now, giving only the fee, the name of the car and of the entrant. It will not be necessary for entrants to give the names of drivers and observers until the entries close on July 8. Entries are made with Chairman F. B. Hower, No. 760 Main street, Buffalo. Blanks may be had from him, from Arthur Jervis, No. 29 West Forty-second street, New York, or from any of the principal dealers.

W. H. HOTCHKISS MEETS MOTORISTS

President of the A. A. A. Roughly Criticises Reckless Auto Drivers.

President W. H. Hotchkiss of the American Automobile Association had the pleasure yesterday afternoon of meeting representatives of almost every motoring organization in this State, and particularly those affiliated with the Massachusetts State Automobile Association. The president had come from his home city just for the purpose of meeting these gentlemen and saying something anent autos and the work being done by the organization. His remarks were clear, concise and direct to the point, and most interesting.

The speaker said among other things that motorists had to combat the prejudices in the mind of the general public against the motorists, a certain portion of which had arisen from the fact that in the early days motor cars were used almost exclusively by the rich. He depreciated the headless, reckless and desperate drivers, saying that if he had his way such men would be placed behind prison bars.

The sooner that class of operators is made to see the error of its way the better it will be for all owners and users of the motor vehicle, and President Hotchkiss felt that it was the duty of organizations to do their share towards the apprehension and conviction of such drivers. He believed that there should be four principles involved in all automobile laws; first, provisions for absolute identification; second prohibition of reckless driving, third, penalties for violations of the laws; fourth, prohibition on local regulations.

These four principles he felt would cover the ground most thoroughly. He felt that motors should be driven in a manner that the public will not be injured, but it is not the thing for local authorities to say that a car shall not be driven more than so many miles an hour. Such a law as that is now being considered in New York. This law, he said, will place the blame where it belongs, on the man behind the wheel.

Judge Hotchkiss told of the great work that is being accomplished throughout the country by organization, and he felt that Massachusetts is doing her share towards the general success. He felt, however, that the different organizations should take hold of the Federal registration bill and endeavor to bring about the general adoption of a law like the one proposed in New York State. He also referred to the convention to be held in Buffalo on July 7 and 8 and expressed a wish that every club in this State send delegates.

Chairman W. H. Chase of the Good Roads Committee stated that every club in the association has made arrangements to have at least three delegates at the meeting.

Subsequent to the meeting, which was most informal, Lewis R. Speare, who is entertaining Judge Hotchkiss, drove a party over the bridge to inspect the Chelsea ruins.

ERNEST BENSON DESERVED RECENT HIGH PROMOTION

Sales Manager of the Cadillac Co.; and His Friends Say He Will Surely "Make Good."

The elevation of Ernest R. Benson to the position of sales manager of the Cadillac Motor Car Company which occurred on May Day comes in the form of well deserved promotion and is certainly recognition of duty well performed.

Mr. Benson is virtually a Boston boy, and has been interested in motoring and its kindred industries for years. He, like many another, first saw business experience in the early bicycle days, being then connected with the Pope Company. Here he worked hard and faithfully and in a short time received advancement in that line. Some dozen or more years ago he became identified with the Hartford Rubber Works Company, having charge of the Boston branch. His executive and business ability was such as to make the Boston branch the banner house of the big company, and about a year and a half ago he was called to Hartford to assume the important duties of general salesmanager. His work here attracted the attention of motor constructers and a most flattering offer was tendered him by the Cadillac Company some eight months ago.

Since his connection with the Detroit concern he has proven his ability to handle the affairs of the company in a most satisfactory and creditable manner, so much so that upon the retirement of W. E. Metzger, which came on May day, President Faulkner and his fellow officers hesitated not in giving the position of sales manager to Mr. Benson, who, to use a slang phrase, has "made good" in everything he has undertaken.

Those who know Sales Manager Benson are satisfied that there was no mistake in his selection. In his new undertaking he has the best wishes of his host of friends in the East.

Licensed Auto Association Will Be Reorganized

It is said there is to be an entire reorganization of the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers, so far as the payment of Selden patent royalties goes, if the request of the receivers of the Electric Vehicle Company, owners of the patent, to the United States Circuit Court is granted.

The petition of the receivers to the court tells the story. It is in part as follows:

> By the present agreements manufacturers are obligated to pay royalties of 1¼ per cent. upon the catalogue price of vehicles manufactured under the Selden patent, except where such vehicles are exported, on which the royalty is one-quarter of 1 per cent. A reduction of 20 per cent. in the royalties is, by the terms of these agreements, allowed if such payments are made by a certain date in one-quarter prior to the date fixed for their payment. The present agreements also provide that the licenses issued thereunder shall continue for the remainder of the life of the patent, which is a period of about five years, unless a court of appeal shall adjudge the patent to be invalid.
> Prior to the appointment of the receivers, the members of the association had insisted that a modification of the agreements should be made which would result in a substantial reduction of the royalties required to be paid thereunder, and since the appointment of the receivers a large majority of them have refused to make payment on any royalties upon the ground that such were excessive and oppressive. There are now a large amount of royalties in arrears for the quarter ending January 1, 1908, and April 1, 1908. In the hope of avoiding a prolonged and expensive litigation to compel the payment of royalties now in arrears, and those to become due in the future, the receivers believe that it will be to the interest of the creditors and stockholders of the Electric Vehicle Company to modify the existing agreements.

These proposed changes, if made, will reduce the royalties by 20 per cent., with the further limitation that the maximum royalties to be paid in one year shall not exceed $250,000.

"WON'T SLIP" TIRES NOT AFFECTED

The enactment of the latest ordinance of the Metropolitan Park Commissioners regarding tire chains and armored tires has caused considerable action on the part of motor owners during the past week. The chains as a rule have been discarded, while armored tires have become obsolete so far as their use on cars which frequent the thoroughfares and roads under the jurisdiction of the commission. This ruling of the commission does not in any way affect the use of Bailey Won't Slip tires, which tires have become recognized as a sure preventative of side slipping.

NEW WHITE RECORDS.

A new record from San Francisco to Los Angeles has just been set up by a 30-horsepower White steamer, which made the 478-mile trip in 17 hours and 17 minutes, or 56 minutes better than the previous record which had stood for over a year. Ever since automobiles were introduced on the Pacific Coast, the San Francisco-Los Angeles record has engaged activities of ambitious California drivers, as the holding of this record gives a tremendous prestige to the successful car. The road between the two cities is of such a dangerous character and presents so many obstacles to rapid travelling that each year drivers have met with serious mishaps in their attempts to capture this much-coveted record. To those who know the road conditions, the new record made by the White is considered most remarkable.

SCRIBNER'S

Scribner's Magazine for May contains one of the sanest automobile articles ever written. It says, in part:

"The car which will not run 'dead slow' in high gear will not accelerate in high gear except at ordinary road speeds. That means that if its driver slows down for whatever reason, he must drop back into intermediate gear to get up speed again. But changing gears, especially in the older types of cars, requires some skill. It is a mental interruption at best, and in a crisis there is the chance that a false motion may bring disaster. Consequently the average driver of an inflexible car avoids slackening below his effective high-gear speed as much as possible, and comes to regard slow-downs as a nuisance to be avoided.

"The speed craze is a vital fact to be reckoned with; but it has not grown unaided. The inflexible car has from the first been its most powerful abettor.

"The speed craze in the larger sense has probably reached its height to-day, and its decline is impending. Even now there are many symptoms of its passing. One of these is the general demand—irrational enough to the engineer, yet with a strong justification in the psychology of the man who drives—for cars that will do 'stunts' in high gear, notably hill-climbing.

"Another symptom is the popularity of the six-cylinder car. For reasons too technical to be given here a six-cylinder internal combustion motor will run slower, both idle and loaded, and will accelerate better from 'dead slow,' than the four-cylinder motor of like power, other conditions being equal. The 'six,' again, is in perfect mechanical balance, and therefore practically free from vibration, whereas even the smoothest four-cylinder motor's running balance is only approximate, and its passengers are wonted to the vibration, rather than unconscious of it.

"Because of its almost perfect smoothness and flexibility—its appeal to the aesthetic sense, in short—I look to see the 'six' accepted as the high-water mark of excellence for cars of over, say, 24-horse-power, until the time, now indefinitely remote, when the gas or steam turbine is made a success for vehicle propulsion."

Alexander Winton had these same facts in mind when he designed the Six-Teen-Six. And so far has their truth and merit been demonstrated that it has already been decided that the Winton Company will continue to make sixes exclusively for 1908 and 1909.

The Six-Teen-Six is on display at the Winton Branch House,

Boston American's Course of Lessons FOR SALESPEOPLE

Below Are Last Week's Review and Questions
Lessons Appear Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Review of Important Points in Last Week's Lessons

Copyright, 1908, by American Journal-Examiner

Lesson Twenty-eight No salesperson can know his or her stock too well. Keep posted from day to day.

For the one reason of time saved in handling customers it pays to be as familiar with your goods as possible.

There are good reasons for being faithful in little details aside from the service you are rendering your employer—you are developing yourself.

Many a clerk has had his or her real advancement commence with the doing well of a little duty.

Lesson Thirty It is important that a sale be started well. A false start will often spoil a sale.

Do not start in and urge certain goods too hard until you find out about what the purse limit of your customer is.

But do not ask immediately what the customer wants to pay. That often insults them.

CUT OUT THE "LESSONS"

Every Sunday we print a review and self-examination of the lessons which appear during the week. A good plan is to clip the lessons and reviews out and paste them in a scrapbook. You will then have a manual on salesmanship that you could not buy for a good many dollars. It may be worth hundreds to you in increased salary.

QUESTIONS TO ASK YOURSELF

Have I let my knowledge of my stock get away from me through not watching it close enough?

Do I let more alert clerks sell around me?

Have I got into the bad habit of shirking minor details?

Do I realize that this shirking habit is injuring myself more than anyone else?

Do I make an effort to take pains and start my sales right?

Have I lost sales by misjudging the size of my customer's purse?

A Letter and An Answer.

Boston American:

In last Sunday's American I read an article which was headed "A Lesson for Shoppers." I don't think it was strong enough. Half of the shoppers, women I mean, for men are invariably considerate, do not care a particle how much trouble they give the clerk, and in fact seem to delight in making it hard. It has often been said that women show no pity for their own sex and if any doubt this let them go behind the counter and see for themselves.

A WINTER STREET SALESWOMAN.

The Winter Street Saleswoman undoubtedly thinks she has a large grievance against her sex in general. She shows this in her unfavorable comparison with the male shopper. But whether her statement that half of the women customers are heartless will stand the test of analysis is certainly open to debate.

Just to get another opinion the letter was shown to a woman in one of the large stores who was in a selling position for years before taking a situation as an assistant buyer. Even now this same woman is in very intimate touch with customers and sales.

This woman said, "I believe that much depends upon the personality of the salespersons themselves as to whether they find their customers 'hard' or not.

"I think that the writer of the letter, if she really is correct that half of her customers are overbearing and try to make trouble, should look to herself carefully, and I feel that a good deal of the difficulty is with herself.

"In my experience of a good many years I certainly cannot say that half, or even a quarter, of the customers I have had have been inconsiderate. It should be remembered that there is very little sentiment in business and the average customer is looking for the best that her money can buy. It is her money she is spending, and the great middle class of customers have to spend it carefully.

"It is strange, though, that the more overbearing and inconsiderate customers, as a rule, do not come from this great middle class, but from the class who have more money to spend and to whom the mere money's worth of the purchase would seem to be less important. I am sorry to say that there are, undoubtedly, a great many women who are totally without any kind feelings toward the saleswoman who earns her living by waiting upon them. But I am afraid this will always be so.

"However, I feel sure that a great many complaints like those of this letter have a good start in the woman who is complaining. Many salesgirls have a way of antagonizing a customer at the start. I have felt that way myself, often, but have tried to overcome it."

This is a helpful view of the question. The American will be glad to hear from others who may have something worth while to say upon this topic which has so largely to do with the contentment and service rendered by the salespeople in the large stores.

KNIGHTS TO OPEN NEW ROXBURY LODGE

Columbus Order to Get Strong Addition to Membership Next Sunday.

A new council of the Knights of Columbus will be instituted for the Roxbury district next Sunday afternoon and evening, May 10, in Intercolonial Halls on Dudley street, the ceremonies lasting from 1 o'clock in the afternoon until near midnight.

The charter list of fifty for this new council is one of the strongest in quality given to the order in this State for some time and comprises the names of many of the most prominent men in this great section of the city.

More than one-half of the membership is of professional men of high standing, men like John H. Casey, ex-United States district attorney; Michael Farrell, associate justice; Alexander C. Chisholm, the builder; Drs. Thomas F. and William H. Greene, Drs. Timothy J. Murphy, Thomas Hennessey, William T. Holland, Thomas A. Ryan, J. Henry McDade, James Gateley, Richard McCoy, John W. Farren, Joseph A. Farren, Hugh Nawn and Neil McGuinness, contractors, and about twenty lawyers, clothing dealers, iron and steel and cement merchants, clerks and students, provision dealers, real estate men and other leaders in their respective vocations.

ADMIRAL PERMITS SUNDAY BALL GAME

Ignores Appeal of Portsmouth Churchmen to Stop Long Planned Match.

Portsmouth, N. H., May 2.—Regardless of the appeal of the pastor of the Second Christian Church, the Rev. E. H. Macy and other church people of the town of Kittery, Rear Admiral Bicknell, commandant of the Portsmouth Navy Yard, has issued orders to the men on the scout cruiser and the yard marine guard to the effect that the Sunday baseball planned for tomorrow would go on if the weather would permit, and he expects no interference as far as civilian authority is concerned.

The admiral considers that the men of the navy are working hard and long enough during the week and shall be allowed to indulge in any healthy legitimate sport on Sunday as long as he is in charge of the government reservation at this port.

As Portsmouth Navy Yard is open to visitors on Sunday, a large crowd will witness the game, which promises to be most exciting.

PEASANT GIRL IS "HUMAN OSTRICH"

Berlin, May 2.—A "human ostrich" has been discovered at Hischberg, Silesia. Suffering from what was thought a tumor, a peasant girl came to a local doctor, who found, when he operated, that the "tumor" was really a compact mass of hardware, which the girl must have swallowed. The strange diet, which weighed two and a half pounds, consisted of 1,400 one-inch nails, 106 bent pins, 70 needles, seven nail heads and four fragments of glass.

News of the Stores.

At the GILCHRIST CO.'S store interest among the employes centres around the play that the members of the Gilchrist Co. Benefit Association are to produce on the evening of May 21, in Jordan Hall. This is assured a big success by the way the tickets are being sold, and the people that attend will be sure of seeing "When We Were Twenty-One" played by a first-class amateur company.

Miss Margaret Todd, employed in the main office at the Gilchrist Co., returned to her work on Monday morning after an absence of three weeks.

Miss Violet Goodwin is still confined to her home by illness. She is employed in the lace department at Gilchrist Co.'s.

Mr. H. P. Leighton, buyer of shoes at the Gilchrist Co.'s, attended on Tuesday evening the wedding of Mr. F. J. Currier in Lynn.

Mr. G. R. Kaizer of the dress goods department at Gilchrist Co.'s is reported as improving in health. He has been absent from the store for seven weeks.

Mr. John Baker of the silk department at Gilchrist Co.'s, who has been on the sick list, is feeling better, and before long will be back in his department.

Miss Rose McManus of the leather goods department at Gilchrist Co.'s will sail on the "Saxonia" next Tuesday for Ireland. She will be absent about four weeks.

At the HENRY SIEGEL CO. store, the center walls that divided the building and which the workmen have been tearing down for the past few weeks, have been nearly all removed, and thousands of square feet of floor space have been added by this improvement, giving a much more attractive floor space.

The new locations of departments are as follows: The smallwares, notions and dressmakers' supplies are now on the Hayward place side of the main floor, among the dry goods sections; the books and stationery department, which was formerly on the second floor, has been moved down on the main floor, Essex street side, near the elevators; the leather goods are now closer to the Washington street side, opposite the escalator, Essex street side the umbrellas are now in the men's furnishing department, corner of Essex and Washington streets, and the sewing machine department, which was formerly in the basement and then moved to the main floor, has been moved to a location on the third floor with the rugs and upholsteries, where the demonstrators will continue to give free instruction on machine needle work.

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Louise Frechette, of the main office at the Henry Siegel Co., and a prominent young man of Beverly is causing much interest among her many friends.

At the JAMES A. HOUSTON CO.'S store extensive alterations have been in progress in the upholstery section and now this department, under the management of Mr. T. H. Currian, as buyer, occupies the entire fourth floor, main store.

The young ladies of the James A. Houston Company Relief Association have been receiving many congratulations on the successful leap year barn party, which was held last week for the benefit of the association. It was both a success from a financial and social standpoint.

Mr. P. H. Magrane, president of the James A. Houston Company, is enjoying a well-earned vacation at the Virginia Hot Springs, Va.

Preparations are now in progress by the office force of the James A. Houston Company for a shirt waist party, to be given May 25th, at Howe hall, for the benefit of the relief association. As this is the last social affair of the season every endeavor is being made to have this as successful or more so than any other party which has been held. The committee in charge includes: Mr. Charles Wilson, Mr. Fred Mawson, Mr. Walter P. Gilbert, Mr. Charles Todd, Miss Gladys Richardson, Miss Mary Thomson, Miss Eva Briggs.

Miss Clara M. Wilkinson, assistant buyer of coats, has resigned her position and is preparing to take a well-earned vacation at Rock Island, Quebec. Mrs. B. F. Ryan, in behalf of the employes of the coat department, presented Miss Wilkinson with a silver candelabra.

Miss M. E. Tierney, formerly in the costume department of the James A. Houston Company, has been assigned as assistant buyer of skirts.

Arrangements are being made for the baseball team of the James A. Houston Company, under the management of Mr. E. T. Hamilton, and at a meeting held this week it is expected that all matters will be finally settled.

Miss M. E. Tierney has again expressed her willingness to embroider the automobile girl pillow, the proceeds of which will be for the relief association of the James A. Houston Company.

Miss Ella M. Morris, formerly assistant in the fur department, has been appointed assistant in the coat department, to succeed Miss Wilkinson, resigned.

The many friends of Mr. A. H. H. Cotton, floor manager on the fourth floor of the James A. Houston Company, will be pleased to learn of his recovery from a severe attack of malaria.

Miss Lillian Spence, assistant in the neckwear department of the James A. Houston Company, is taking a well-earned vacation of three weeks in the Berkshires.

At the R. H. WHITE CO.'S store the people of Boston and vicinity will have the pleasure Monday and this week of seeing a decidedly novel window display. This consists of a fountain, the water of which is played upon beautiful foulard silks, of all the season's newest colors and effects, without wetting or impairing them in the slightest. The silks are piled up to form a fountain, and it is indeed an attractive showing.

The toilet goods department has now two new members in Miss Mildred King, a newcomer to Boston, and Mrs. H. Joy, formerly with this department, having recently returned.

The special feature in the Furniture Department at the R. H. White Co. this week is a complete bedroom in white enameled furniture, appropriate for this season of the year. Bed, chiffoniere, bureau, enameled chairs daintily upholstered in flowered fabrics, in fact everything complete to the smallest detail. This display is on the fourth floor, rear, near the new fitting rooms.

Mr. Stephen Alta, commonly known as "Professor," entertained a party of fellow-employes at his studio on Tremont street, Thursday evening. Mr. Alta is quite proficient in manipulating the keyboard of the pianoforte, and his guests report having enjoyed the music immensely.

Mr. Peter Cullen has recently launched his new power boat "Highball." She is a very speedy little craft as well as seaworthy, and Mr. Cullen intends to take extensive fishing trips during the coming season. To-day, Mr. George Chase will accompany him to Hull.

On Thursday evening, in the wholesale department, there was a general demonstration of great sadness in bidding farewell to Mr. Arthur Ryan, who severed his connection with the house on that date. Mr. Ryan is now connected with the H. B. Claflin Company, acting as their Maine representative. His associates in the wholesale department presented him with a very handsome travelling bag, in memory of the many happy years spent together.

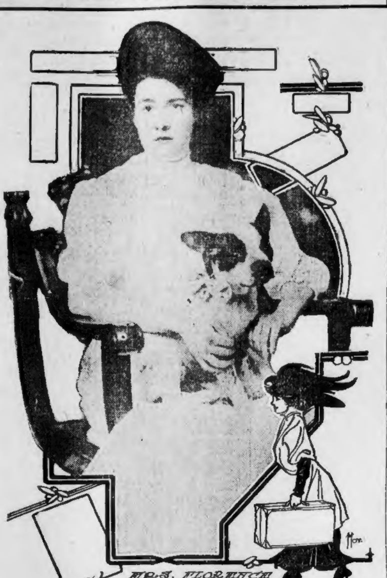
The Shepard Norwell Company fire drill held its annual meeting Friday evening, and has added the following members to its already large department: Messrs. Herbert Mode, silk department; David Lees, white goods; Louis A. Wolfson, men's furnishings, and George J. Rosenthal, white goods section. Mr. James Emlah is captain of the squad.

Mr. Herbert Mode scored a howling success in the minstrel show at the Newtowne Club of Cambridge last Tuesday night. Mr. Mode is a prominent member of this club.

The last fortnight has been of a rather strenuous nature for Mr. James V. Duffy of the contract department. On Patriots' Day he acted as usher at a twentieth-fifth anniversary; then he made a hurried trip to New Hampshire and Vermont, and on his return participated in a golden wedding.

Messrs. MacGregor, Merrill, Duffy and Glass of the contract department had a theatre party Friday night, and report a very enjoyable time.

Secret Wedding Is Revealed When Bride Lost Last Train



MRS. FLORENCE DERDERIAN

TOLD POLICE HIS BRIDE WAS LOST

Groom's Bungle Bares Secret of Elopement of Young Lynn Couple.

An appeal made to the Lynn police to learn the whereabouts of his pretty bride of but two weeks brought to light the secret wedding in Lynn on April 18 of Miss Florence Hobbs, daughter of a former well-known Roxbury orchestra leader, and Krikor Derderian, a Lynn shoeworker, who were married by City Clerk Attwill at City Hall.

The pretty bride left Lynn Thursday, ostensibly to visit friends in Revere and Boston. She went to the home of her brother at No. 81 Zeigler stret, Roxbury, and when it became too late to return to her young husband alone she remained all night.

Fearing that Mrs. Derderian had come to grief or perhaps had ben a victim of foul play, Krikor, who is employed as a vamper at James Phelan's shoe factory, rushed into the Lynn police station two doors below his lodgings and told them his fears. He knew his bride had friends in Gloucester, Roxbury and Revere.

Shop Together Hereafter.

And so while the police were looking for some trace of the missing bride she returned home to find her husband heart broken. Mrs. Derderian got a welcome worth going miles to receive, according to her statement to a Sunday American reporter who saw her. She said:

"I didn't think my husband would ask the police to look for me, because I was not home the same day I went away. I went to Boston Thursday to do some shopping and expected to return home that evening. I went to the home of my brother on Zeigler street, Roxbury, and when I got started for home it was so late they prevailed on me to remain over night. There was no telephone in the house where my husband lived, and I thought he would know I was in good hands and wouldn't worry. Poor fellow, he was so broken up about it that I guess we will go away always together after this.

"It does seem a bit queer, I suppose, to my friends to think I, a bride of but two weeks, should be reported missing to the police. It isn't any joke, either, and had I thought of it more I guess I should have hastened home.

Couldn't Wait Till June.

"Now all of my friends know that I am married. We had kept it a secret pretty well. Not until we had become settled in our Lynn home were we planning to tell all of our friends. Why, my parents don't know I am married. But I am of age, and after all it is my affair. I love my husband. We have been keeping company for about a year now. He wanted me to marry him some time ago, but I asked him to wait till June.

"He seemed to want me in his presence always, and I knew he loved me. So when he suggested we get married the day before Patriots' Day, I said yes."

The groom's parents live in Watertown, where his father is a well known merchant. The bride, who is twenty-five years old, is an accomplished pianist. She formerly played in her father's orchestra. Her parents now live in Charlestown.

AGED FARMER SLAIN BY POISON DRAUGHT

New Hampshire Officials Believe Morphine Killed Luther Critchett in Strafford Resort.

Rochester, N. H., May 2.—That morphine or some other deadly poison was put into the liquor which Luther C. Critchett drank, is declared by Deputy Sheriff Elmer Clarke and other Strafford county officials who are investigating the mysterious death of the seventy-two-year-old man at the hotel conducted by Mrs. Nellie Collis (Burgeron) on Sunday last.

Mrs. Collis, who was arrested after she reported the death of the old man, is still in jail at Dover, having been unable to furnish $600 bail. She will be granted a hearing before Judge McGill on Thursday.

It is now declared that after it was discovered that Critchett had expired, some of the persons who were with him on the ftal night visited his home, a short distance from the resort, about a mile and a half out of Strafford village, and there robbed the house of the valuables in sight.

Robbed of Watch and $200.

When the civil war veteran's body was inspected by the medical referee, there were missing a gold watch and over $200 in cash, besides some valuable papers.

Deputy Clarke to-day examined several parties and ran down three different clues which he believes may solve the mystery of Critchett's fate. It is hinted by the selectmen of Strafford that more arrests may be made shortly.

The authorities would like to question Fred Dickerman, whom the hotel keeper says, she notified at Barrington after she found Critchett was dead. He left home early Tuesday and has not been seen since by his friends.

Believe Details Hidden.

Mrs. Collis, according to the local officers, has differed substantially in her versions of the fatality given the police, and they think she may have feared to tell all she knows of the case, but that she will later reveal the full details of the tragedy.

It is generally believed that the aged man was not robbed of his money and watch until he was unconscious. The theory is that the men whom he brought with him to the house made off with the valuables when he was unconscious. He was probably dead the time of the robbery.

If tramps, or other rough characters accompanied him, they probably gave him an overdose of the drug, without intending to kill him.

Acting on the request of Critchett's relatives, the stomach is to be sent to a Boston chemist for analysis, which is expected to determine conclusively the cause of death.

NEPONSET CITIZENS WANT FIVE-CENT FARE REDUCTION

Ward 24 People Think District Should Have Better Transportation Service.

Neponset residents, aroused over the payment of a single fare of 10 cents to and from Boston on the Old Colony branch of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, intend having their representatives in the city government petition the Railroad Commissioners to compel a reduction of the fare to 5 cents.

Although the road at the present time affords an opportunity to people who live there of riding to and from the city for 5 cents by the purchase of five tickets for 25 cents, outsiders, they allege, are infringed upon and compelled to pay 5 cents extra. This they declare unjust and are urgent in their request for a reduction.

The locality has developed rapidly in the last few years. It takes in part of Dorchester, and is mostly a residential section. Real estate holders see one drawback in further developing the place, and that is the fare on the steam road, which is the most convenient mode of travel, the running time being but eighteen minutes.

Complaint is also heard among the people of the district about the poor car service of the Boston Elevated Railroad Company. Near Neponset bridge is the car barn of the company. The running time into the city is about three-quarters of an hour by the way of Dorchester avenue. At the present time there seems to be a scarcity of cars.

Proper service given by the Elevated road and a reduction of fares on the steam line would mean a boom in real estate.

COUNTY CATHOLIC CLUBS MEET HERE

The Middlesex county branch of the Federation of Catholic Societies will hold its annual convention in the conference room of the Cathedral of the Holy Cross this afternoon, beginning at 3.30 o'clock. About 250 delegates will be present. President W. W. Hadley, of Cambridge, will preside. After the opening address reports will be read, amendments to the constitution will be discussed and officers will be elected. The general committee in charge of the plans for the national convention of the society, which meets in Boston during the Summer, will report. About forty parishes of Middlesex and many societies have become affiliated with the federation during the past year.

Stick-to-Itiveness

Josh Billings once remarked: "My son, observe the postage stamp. Its usefulness depends on its ability to stick to one thing until it gets there." Sound advice. Stick-to-itiveness is one of the secrets of this store's marvellous success. We started in business twenty years ago. Our principal assets then were youth, health, honesty and ambition. Begun with liabilities, too. In common with all young folks, we lacked experience. We've made mistakes, lots of them, mistakes of the head, not of the heart, but such mistakes have only spurred us on to fresh endeavors. Yes we've stuck to it; as a result, today we are recognized as "Boston's Popular Specialty Store"
